Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 7. Yugoslav army circles and government sources preserved an air of calm readiness for all eventualities tonight as a host of rumors swept Belgrade of a German "zero hour" for the Balkans, particularly Bulgaria.

Increasing military activity was reported from the Yugoslav first army zone in the northwest, on the Rumanian and Hungarian frontiers. It still would be inaccurate, according to military sources here, to classify this activity as a mass movement of Yugoslav reservists into the Banat sector.

However, reports from Slovenia and central, south central, and south Serbia indicated that there had been transfers and that at least part of these had been directed during the past fortnight toward first army headquarters at Novi Sad.

The most persistent rumor, entirely lacking confirmation, was that tomorrow is the deadline for the entry of German troops into Bulgaria.

Action Now Doubted

Bucharest, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Military experts believed today that recent German troop movements in the Balkans were in preparation for a drive in the spring rather than immediately, although there were unconfirmed reports that German troops several days ago had entered Bulgaria and seized some mountain passes.

Diplomatic circles apparently gave some credence to the reports of German seizure of the passes, which the Germans still were said to be holding, but military authorities discredited them.

Turkish Aid Pledged

London, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Balkan sources said today that Turkey six weeks ago informed Bulgaria she would enter the war on the side of Britain if German troops occupied Bulgaria and that Germany is aware of the Turkish pledge.

They added that Germany is not yet sure Bulgaria would not resist a German occupation.

These factors were cited in support of a belief that Germany is encouraging the circulation of alarming rumors about the Balkans as part of a war on nerves because large-scale military operations in Europe are not feasible at this time.

The Balkan diplomats professed to believe that Germany plans no immediate move in the Balkans.

Truth Will Out

PRESTO, AND THE SECRET'S OUT!—E. A. Wildy demonstrates lie-detector machine with aid of Erva Kalvig

A pretty blonde "told all" to the United States Secret Service yesterday—and did she blush!

Much against her will, 23-year-old Erva Kalvig, of 1015 N Street Northwest, admitted she was in love and even admitted her age. Miss Kalvig, comely cigar counter attendant at the Willard Hotel, agreed to play "stooge" for a demonstration of the Keeler polygraph (lie-detector) at the Secret Service conference at the hotel. And it wasn't five minutes before she regretted accepting the job.

Calmly the young woman let herself be attached to the polygraph—described as eight times as sensitive as the ordinary, so-called "lie-detector"—while Agent E. A. Wildy prepared to question her.

Miss Kalvig was told to answer "No" to every question. And then the fun began.

"Were you born in June?" Wildy asked.

"No"—and the needle didn't jiggle.

"Have you ever been kissed?"

"No," said Miss Kalvig, blushing a nice crimson. And you should have seen that needle!

"Are you in love?" was the next question.

"No"—and boy!—that needle gyrated wildly.

Changes Sought In Walsh-Healey And Other Laws, Navy Discloses

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

"Extensive" changes in existing law, including relaxation of the Walsh-Healey Labor Standards Act, will be asked by the Navy to speed the lagging defense program.

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, disclosed the forthcoming acceleration plan yesterday before the House Naval Affairs Committee, during an all-day interrogation of reasons for plane production delays.

Admitting that plane deliveries are "materially behind schedule" and that the naval air strength now numbers only 2,590 planes—445 above a year ago—Admiral Towers drew a more optimistic view of the coming year. During 1941, he declared, the fleet expects to receive about 4,000 planes, for a net gain of 3,700.

He told the committee, as it opened an investigation of defense delays, that he was "of course, not satisfied with the situation," was "very impatient" about it. But he added, he believed that "everything that possibly can be done, is being done."

334 Planes This Month

Pressed by members of the committee, however, as to whether there was not something Congress could do to step up production, Admiral Towers disclosed that at a meeting of the Navy high command the night before, it had been decided to seek a number of changes in existing law.

Proposed amendments, he said, included modification of the Walsh-Healey Act, and authorization for the training of enlisted reserve pilots, to meet the need for additional naval fliers. He did not disclose the nature of change proposed in the labor standards act, but declared it had interfered to a "minor extent" in placing contracts.

Most of the trouble, he told newsmen later, has involved small subcontractors who, unused to dealing with the Government, do not like to deal with the complex features of the law.

During four hours of questioning, Admiral Towers revealed the following points about the naval aviation situation:

No Spare Engines

Plane deliveries this month are expected to total 334, compared with 171 in December. Deliveries for the remainder of the year, he estimated as follows: February, 263; March, 299; April, 334; May, 393; June, 372; July, 352, August, 365; September, 365; October, 329; November, 275; December, 299.

Of this total, 1,221 are to fill the

Knudsen Tells Tool Industry To Share Orders 'Darn Quick'

The Government demonstrated its determihation yesterday to accelerate the defense program by drastic measures, if necessary.

A sterner attitude toward business developed suddenly as these three significant steps were taken in the economic sphere:

Defense Production Chief William S. Knudsen warned the Nation's tool manufacturers to forget about "business as usual" and get their job done "darn quick" by sharing their orders with idle plants outside the industry.

Defense Commissioner Leon Henderson, who deals with prices, said "drastic steps looking toward control" of iron and steel scrap prices will be recommended unless the industry institutes an immediate voluntary reduction of several dollars per ton.

Defense Commissioner Harriet Elliott, chief of the consumers division, proposed new legislation establishing rent controls in "certain vital areas" until new housing can be built to eliminate shortages that send rents climbing.

Serious Dispute Revealed

Knudsen spoke to a closed meeting of 150 machine tool manufacturers, representing about 90 per cent of America's tool-producing capacity. It was a special conference at the Carlton Hotel, called by the National Association of Machine Tool Builders, to consider defense production.

His demand for a huge expansion of subcontracting revealed a serious dispute between the industry and the Defense Commission over ways and means of speeding up machine-tool production.

The dispute centers over reluctance of the toolmakers to farm out their orders by subcontracts to factories in other industries containing a vast unused reservoir of machine tools.

They insist that most machine tools outside the industry are unsuitable for defense needs. They propose to expand their own plants to meet the demand and urge the Government to place its orders rapidly so they will know what kind of machines to build.

Knudsen Rejects Idea

Knudsen yesterday rejected this idea by declaring that "the prime need of the moment is to see how much more we can get out of what plants we already have."

"I'm not an excitable man," he said, "but from talking to the people who are running this country I can tell you there's no use of us thinking any more about business as usual. We've got to get this

The Challenge to America

Defense Chiefs Ask Capital And Labor to Make Sacrifices

The following statement was issued yesterday by the four members of the newly created Office of Production Management—William S. Knudsen, director general; Sidney Hillman, associate director general, and Secretaries Stimson and Knox:

THE task which confronts the Office of Production Management is one, not only of critical importance, but also one of surpassing urgency.

The President has said that the United States must become the arsenal of democracy. To create such an arsenal and to establish and maintain production that will insure its efficiency and adequacy require far more than we, who are charged with its management, can provide. We promise all that we have to the fulfillment of this order from our Commander in Chief, but all that we have will be far from sufficient.

We shall have need of the active, aggressive and enthusiastic cooperation of every man, woman and child in the United States if we are to make this arsenal in America adequate to the successful defense of democracy and freedom. This can only mean that in the immediate future everything in our national life must be subordinated to the necessity for defense.

INDUSTRY must subordinate its concern over the possible future effects of tremendous immediate expansion. It must be satisfied with a normal return for new capital required. If there is in industry and management anywhere a subconscious, unexpressed hope for wartime profits, that must be sternly repressed. If there are those who think they can employ this emergency for any selfish advantages, they must dismiss such thoughts. Democracy is fighting for its very life in its struggle to retain the principles of a free economic system.

In any successful defense program the active, intelligent and patriotic cooperation of the men who man the machines is vital. Laws now in effect make secure the principle of collective bargaining and throw about the interests of the workingman adequate protection. Labor must know that under the administration of the Office of Production Management no sacrifices will be asked of it that will not be matched by a corresponding sacrifice on the part of capital, but just as it is intolerable for capital to seek a selfish advantage by reason of the present emergency, so must labor avoid any attempt to make improper use of its position in the present world-wide emergency. The whole principle of collective bargaining and the rights of labor under our system of government and economy is being challenged.

IF the totalitarian forces of the world are victorious, all the hard-won rights of labor will be destroyed and both capital and labor will become the involuntary vassals of an all-powerful state. Labor has as great a stake in this crisis as capital, and both must work together harmoniously if the United States is to make its contribution to a democratic victory in the world.

To achieve the results which the country expects from the Office of Production Management, we expect and must have the kind of cooperation from everybody that counts no sacrifice too great to make if it will contribute to a more successful and a more efficient defense. It is this spirit which we seek to invoke, and it is in a similar spirit that we undertake this great task which the Commander in Chief has committed to our hands.

Manning the Helm

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt formally gave to a four-man high command yesterday full powers to direct America's mighty effort to become an arsenal for her own protection and for defeat of the Axis powers.

Immediately, the Office for Production Management, the key defense directorate, grimly told "every man, woman and child" in the country that "every thing in our national life must be subordinated" to defense.

William S. Knudsen, Danish-born automobile executive, who has been a defense commissioner since May, was named director general of the OPM as the President had announced he would be.

Sidney Hillman, who entered the United States as a Russian immigrant and now is president of the C. I. O. Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union and defense commissioner for labor, becomes associate director general.

The other two members are Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, both Republicans who entered the Cabinet last July.

The four men will formulate defense production policies, and Knudsen and Hillman will carry them out, the President explained at a press conference.

President to Stand Aside

The President said that he himself would have nothing to do with the OPM except when its members wish to consult him on policy. This would happen rarely, he said.

Mr. Roosevelt said that Hillman and Knudsen would act together like partners in a law firm and Mr. Roosevelt rebuffed questions aimed to find out who would be boss of the new agency. The auto expert and the labor leader are in substantial agreement, the President stated.

Powers that have been granted to the supreme defense command are as broad as possibly could be granted, the President asserted.

An executive order that he issued to create the OPM recited the fol-

Greek Fleet Slips Into Bay, Shells Valona

R. A. F. Follows Up Sudden Naval Blow With Heavy Raid

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Jan. 7.—The Greek fleet, for the third time, has penetrated the Adriatic Sea through the 50-mile wide Straits of Otranto despite the heavy Italian air and naval patrol of this channel and not only shelled the Albanian base of Valona, but also bombarded the coast at several more southerly points, thus supporting Greek land efforts to advance in that sector.

At the same time the Royal Air Force bombarded Valona from the air for the twenty-fourth time.

The accomplishment of the Greek fleet, which is tiny in comparison with that of the enemy was related in a communique tonight. It states that on Sunday night and early Monday, a flotilla of destroyers traversed for the third time the Otranto Straits and advanced into the Gulf of Valona.

Here the squadron hove to and let loose a salvo of 60 shells against the port and the island base of Saseno, which had been transformed from a goat pasture into a potent naval fortress by the Italians.

Hardly had the Italians become aware of the attack when the Greeks turned and sailed into the Adriatic retiring to their base at reduced speed. At no time during

Germany Holding Roosevelt Friend As Captive

Berlin, Jan. 7 (AP).—Capt. Charles Davis Morgan, an American citizen who was a Harvard chum of President Roosevelt, is in a German prison camp with little chance of release.

Embassy sources said friends had carried his case to the White House, but under international law he is considered a British soldier because he took part in combat as such.

British Attack Tobruk Forts; Airport Taken

40 Damaged Italian Planes Captured; R. A. F. Pounds Tripoli

By Philip S. Taylor
United Press Staff Writer

Cairo (Wednesday), Jan. 8.—British imperial forces today smashed at the outer defenses of Italy's big Libyan base at Tobruk after capturing the El Adem Airdrome, 15 miles south of the Fascist stronghold.

Carrying their desert offensive farther along the Libyan coast with the aid of Royal Air Force bombing planes, the British land forces sought to take advantage of the capture of Bardia by pressing hard on the heels of the Italians before they can organize new lines.

The British drove upon the outer defenses of Tobruk after capturing or destroying 94,000 Italian soldiers in their smashing drive across the western desert.

British armored units racing ahead more than 50 miles from captured Bardia found that the Italians had evacuated the air base, abandoning 40 planes which had been disabled by a heavy British bombing raid.

The Royal Air Force, apparently striking at will, yesterday and again last night blasted Italian coast bases all the way westward to Tripoli, concentrating on Tobruk to prepare the way for the advancing land forces.

Tobruk, Derna, Martuba and Tripoli all were attacked "successfully," especially Tobruk.

"Widespread fires were caused (at Tobruk), visible 30 miles away, among barracks, stores, sheds and

U.S. Denies Troops Are in Greenland

Reports from London that American troops are occupying Greenland and that American officers have been posted in the town of Ivigtut last night brought quick denial here.

President Roosevelt, asked about the reports at his press conference, said he had never heard of the reported development. State Department sources echoed the President's remark.

France, Spain To Get Food

By the Associated Press

British authorities have agreed to relax the blockade, reliable sources said last night, to permit the American Red Cross to send some condensed milk to unoccupied France and wheat to Spain.

The amount of supplies to be sent was not disclosed, but the Red Cross was reported to have planned to send a shipload of wheat to Spain.

The shipments to unoccupied France, it was understood, would include condensed milk and vitamin products intended to relieve suffering among French children.

British Confiscate Vitamin Pills

Hamilton, Bermuda, Jan. 7 (AP). British officials yesterday confiscated a large quantity of vitamin pills from Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, the designer, who is en route to France.

Mme. Schiaparelli carried 10,000 units of Vitamin A and 3,000 units of Vitamin B, gifts of Americans to the Friends Service Committee in Paris. The officials contended they were food and, as such, contraband.

Bullitt Urges Unstinted Aid

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 7 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, former American Ambassador to France, declared tonight "we know that the surest way to defeat the Axis powers is for us to go to war in support of Great Britain, Greece and China" but that the American people "at this moment" prefer to take the risk of a totalitarian victory "rather than go to war."

To diminish that risk, Bullitt told the International Relations Club of the University of North Carolina, the United States must give those nations "what they need—not what we think we can comfortably spare." He listed "merchant ships, war vessels, airplanes, guns, munitions, steel, wheat—all that we give will be used in defense of our own security."

In his first speech since he resigned from Government service, Bullitt declared:

"We know what the consequences of totalitarian victory would be for us, and we are taking this risk with our eyes open.

"Unquestionably, the people of the United States at this moment prefer to take this risk rather than go to war."

Lend-Lease Bill Draft Rushed

Ten-Billion Ceiling On Plan to Aid Democracies Studied

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The first draft of the President's plan for loan and lease of arms to Britain last night was being whipped into legislative form for consideration by Congressional leaders today.

Pending arrival of the President's $17,000,000,000 budget message today, a possible $10,000,000,000 in additional authorizations as a ceiling on loan-lease aid to warring democracies was being discussed.

Capitol legislative draftsmen, on the basis of Treasury and State Department memoranda, were reducing to bill form the President's generalized proposals preparatory to prompt introduction in the House.

Hearings by the House Foreign Affairs Committee were expected to follow.

Filling of vacancies and organization of House committees for the session is not yet complete, but the

19 Unions Bar Defense Strikes

A.F.L. Building Trades Also Agree to Uniform Initiation Charges

Spokesmen for the 19 unions of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, representing more than 1,500,000 workers, agreed yesterday to "no strikes for any reason whatsoever" on national defense projects in order to speed up the Nation's preparedness program.

In a move unprecedented in the history of the building trades it was agreed at the same time to set maximum initiation fees for the unions, preventing locals from setting exorbitant induction charges.

John P. Coyne, president of the department, said in making the announcement that maximum union fees will be adopted "because of all the newspaper publicity on exorbitant initiation fees."

The maximums for the various unions will be set by their executive

Mrs. Roosevelt Rebukes G. O. P. For Its Attitude

The cool reception given President Roosevelt's speech by the Republican "loyal opposition" in Congress Monday drew a mild rebuke from Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday.

"After all," the First Lady told her press conference, "he (the President) represents the choice of the people . . ." It was no time for the Republicans to express "personal feeling," she said.

Defense Chiefs Are Granted Full Powers

Knudsen and Hillman To Guide Rearming As a Partnership

lowing list of powers delegated to the new board:

Power to "formulate and execute" all measures to speed up arms production and to provide emergency plant facilities. Mr. Roosevelt stressed the words "formulate and execute" when he read the order to a roomful of newspapermen.

Power to coordinate the needs of the Army and Navy and other Government branches with the requirements of "foreign governments," which for the present include Great Britain, China and Greece, and could take in Latin-American neighbors.

May Control Buying

Power to advise regular Government departments on their defense purchasing plans, a power which may in effect mean virtual control of all defense buying.

Power to take "all lawful steps necessary" to assure an adequate supply of raw materials, which may in effect become power to map control of imports and exports, buying stockpiles of raw materials and regulating their prices.

Power to "mobilize" the production facilities of the Nation, which in time may mean power to put into effect some such plan as the C. I. O. has proposed for producing 500 pursuit planes a day by drafting surplues capacity of the auto industry.

Power to "stimulate and plan" creation of more production facilities, such as factories, and to see that existing facilities are used to the full.

Power to set priorities for delivery of materials.

Power to take over what the President called rambunctious factories, if they do not cooperate with national defense.

Power to act as liasion between the old National Defense Advisory Commission and the War and Navy Departments and power to "perform such other functions as the President may from time to time assign or delegate to it."

The OPM will do its work through three subdivisions:

A Division of Production, headed by John Biggers, glass industry executive who has been serving the Defense Commission.

A Division of Purchases, directed by Donald M. Nelson, chair-store executive, who has been in charge of purchasing at the Defense Commission.

A Division of Priorities, headed by Edward R. Stettinius, steel industry chief, who has been defense commissioner in charge of industrial materials.

Also attached to the OPM is a Priorities Board, with Stettinius chairman. Its other members are Leon Henderson, Knudsen, Hillman, Nelson and one additional person not yet named.

The board will recommend priorities orders which will be passed on in the final analysis by the OPM.

Authority Queries Parried

President Roosevelt was closely questioned about the final source of the OPM's authority by reporters who had in mind the recent charges that the defense program was bogging down due to lack of a single responsible administrator.

One questioner asked: "Mr. President why is it that you do not want to appoint a single responsible head for the defense program?"

The President laughingly answered that he had appointed a single head whose name, he said, was Knudsen Hillman. He constantly referred to them as a partnership.

Previously a reported had asked: "Suppose the question of a contract for the Ford Motor Co. came up and Knudsen believed it should get it for the sake of speed and Hillman believed it should not for labor reasons. Who would dominate?"

Mr. Roosevelt's reply was to ask the reporter to suppose that such a case would not arise. Wait until such troubles happen, was the President's advice.

Technically the new OPM was created by executive order within the framework of a letterhead agency called the Office for Emergency Management.

An administrative order issued simultaneously with creation of the OPM assigned a broad list of significant functions to the Emergency Office, which the President created last spring under his reorganization powers.

Of most potential significance was a power given to the Office for Emergency Management to "advise and assist the President in the discharge of extraordinary responsibilities imposed upon him by any emergency arising out of war, the threat of war, imminence of war, flood, drought, or other condition threatening the public peace and safety."

It appeared that this office might become the framework for directing the Nation's life should the United States ever become involved in war.

Completing his remodeling of the defense setup, the President also published yesterday orders that abolished the Office of the Coordination of National Defense Purchasing, created June 27, and the old Priorities Board, created October 18. New agencies of the same type take over their functions within the OPM.

The Defense Commission will continue to function under the new arrangement, Mr. Roosevelt explained.

Harriet Elliott's consumer protection division will continue to watch the interests of the public, Leon Henderson's raw materials division will continue to keep an eye on such matters as the price of copper. Full functions of the Defense Commission are continued, but strictly in an advisory capacity and subordinate to the OPM.

Text of Presidential Order Creating Super Defense Board

4-Man Unit Gets Full Powers to Direct Rearmament Efforts

The executive order issued by President Roosevelt setting up the office of production management follows:

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes, and in order to define further the functions and duties of the Office for Emergency Management with respect to the national emergency as declared by the President to exist on September 8, 1939, and to increase production for the national defense through mobilization of material resources and the industrial facilities of the Nation, it is hereby ordered:

1. There shall be in the Office for Emergency Management of the Executive Office of the President an office of production management which shall consist of (1) a director general and (2) an associate director general, each to be appointed by the President; (3) the Secretary of War, and (4) the Secretary of the Navy. The members shall serve as such without compensation but shall be entitled to actual and necessary subsistence and other expenses incidental to the performance of their duties.

2. With such advice and assistance as it may require from other departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and subject to such regulations or directions as the President may from time to time prescribe, and subject further to the general policy that the Departments of War and Navy and other departments and agencies of the Government will be utilized to the maximum extent compatible with efficiency, the office of production management shall:

a. Formulate and execute in the public interest all measures needful and appropriate in order (1) to increase, accelerate and regulate the production and supply of materials, articles and equipment and the provision of emergency plant facilities and services required for the national defense and (2) to insure effective coordination of those activities of the several departments, corporations and other agencies of the Government which are directly concerned therewith.

b. Survey, analyze and summarize for purposes of cordination the stated requirements of the War and Navy and other departments and agencies of the Government and of foreign governments for materials, articles and equipment needed for defense.

c. Advise with respect to the plans and schedules of the various departments and agencies for the purchase of materials, articles and equipment required for defense, to coordinate the placement of major defense orders and contracts and to keep informed of the progress of the various programs of production and supply.

d. Plan and take all lawful steps necessary to assure the provision of an adequate supply of raw materials essential to the production of finished products needed for defense.

e. Formulate plans for the mobilization for defense of the production facilities of the Nation, and to take all lawful action necessary to carry out such plans.

f. Determine the adequacy of existing production facilities and to assure their maximum use; and, when necessary, to stimulate and plan the creation of such additional facilities and sources of production and supply as may be essential to increase and expedite defense production.

g. Determine when, to what extent, and in what manner priorities shall be accorded to deliveries of material as provided in Section 2(a) of the Act entitled "An Act to Expedite National Defense and for Other Purposes," approved June 28, 1940. Deliveries of material shall take priority, as provided in said Act, in accordance with such determinations and the orders issued in pursuance thereof by the Office of Production Management.

h. Perform the functions and exercise the authorities vested in the President by Section 9 of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940.

i. Serve as the liaison and channel of communication between the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense and the Departments of War and Navy with respect to the duties imposed upon the Commission by the following named acts, and with respect to all other matters pertaining to defense purchasing and production: Public Nos. 667, 781, 800 and 801 and Public Resolution No. 95, Seventy-sixth Congress.

j. Perform such other functions as the President may from time to time assign or delegate to it.

3. The director general, in association with the associate director general, and serving under the direction and supervision of the President, shall discharge and perform the administrative responsibilities and duties required to carry out the functions specified in paragraph 2, subject to and in conformity with the policies and regulations (not inconsistent with such regulations as may be issued by the President) prescribed by the Office of Production Management.

4. There shall be within the Office of Production Management the following and such other operating divisions as the President may from time to time determine.

5. There shall be within the Office of Production Management, a Priorities Board composed of six members. A chairman and three other members shall be appointed or designated by the President; the Director General and Associate Director General shall be members, ex officio. The Priorities Board shall serve as an advisory body and, from time to time as may be required by the Office of Production Management, shall make findings and submit recommendations with respect to the establishment of priorities, the placing of mandatory orders, the assignment of preference ratings, the allocation of deliveries, and other related matters. In making its findings and recommendations, the Priorities Board shall take into account general social and economic considerations and the effect the proposed actions would have upon the civilian population.

6. Within the limits of such funds as may be allocated to it by the President on the recommendation of the Bureau of the Budget, the Office of Production Management may employ necessary personnal and make provision for the necessary supplies, facilities, and services. However, the Office of Production Management shall use insofar as practicable such statistical, informational, fiscal, personnel, and other general business services and facilities as may be made available through the Office for Emergency Management or other agencies of the Government.

7. Executive Order No. 8572 of October 21, 1940, as amended by Executive Order No. 8612 of December 15, 1940, is revoked.

ADMINISTRATIVE ORDER
Further Defining the Status and Functions of the Office for Emergency Management

WHEREAS Executive Order No. 8248, dated September 8, 1939, provides, in part, as follows:

1. The Office for Emergency Management shall have the following duties and functions:

(c) To serve as a channel of communication between such agencies and the President concerning emergency activities, to keep the President currently advised of their progress, to assemble and analyze information concerning additional measures that should be taken, and to assist in the preparation of recommendations for any necessary legislation.

(d) To provide and maintain liaison during any such emergency with other divisions of the executive office of the President and with other agencies, public or private, for the purpose of bringing about maximum utilization and coordination of their services and facilities.

(e) To advise and assist the President upon or before termination of any such emergency with respect to any measures that may be needful to facilitate a restoration of normal administrative relations and to ameliorate the consequences of the emergency.

(f) To perform such other duties and functions with respect to any such emergency as the President may from time to time direct.

2. The work and activities of the following-named agencies, and such other agencies as the President may from time to time designate, shall be coordinated in and through the Office for Emergency Management under the direction and supervision of the President:

(a) The Council of National Defense, the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense and all subordinate bodies and agents of the council and commission.

(b) Defense Communications Board.

(c) Office of Production Management (to be created immediately hereafter).

3. Provision may be made in the Office for Emergency Management for liaison facilities and for the maintenance of routine office services required in the conduct of the work and activities of the agencies coordinated through or established in the Office for Emergency Management.

4. Any provisions of the administrative order of May 25, 1940, establishing the Office for Emergency Management inconsistent with this order are hereby superseded by this order.

immediate needs of the Fleet and have priority over all Army craft and commercial needs. The total includes 1,583 trainers, the rest combat planes.

The over-all shortages of engines will not be overcome for at least 18 months, when new sources will get into full production. Supplies, however, should equip all operating planes, but leave no spares.

Of the planes now with the fleet, only the latest fighters are adequately equipped with armorplate and can therefore be called modern aircraft in all respects.

In the last year, the Navy turned back a total of 50 planes for release to foreign governments, and gave up its priority right to five others.

Latest British navy fighting planes carry more guns and are 5 miles an hour faster than the American-built naval planes, now in service abroad. The latter, however, are older types now going out of production, while our latest craft have more fire power than comparable British types.

The Navy plans to build up a large excess of carrier-type planes, plus pilots and mechanics, over fleet needs, for use on vessels now being manufactured by the U. S. Maritime Commission which can be easily converted into auxiliary aircraft carriers.

Admiral Towers declared the principal reason for delays in plane production was a temporary disorganization of plants, due to expansion and a shortage of skilled workers. Lack of machine tools also plays an important part, while the Congressional delay in agreeing on an excess profits tax bill last summer held up contracts for months, he added.

Committeemen repeatedly questioned him on subcontract possibilities and he cited one case in New York where wine presses, in use only a few weeks a year normally, are now pressing out aircraft parts. In most cases, however, Admiral Towers declared, conversion of idle plants to arms production will give increased capacity without greatly increased cost, but cannot be put into service quickly.

Questioned about various bottlenecks of aircraft production, the admiral declared that the output of machine guns and ammunition was of "serious concern," though the Navy hoped to have the weapons ready for the planes as produced.

There has been a "tight situation" as to aircraft instruments, he said, while the propeller problem was rather critical but now present no "serious fears."

To a series of questions, Admiral Towers said there had been no lack of cooperation from manufacturers, that all suspected cases of sabotage had turned out to be carelessness by green workers, that labor troubles had interfered with the Army's plane program but not the Navy's and that a proposal that the aircraft industry be nationalized would bring a "major calamity."

The Gallup Poll

Voters Willing To Pay More Defense Taxes

Majority Favors Income Levy on All But Relief Families

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 7.—Further evidence of the sacrifices which the American public is willing to make for national defense is revealed in a survey of public opinion by the Institute.

This study, one of a series on public opinion and the defense problem, shows that the voters are willing to pay much more in taxes; in fact, a majority are willing to have every family in the country, except those on relief, pay a Federal income tax in order to meet the cost of the defense program.

Even a substantial number in the lower income group—families now exempt from the Federal income levy—are willing to pay a share of the defense cost through income taxes.

40 Per Cent Favor Sales Tax

A sizable proportion of voters—approximately two-fifths—favor a national sales tax to meet the defense bill, but if the choice is reduced to a sales tax versus an income tax, the income tax wins by a majority.

The Institute has conducted an intensive study of public attitudes on more than 20 aspects of the defense program. Results published last week showed a large majority willing to work longer hours without time and a half pay, and a majority dissatisfaction with present defense production.

Today's study probed the issue of taxes by asking a series of questions. The first dealt with income taxes, the second with a national sales tax, and the third presented a choice between the two.

Income Tax Sentiment

The first question and its result was:

"To pay the cost of defense, should every American family not on relief pay an income tax based on the family's earnings, no matter how little? This tax would amount to about $5 a year for the poorest families and larger amounts for families with larger incomes. Would you favor such an income tax on every family?"

Yes	51%
No	41
Undecided	8

The second question dealt with sales taxes, as follows:

"In order to help pay the cost of defense, should the United States Government collect a national sales tax on everything that people buy?"

The vote was:

Yes	42½
No	49
Don't know	9

To determine how the public would choose as between a sales tax and an income tax, the following question was put:

"Which kind of tax would you prefer to raise money for defense—a national sales tax on everything you buy, or an income tax based upon the amount of income you receive, and collected from every family except those on relief?"

The vote was:

Sales tax	38%
Income tax	54
Both	3
Other	3
Don't know	5

How Income Groups Vote

Especially interesting is an analysis of how people in the low-income group react to the idea that every family be required to pay some income tax.

The following table shows that more than two-fifths are willing to accept this burden for national defense:

	Require Every Family to Pay an Income Tax? Yes	No	Don't Know
Upper and middle income voters	54%	38%	8%
Lower income voters	44	48	8

job over with and get it over with darn quick."

F. V. Geier, president of the Tool Builders Association, promised Knudsen that the industry would better a previous pledge to turn out $650,000,000 worth of products this year—more than three times the production of 1939.

In a formal statement, Geier included expansion of subcontracting as one of four methods the industry would employ to speed production. The others were: Further plant expansion, employing and training more men, and maximum utilization of plants and equipment.

Commissioner Henderson meanwhile raised the whip of Governmental power to drive down the cost of the gigantic defense program.

He revealed in a press release that he had urged a voluntary reduction of several dollars a ton upon scrap dealers from cities all over the country who met with him Monday.

"Unless voluntary action is successful," Henderson emphasized, "drastic steps looking towards control will be recommended."

Monday's conference agreed, he said, that large supplies of scrap were being "hoarded" in anticipation of still higher prices. A reduction in prices is expected to thaw out these frozen supplies.

The ultimate objective of the price reduction, Henderson stated, was to bring the market to a level of $20 per ton for No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap at Pittsburgh. The Associated Press reported from New York that buyers in recent days have paid as much as $25 per ton, although official quotations were $23.50 bid, $24 asked. The rise caused apprehension lest it lead to an increase in finished steel prices next quarter.

Allied to Henderson's concern was Commissioner Elliott's attack upon the threat of a rent spiral. Her proposal of new legislation, establishing a ceiling on rents in certain areas, accompanied a report on the "Maintenance of Fair Rents During the Emergency," prepared by the National Association of Housing officials

'Show Goes On' As Bombs Rend BBC Building

'It's All Right,' Says . . Announcer, Continuing; N.B.C. Reporter Hurt

By International News Service

London, Jan. 7.—News in the German tongue poured tonight into countless secret radios in the Reich from microphones before which, within the last few days, announcers were struck down by Nazi bombs.

The dramatic story of two bombings on Broadcasting House, headquarters of the British Broadcasting Corporation in the heart of London's West End, was unfolded tonight in the midst of quiet imposed by bad flying weather.

German planes were active over Britain during the day, but the foul weather tonight grounded both the Royal Air Force and the Luftwaffe.

Relaxing in the night quiet, Britons were permitted for the first time to read one of the most thrilling "show must go on" stories of all time.

Heard Over Radio

Seven radio experts were killed, many more were injured, and the side wall of the magnificent studio building was blasted out when two bombs crashed through the roof. Listeners all over the world—including the Reich—could hear the crash and thud of the bombs—but the only other reaction was this cry over one microphone:

"It's all right!"

Among those injured at their posts were Fred Bate, National Broadcasting Co. representative whose voice is known to most American radio listeners.

Bruce Belfrage, ace announcer of the B. B. C., had begun to read his news broadcast when the first heavy bomb fell. He paused for but a second, then listeners heard his calm voice say: "It's all right." Without another hesitation, he sped on with his news—never mentioning the biggest news of all.

Program Continues

In the second bombing a whole "stick", or cluster of bombs smashed into the building. Every window in Broadcasting House was blown out. All Souls' Church, on Langham Street, was damaged and other buildings were badly dented.

News in German, which was being sent out during the raid, continued without interruption, although most of the staff knew that fellow-workers, including some women, had been killed within a few yards of the microphones.

Tonight workers still were digging injured persons out of the debris left in a series of minor daylight raids on London.

High explosives and incendiary bombs fell on a number of streets in the capital, and numerous houses were demolished.

German raiders also appeared over Liverpool and the Midlands during the day.

Shortage of Meat

London, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Britain claimed today to have reduced sharply her shipping losses in the last three weeks of 1940 but admitted that a severe meat shortage had forced her to dip into reserve supplies.

Merchant marine losses for the week ending December 30 were the lowest in 10 weeks—three British ships aggregating 18,208 tons and four Allied ships totaling 19,348 tons, the Admiralty reported.

On the other hand, Lord Woolton, minister of food, revealed that the meat situation in the country was difficult and that little relief could be expected for two weeks or so. He said he was doing everything possible to encourage the importation of meat and other supplies from Eire.

He announced measures designed to control food speculation, placing widespread price controls into effect on January 13. They will penalize vendors who charge more than December 2 prices for certain foods, included killed poultry, coffee, honey, fish, meat pastes, pickles, canned vegetables, spaghetti and canned soup.

Japanese Give British Envoy Sharp Protest

Detention in Bermuda Of Tokyo Subjects Is Declared Illegal

By Hugh Byas

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Jan. 7.—Foreign Minister Matsuoka today protested to the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, against the action of British officials in Bermuda who on December 23, allegedly, seized money belonging to Japanese passengers who were proceeding to Germany by the way of Lisbon.

Matsuoka declared that the action was "an abuse of belligerent rights and an illegal act infringing upon the legitimate right of the free movement of Japanese as neutrals."

The foreign minister demanded that the British government promptly take steps to settle the case.

Rights of Neutrals

A cabinet spokesman said the Japanese government cannot in principle accept any regulations which infringe on neutral rights. When asked if this principle applied to China, where neutrals who suffered injury were told that military necessity overrode ordinary rules, he said it was a matter of reciprocal treatment.

Answering a German correspondent, the spokesman said that the British action was a violation of international law.

Answering a British correspondent he agreed that British law governed British territory.

Nine Japanese were concerned in the incident at Bermuda. One was the correspondent of the newspaper Asahi, who was proceeding to Berlin and who in a dispatch from Lisbon called it "British piracy." The Asahi correspondent alleged that his cabins were searched and that not only were his dollars taken but soap and baskets of food destined for Japanese in Germany.

Engineers on Board

The effect of this report has been intensified by the report of another Asahi correspondent, now aboard a ship in the Pacific, who stated that fellow passengers proceeding to Germany by way of the United States induced Yakachiro Suma, the minister to Spain, who is also a passenger, to communicate with the foreign office.

Among the passengers are several Japanese engineers, traveling to Berlin, who fear detention at Bermuda.

Suma, according to the Asahi correspondent, has declared that he is prepared to lead them across the Atlantic on receiving instructions.

Japanese going to Berlin are finding difficulty in proceeding through Siberia. Consequently, many are obliged to travel via Lisbon.

Dowding Is Confident Nazis Won't Succeed With Invasion

British Air Marshal Is Skeptical of Mass Production of Planes; but Certain Hitler Will Never Conquer Skies Over Isles

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, the tall, blue-eyed Scotsman who headed the R. A. F. fighter force in the days of "all-out" battle last September, said yesterday that the Germans would never be able to gain command of English air.

And since command of the air is a prerequisite to a successful invasion, Sir Hugh added, the Nazi army will never be able to take England.

"I think they would be rather silly to try it," he added. "But they might be forced to try."

Sir Hugh, known in the R. A. F. as "Stuffy" and "Old Punctuality," talked at a press conference in the headquarters of the British Purchasing Mission on the ninth floor of the Willard. He has come here as the special representative of Lord Beaverbrook to work out plans for an Anglo-American agreement on types of aircraft, with an eye to standardization so far as possible.

Wary of Mass Production

In the course of a 1½-hour interview, Sir Hugh discussed mass production of warplanes, night bombings, the American Eagle Squadron, the quality of German planes and pilots, the failure of the Italian air force, and the "cold anger and steady determination" of the British people, whose only fear "is a patched-up peace."

Sir Hugh, in answer to a question apparently based on the so-called Reuther plan, said he did not think mass production of warplanes was feasible. There was a difference in the "tempo" of making planes and making automobiles, he said, and he pointed to the difficulty of planning an airplane motor now for airplanes that would be turned out in 1943.

Fighting planes undergo drastic alterations too rapidly for mass production, he said, and he reminded newsmen of the changes that have come since the current war started—the eight-gun fighters, the bullet-proof windshields, the armor and the heavier caliber guns.

Discussing the devastating German night raids on England, Sir Hugh said:

"We have good hopes of being able to bring it (night bombing) to a standstill, or at least to take the sting out of the attack by the spring of this year.

Equipment Is Only Need

"The method of doing so now exists, and it is a question of providing equipment on a large enough scale to be effective."

He would not discuss the "method" beyond saying that several methods had been tried out during the autumn, and that one of them was successful on "a small scale."

Night raids, he explained, had no bearing on a German invasion, being designed to wreak destruction that might be decisive and to break the morale of the people to such an extent that they would urge their rulers to sue for peace.

Italy to Fight On With Axis, Gayda Warns

Victory Sure Despite British Resources, U. S. Promises, He Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 7.—Italy let it be known today that, in spite of her defeat at Bardia and President Roosevelt's plan for increased United States aid to Britain, she intends to fight on to the finish as an Axis partner.

"However gigantic the British Empire's resources appear on paper and the promises which the United States brings alongside them, the Axis means are more immediately and more powerfully efficient," declared Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor who usually voices the thoughts of Premier Mussolini.

"Victory must belong to the Axis."

Not until today did the high command give the Italian people the news of the British capture Sunday of Bardia, strong Italian base in eastern Libya.

The high command communique stressed the courage of the defending forces and omitted any mention of British claims that their advance mechanized units had penetrated Libya at a point south of Tobruk.

The government announced a $2,000,000,000 budget for the coming year, exclusive of probable war costs. Italy already has a budget deficit of about $1,402,000,000 for the past fiscal year.

The cabniet, in a meeting at which Mussolini presided, adopted a resolution "solemnly reaffirming" Italy's adherence to the alliance with Germany and the tripartite pact and declared Italy's determination to fight on.

Gayda's opinion of President Roosevelt's message to Congress yesterday was that it was a reiteration of "the outworn, unproved theme" of an Axis menace to America, while assuring Americans of "the material impossibility" of an Axis attack.

Donovan in Cairo On Secret Mission

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 7 (AP).—Col. William J. Donovan, on an undisclosed mission from the United States, arrived tonight in Cairo by plane from London.

While he declined to discuss the purpose of his visit it was understood he would furnish the American Government a first-hand account of the situation and of operations in the middle Eastern war theater. He is staying at the British Embassy.

Hitler's Aim World Rule, Exile Says

Adolf Hitler is out to spread his "gangster rule" around the world—and it's partly the fault of the United States for ignoring the League of Nations, says Dr. Josef Dunner, an exile from his native Germany.

He spoke yesterday before a luncheon meeting of the Washington Civitan Club at the Mayflower Hotel. He said the United States must now give unlimited aid to Great Britain and "destroy the Nazi war machine once and for all."

Black Shirt Chiefs Deserted Bardia

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 7 (AP).—Three Italian Black Shirt commanders deserted their troops during operations at Bardia, a special British communique asserted tonight.

This action, said the British announcement, "left the regular commanders to fight on."

Morgenthau, Sr., Quits Refugee Unit

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Henry Morgenthau, sr., former United States Ambassador to Turkey and father of the Secretary of the Treasury, said today he had resigned from sponsorship of the American Rescue Ship Mission, which is conducting a campaign to transport Spanish refugees from France to Mexico. Morgenthau said his action needed no comment.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt resigned yesterday because, she said, she had learned "the committee is not under good auspices," and the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes, of New York, withdrew charging that the Communist party was "at the bottom" of the organization.

Lt.Comdr.Drowned Trying to Rescue Amy Mollison, Man

London, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—The admiralty revealed tonight that Lieut. Comdr. W. E. Fletcher of the trawler Haslemere was drowned Sunday in attempting to rescue Amy Mollison and a man with her in a plane disabled over the Thames Estuary.

Mrs. Mollison and her companion were drowned.

The crew of the Haslemere saw a parachute descending through low clouds—apparently that of Miss Mollison, who baled out—and a plane circling and losing height. The plane landed on the water near the parachute and began to break up in the heavy sea. Fletcher dived overboard and reached the man, but the rough sea prevented boats from reaching them. No trace of Miss Mollison and her companion was found.

U. S. Soon to Release 100 Planes to Greece

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Greece will obtain close to 100 American airplanes to be released by the United States Army in pursuance of the policy enunciated by President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress Monday.

The airplanes, of the most modern design, which are virtually ready for delivery to the United States Air Corps, will be made available to Greece shortly, it was learned in a reliable quarter here today. Greece has been negotiating directly here with the aid of technical advisers, for war materials to supplement the supplies which are being furnished to the Greek nation by Britain.

The Greek need in this country is for all sorts of war materials suited to the needs of the Greek campaign on land, which includes airplanes, munitions and guns.

Ex-King Carol, Magda Reported Bound for U. S.

Budapest, Jan. 7 (INS).—Former King Carol of Rumania and his red-haired girl friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu, are en route from Spain to the United States, diplomatic quarters in Budapest reported tonight.

Carol and Mme. Lupescu have been under "hotel arrest" at Granada and Seville since Carol abdicated and fled to Spain.

They were detained at the request of the Rumanian government, which brought unsuccessful diplomatic proceedings to win extradition of Mme. Lupescu and Gen. Ernest Urdareanu, Carol's former court chamberlain.

Britain May Conscript Labor As Next Step in War Effort

Churchill Already Has Draft Power, But Hesitates to Use It in Face of Reported Rise of Restiveness Among Workers

The question of conscripting labor for Britain's war effort—a power Winston Churchill has but hesitates to use—is political "dynamite" in England. William McGaffin, back from service as a war correspondent, discusses it in this third of four behind-the- scenes stories.

By William McGaffin,

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 7.—John Englishman, who works in the ladies ready-to-wear at Selfridge's, may find himself one day soon turning out carbuetors in an airplane factory.

That's an exaggerated, perhaps, but perfectly possible example of the labor drafting step Britain may have to take if she is to "win this war in the factory."

Winston Churchill's new government got the right in the Defense Powers Act last May 22 to order any man to leave the job he is doing if it is considered nonessential to the war effort and to take one that is essential. Churchill never has used this power—partly becaus it is loaded with political dynamite.

Nutral oberrvers say British labor already is restive. Labor Minister Ernest Bevin declares use of this measure would heighten that feeling and in the long run would bring no worthwhile speedup in production.

Warns Against Force

The veteran union boss who walks like a heavyweight wrestler and talks like a stevedore presents this argument on behalf of 5,000,000 union members:

"Give labor what it wants and it will work its head off, but force labor and it will be sure to slow down."

Yet the growing pile of unfilled munitions orders beside the numerous factories that are working below capacity has posed a grave problem.

Labor conscription, in the opinion of certain military men and industrialists, is the only answer.

One recognized reason why there is a shortage of skilled labor is that some of it has been absorbed into the army.

The logical thing to do, in the opinion of one group of experts, would be to release these men to return to their old jobs. Indeed, they would go much farther—they would release thousands of unskilled laborers, as well, to be trained for technical factory jobs. They argue the army is unnecessarily large for its present responsibilities that it is needlesly immobilizing a reservoir of manpower.

Their proposition, however, is considered by the powers-that-be as "too advanced and too experimental" to be considered seriously. To date the only action in this direction has been the freeing of several thousand utility workers to help repair bomb damage and of 15,000 unskilled laborers to clear away bomb debris from London streets.

A question American reporters often ask is:

"If there is a labor shortage, why are there still thousands of unemployed?"

We are told by the government that the "hard core" of unemployment has been reduced now to about 75,000. Certainly a great reduction has been made in the unemployed total, which was set at 766,845 last July, but some impartial observers reply that "hard core" does not tell the whole story, and raises further questions.

Why, for instance, are the jobless miners of South Wales not brought up to London to dig air raid tunnels? Why are skilled war workmen whose factories have been bombed not moved to other areas at once, instead of being kept on the dole in their own neighborhood until the factories can be put into running order again?

These were two of the questions being asked in the opposition press as I left England three weeks ago. The transfer of bombed-out workers was carried out to a certain extent in the case of Bristol. But the newspapers declared that generally, however, red tape and muddling seem to have blocked any thorough absorption of the unemployed.

Another factor—most British factories began the war on an eight-hour production day and even now there are many which do not work the clock around. In some cases, where the men themselves want to defy night raiders, the employers refuse to take the risk, even though the government says it will be responsible.

One grievance of the British workman today is his weekly pay check. The last official survey made last July showed that the war had boosted the average weekly wage of all workers in metal, engineering and shipbuilding industries from £3 (about $12 on the basis of the present exchange rate) in October, 1938, to £4 and 5 shillings (about $17).

Argue Against Pay Increase

But the workman maintains his salary has not kept pace with the war-invoked rise in the cost of living. Some labor leaders say the employers, backed by the Conservative Party, hesitate to elevate wages to any great extent for fear they would be forced to keep them there in a postwar depression.

The employes themselves contend publicly that it would do no good to raise wages now since the raise would automatically entail higher production costs and consequently a still higher cost of living, thus nullifying the additional salary.

How labor responds to this argument was demonstrated by the Algamated Engineering Union recently which agreed only at the eleventh hour to call off a strike, after an appeal from one of their members. He had two sons fighting for Britain and demanded, "When they come home what could I say to them if I had struck while they were fighting?"

When you ask labor leaders in general what they want, they reply it is a "better chance in the future of a caste-ridden land that draws most of its leaders from the 2 per cent of the population attending 'public' schools."

One of their major fears is that the war will jeopardize the advantages they have managed to acquire up to now. For instance, labor men say they would like an "iron-clad guarantee" of protection if their ranks are to be opened to a flood of new labor which undoubtedly would mean a post-war surplus of skilled workmen.

Laborites say they appreciate the augmented voice in national affairs which the war has given them. Ernest Bevin, one of their own people, has replaced a "mine-run politician" in the Labor ministry. Bevin, in addition, has won a place on the important inner war cabinet.

But Bevin, they say, is in the difficult position of trying to keep both workers and employers happy now.

motor transport concentrations," an R. A. F. communique said.

"At Tripoli several tons of bombs were dropped among motor vessels in the center of the harbor, causing a series of explosions and clouds of smoke. One direct hit was registered amidships of a large motor vessel, followed by explosions. Several smaller cargo ships probably were hit. Fires were caused among customs buildings and wharves, the power station was bombarded and much damage was done. No planes were lost on either raid."

British general headquarters here said tersely: "In Libya operations toward Tobruk are proceeding satisfactorily."

(Military authorities in London said that "contact has been made" with the Italian defense of Tobruk, an even more important base than Bardia, but believed to be more lightly held. It was expected that a siege of the base would begin almost immediately.)

The campaign against Tobruk was expected to be a repetition of the tactics the British found so successful against both Salum and Bardia. All are ports open to the same three-pronged type of attack by land forces, bombers and warships lying close to the shore.

The British advance across the intervening desert, one of the quickest yet made in this fast campaign, appeared to have started against Tobruk even before the Italian garrison at Bardia finally surrendered. British skirmishers—presumably fast, armored units—were reported near Tobruk's outer defenses during the past several days.

In yesterday's R. A. F. attack on Tobruk, centered on the harbor and military objectives, the British shot down an Italian fighter plane and another was believed destroyed.

Planes of the R. A. F. middle east command also made another raid on Valona, in Albania, despite rain and low clouds. Bombs were said to have burst among buildings and warehouses near the docks, starting several fires.

First Draft of Lend-Lease Bill Rushed

urgent aid measure will receive the green light over other legislation, once House machinery is in readiness.

Apparently still undecided was the question of whether to place any definite limit on the value of arms to be loaned, or whether to specify an overall top for the program in the neighborhood of the $10,000,000,000 figure.

Mr. Roosevelt has left formulation of the program entirely in the hands of Congress. For quick-action purposes, the measure will proceed first through the House.

Although both Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack are familiar with the general terms of the President's recommendations, it was indicated they would see the first draft of the bill, sketched in by the Capitol's own drafting service, today.

Most favored proposal before the draftsmen was a simple amendment to the Bloom resolution authorizing aid to the South American republics, which passed Congress in May, 1940.

Amendments Necessary

Providing for sale, rather than loans, that act authorized in three-page detail "the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to assist the governments of American republics to increase their military and naval establishments."

Should that law be selected as the vehicle, amendments must be added broadening its terms, extending its aid provisions to democratic belligerents outside this hemisphere and setting up loan and lease machinery.

In addition, an amendment may be proposed specifying that no restrictions in the Neutrality Act or other legislation shall be construed to be in conflict.

No decision had been reached last night on whether specifically to call for a Johnson Act waiver. Technically the Johnson Act did not debar loans by the Government itself to nations which defaulted on World War debts.

officers. Previously, initiation fees have varied with the local chapters. Now uniform fees will be in force throughout the country.

Coyne said the A. F. L. building trades have been cooperating effectively with all Government agencies in the national defense program since its inception. "The vast majority of the projects which have been undertaken have been completed on schedule or ahead of schedule," he declared.

The Government has recognized time-and-a-half payment for overtime work, Coyne said, adding that all payment over time-and-a-half must be approved by the quartermaster general when the labor involved is under his jurisdiction.

"There's absolutely no reason why there should be strikes," said Boyne, citing the Government's observance of fair labor standards, when questioned on the department's motive in the no-strike decision.

One of the chief reasons for speedy work at Fort Belvoir was because workers were allowed to make first payment on initiation fees from their first week's salary, Coyne said.

Unions agreeing to the maximum initiation fee stand include:

International Association of Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers; International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers; Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; International Union of Elevator Constructors; International Union of Operating Engineers; Granite Cutters International Association; International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union.

Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union; International Association of Marble, Stone and Slate Polishers, Rubbers and Sawers, Tile and Marble Setters Helpers and Terrazzo Workers; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers; Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association; United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steam Fitters; United Slate, Tile and Composition Roofers, Damp and Waterproofing Workers Association; Sheet Metal Workers Internatonial Association; Journeymen Stone Cutters Association of North America; International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Warehousemen and Helpers.

Smith Hopes Labor Will Clean House

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, author of a bill to restrict strikes in defense industries, said yesterday he hoped labor would remove the grounds for such legislation by a voluntary "house-cleaning."

The Virginian said he is not reintroducing his bill "for the present." It was one of a number of defense labor bills introduced after the Vultee aircraft strike in the closing days of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

Meanwhile, another measure sponsored by Smith, the amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, appeared certain to arouse as much controversy as in the last session.

Reintroduced by Smith, the amendments were referred yesterday to the House Labor Committee.

and gave the following reasons:

1. King Boris of Bulgaria, in his interview with Adolf Hitler last November, not only refused to adhere to the Axis but dropped a hint that Bulgaria might fight.

2. The British encouraged Bulgarian resistance with a recent declaration that they would guarantee Bulgaria's territorial integrity at the eventual peace conference if Bulgaria refrains from giving direct or indirect aid to Germany.

3. Bulgarian resistance also is encouraged by Russia which, it was understood despite certain Budapest reports, does not want Germany in Bulgaria at any price.

4. The weather makes any great military movement extremely uncertain. The southeastern part of Bulgaria is flooded.

5. The alleged discovery that all alarming rumors concerning the Balkans, whether originating in Bucharest, Belgrade or Budapest, have been traced to German sources.

Philoff Denies Demands

Sofia, Jan. 7 (U.P.).—Premier Bogdan Philoff, returning from Vienna tonight, declared that "reports circulated in America concerning my visit to Germany are not true."

Well-informed quarters understood him to mean that he had not been served with any German demands.

By International News Service

Vichy, Jan. 7.—Russia's powerful Black Sea fleet tonight was reported massing off the principal Bulgarian port of Varna coincident with word that German troops for the first time are marching into Bulgaria.

Usually reliable quarters in Vichy said that Soviet war vessels have taken up a menacing position on the Black Sea coast lers than 100 miles from the Bulgarian-Turkish frontier.

Germany's reported move into Bulgaria, it was declared, is a direct blow against the U. S. S. R. The Nazis, according to Vichy sources, apparently are attempting to reach the Greek port of Salonika and the Dardanelles in an effort to keep Russia from sending oil and munitions to Turkey and Greece.

In addition, more German reinforcements are pouring into Rumania, Vichy quarters affirmed.

(Trainloads of collapsible barracks and quantities of pontoon bridge materials were reported to have arrived in Rumania from Germany. In addition, it was said Rumanians have been instructed to establish gasoline depots throughout the country by February 1.

(Turkey, on the alert, extended military services to all classes now mobilized, for another year.)

Rustchuk, Bulgaria, Jan. 7.—Despite the dislocation of telephone and telegraph communications with Rumania, news reached here today that a purge of the Iron Guard is now in progress.

The reason for it is said to be the discovery that Communists have secretly become members of the organization and are actively trying to disorganize its morale and discipline by turning its members against each other.

It was found that many of the latest acts of sabotage had been committed by this group of Communists, with the result that clashes took place between the two factions. Many Communists have lost their lives, it is reported, but no estimate of the number has been hazarded.

the operation were any Italian war vessels encountered.

The Royal Air Force forsook its recent concentration on northern front bases to follow up this naval attack, and Valona was heavily bombed yesterday with special efforts to destroy harbor jetties and warehouses. Several fires were started.

The raiders were hampered by bad weather conditions and intense antiaircraft fire. A regular Valona patrol of 12 CR-42 fighters with an amplified escort went up against the bombers and shot down one. A CR-42 broke off the engagement, smoke coming from its engine, and a G-50 monoplane fighter—a type just making its appearance on the Albanian front—Dived toward the sea without its guns being fired.

The Italians are now using German manufactured Daimler-Benz engines in some of their fighters, giving them considerable additional speed. It is apparent that both their antiaircraft and flying technique had been altered and considerably improved, presumably by German advice. No Germans are yet believed to be taking an active part in the warfare in Albania.

Valona is all important to the Italions for supplying troops in the southern and central sectors with food, equipment and reserves, although many of the latter are now being brought over by air transport. The official spokesmen said that of the heavy Italian casualties 25,000 alone had been transported back to Italy from Valona.

Air warfare is not limited to British initiative. The Greeks bombed supply stores and central bases, while the Italians bombed Koritza very heavily, causing, according to the ministry of home security, more than 100 civilian casualties, destroying 40 houses and damaging the town's church. An Italian seaplane machine-gunned a fishing boat in the Aegean Sea, killing a fisherman.

"PIANO KING" INTO COSMOS. Carmen Cavallaro, meteoric Latin pianist-maestro, will bring his orchestra into the Carlton's Cosmos Room on Friday. In the last year Cavallaro has rocketed to the top of the American recording and dance music picture, significantly, he was discovered by the man who first spotted Eddy Duchin's great talent, Sidney Solomon. While playing at the Central Park Casino in 1939 Carmen was told by Solomon that he'd better start his own band—and soon. The thought became a reality in no time. So the Cavallaro band comes to the Carlton direct from New York's uppity La Conga, has previously played Ben Marden's Riviera and the Atlantic Beach Club

Cavallaro's career represents a remarkable adjustment to American tempo. Though only 27, he has appeared as a concert pianist in all of Europe's capitals, came to this country to continue his concert work. But he felt the pressure of American speed, quickly changed his musical mood, though not his style. In the last few months he has brought out two Decca albums of sophisticated piano solos with great success. The experts vow that Cavallaro music is absolutely distinctive and inimitable. You can figure out more superlatives of your own at the Carlton on Friday.

CARMEN CAVALLARO, noted and brilliant pianist, who brings his dance orchestra to the Carlton's Cosmos Room on Friday

Milt Herth's Trio, the boogie-woogie miracles of the Neptune Room, are booked solidly throughout the country until next October, when they'll land in Chicago's ultra-snooty Pump Room after varied theater and New York night spot bookings.

"THERE IS A TAVERN IN THE TOWN"—and it seems to be at the Shoreham, judging by the way Blue Room ringsiders are demanding six to ten encores on the number as tossed over by the Music Hall Boys (alias Three Gay Blades). Presenting this crew is easy, but getting them off the floor is something else again, says Barnee, who really enjoys that kind of trouble. Delightful to the eye is the dancing of "Sea Gull" Talia and the "Tinkle Dance" of Columbus and Carrol.

FLASHIEST BANDSTAND COSTUMES in town are those of Ray Heatherton and his new Metronome Room Orchestra. The lads are all done in in scarlet dinner coats and white satin cummerbunds. Tally-ho!

MORE HOLIDAY-ING. With New Year's barely in the lap of history, the night spot operators are already planning on inaugural and President's Birthday Ball doings, prophesy that they'll be even bigger than that record entry of 1940. Better do early figuring on these events. Remember how guards were stationed at both doors of the Ambassador Hotel on New Year's Eve to prevent further congestion in Hi Hat and the Ambassador Room . . . And the tables placed in the Hamilton Lobby for those who couldn't get into the Rainbow Room . . . And the "No Seating" sign that decorated Mayfair early and all evening on January 31 . . . Yes, sir! You'd better make sure early that you'll have a place to sit down at those inaugural parties.

DATE BOOK "MUSTS." Opening of George Ray's new nine-musician, "all novelty" band in Del Rio's Fiesta Room tonight . . . And the "Amateur Night" tomorrow eve at Ciro's Famous Village . . . They're both best bet evenings.

GLAMOUR OR MAGIC? There's magic in the way lovely Patricia, Lotus' girl magician, lures male ringsiders out to help her with sleight-of-hand tricks. One little word from Patricia and the customers hop up and help her to juggle rings, cut up grapefruit, say "Alagazam!" and all the other chores required of a magician's assistant. One patron balked the other day, then changed his mind and came prancing out to inspect cards.

KING COLE DANCING? Comes a card from Owner Vin Gallagher of the King Cole Room showing some people dancing under water at Silver Springs, Fla., with the message, "After seeing this one, I've decided to put in dancing at King Cole." What, no swimming?

VIEWS AND VISTAS. People are always looking at the palm-decorated balcony in the Mayflower Lounge and asking why they don't put tables up there. The reason, m'dears, is because there are no steps to it . . . Speaking of balconies, the gold-mirrored one at Cafe Caprice is so beautiful that you always expect to see Hedy Lamarr looking over it . . . Every vista that you view at La Salle Versailles is a duplicate of those once viewed by Marie Antoinette. Even that of the bandstand (copy of "Temple of Love"), except for its dinner-jacketed melody makers . . . Those flattering lights at the Lounge Riviera are no matter of chance. They were changed half a dozen times to make sure they did the right thing by ladies' complexions . . . There was once a fountain in the center of the Madrillon's Aztec Court. But it was decided that it took up too much good table room . . . A close look at the murals in Restaurant 823 Fifteenth Street will show you that some of the figures are engaged in a spot of flirting . . . After working out a completely beautiful lighting scheme of pale blue and amber for the Casino Royal balcony room, the management is now devising something special in decoration for the spacious wall panels.

With 1941 just a week old, the original busy bee, Matt Windsor of the Anchor Room, has already composed a new song. It's "China Baby Doll," and just as pretty and tinkling as its name sounds.

TOP DANCE SPOTS. Kavakos' Grill. Big Bill Kavakos really says it when he announces, "This is the Shoreham of the Northeast." Big crowds every night in the week and a fine, friendly atmosphere. Brownie's band plays for dancing and you should see some of the customers do jitterbugging that's good enough for vaudeville.

Nightingale. Biggest dance spot and biggest band in the country-side. Rodd Raffell's 13-piece band is a high-power magnet for those who appreciate brilliant and vigorous modern rhythm. Open every night of the week but Monday.

River Bend. Excellent dance music by George ("Swing It") Stein. Two major festivals every week—the Wednesday "Piggy Parties" and the Friday "Harvest Nights."

Gay 90s. Al Oddone and his orchestra deal out both sweet and steaming melody as the requests come up. Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays are the "big nights."

TEMPTING FOOD. The lobster tails at Burt's Trans-Lux are a fine dinner in themselves, but come with plenty of trimmin's, including homemade rolls . . . Tender and thick are the silver fox steaks and the accompanying vegetables are seasoned with plenty of real butter . . . The French onion soup in Dick's Grill will give you a big lift . . . And whether it's breakfast, luncheon, dinner or a snack you'll find interesting specials at the Harrington Tavern—and at the right price.

Below the bridge, unshaven and unwashed infantrymen await impatiently for the order:

"Empros (advance)!"

"Waiting is the hardest thing we are asked to do," the Greeks say.

It is a bad day for aviation. The sea breeze sent clouds scudding over the peaks and only one enemy reconnaissance plane appeared. It was driven back by antiaircraft batteries.

Italian bombers have been active in this sector for the last few days but the Greeks voice contempt for efforts which they say fritter away superior air strength with aimless attacks that touch neither troops nor supply lines.

In the 40 hours it took me to travel 150 miles by truck, motorcycle and horse cart to this spot, nowhere along the way was I delayed by bomb damaged roads or bridges.

A half-dozen bridges which I was told were attacked by Italian airmen still were in use.

Italian Planes Discounted

Italian shells which arch over the ridges to explode in a spray of shrapnel command far more respect from the Greek troops than an Italian strafing plane.

During the day, the Greeks hug the underside of ledges, and by night they stretch canvas from rocks to keep dry despite almost continual rain.

Tonight, New Year's gifts of brandy, cookies and chocolates are being consumed. It's almost like a party, with shellfire for the music.

British 'Whitey' Is Ace in the Hole

Writer Sees Greeks Pick Italians Off Mountain Side Like Flies

By Daniel Deluce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in the Greek First Line on the Albanian Coast, Jan. 5.—(Delayed)—From the half circles of rock which hide Greek machine gun crews, I watched Italian infantry platoons scale a canyon wall a mile away.

They were dark little figures etched with the sparse green bushes against the gray limestone. As they climbed slowly, each man choosing a different trail, they must have known they were as visible to Greek artillerymen as flies crawling on a window pane.

"Look what happens now," a Greek gunner beside me said.

The Italians were no more than 20 yards from the crest of the canyon when I heard a Greek gun fire.

The shell exploded with a flash on the line of the Italians' march.

Two more shells shook the canyon walls and when the smoke arose the gunner beside me said:

"Good hits. If there are any Italians left alive, they'll finish the climb on their bellies."

This occurred a quarter of an hour ago and I am writing this in the captain's shelter under a ledge 30 yards from his advance machine-gun post and only 330 yards from the Italian outposts.

At our back lies the picturesque seaside village of Chimara, the Greek's latest acquisition. No other correspondents, foreign or Greek, have come this far with the army.

A comparatively long and difficult stretch of coast stands between the Greek lines and the Italian seaside base of Valona, but the Greeks are determined to reach that objective, as they have been determined on earlier objectives.

Caucus to Fill 3 Ways, Means Vacancies

Democrats to Pick Committee Members In Afternoon Session

Three Democratic vacancies on the Ways and Means Committee of the House will be filled at a party caucus this afternoon.

Membership on this committee is considered especially important both because of the committee's intrinsic prestige, and because the 15 Democrats who form its majority also comprise the Democratic Committee on Committees. They have the prerogative of recommending who shall fill Democratic vacancies on all the other committees of the House—and their recommendations are normally accepted.

Five of the candidates who will be considered for the three vacancies: Representatives Arthur D. Healey, of Massachusetts; Aaron Lane Ford, of Mississippi; Walter A. Lynch, of New York; Knute Hill, of Washington, and Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas.

It was generally expected that Representative Healey, veteran of eight years' service in the House and champion of labor legislation, would have little difficulty in election to the place vacated by Majority Leader John McCormack, of Massachusetts, who was not a candidate for committee reelection.

McCormack was New England's sole representative on the committee, in the composition of which geographical factors play a very large part.

Representative Lynch, a Democrat from the Bronx, was proposed by the New York delegation to take the place of former Representative Christopher Sullivan—although he has served in the House less than a year. New York has another member on the Ways and Means Committee; but in recent years it has always had two.

Representative Ford was narrowly defeated for one of the coveted places on the committee two years ago. The candidacy of a Southerner is sure to attract a large nucleus of Southern votes, especially as one of the vacancies was created by the electoral defeat of a Louisiana member, Representative Paul H. Maloney. Representative Mills, who has served one term, is the other Southern candidate.

Minton Named Assistant To President

Sherman Minton, who lost his toga as Senator from Indiana in the last elections, yesterday was appointed by President Roosevelt to one of six administrative assistants "with a passion for anonymity." The job pays $10,000 a year.

MINTON

The President said that Minton will act as his legs, eyes and ears, performing a variety of duties, but Mr. Roosevelt emphatically denied that the former Democratic whip will be the White House liaison man with Capitol Hill.

Minton, a one-term Senator, was a member of the Military Affairs Committee, but the President said that the Indianan will not be confined to military matters in his new post.

Minton, now 50, was elected as a down-the-line New Dealer and throuhout his term of service was known as a loyal supporter of the Administration. He saw more than a year's overseas service during the World War.

Minton was a member of the special committee to investigate utility holding companies and he also served on the Interstate Commerce, Pensions and Privileges and Elections Committees, as well as Military Affairs.

He was defeated for reelection by Senator Raymond Willis, a Republican.

Weir Testifies At Election Inquiry

Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steelmaster and chairman of the Republican Finance Committee in the recent campaign, was a witness yesterday before the special District grand jury investigating suspected violations of the election laws.

Special Assistant Attorney General Maurice M. Milligan said that William R. Davis, New York oil man, will be on the stand Thursday. Davis recently has been linked to a reported scheme for a European peace agreement.

Roosevelt Talk Angers Axis, Braces Britain

'De Facto Declaration Of War,' Tokyo Says; Rome Warns Anew

By International News Service

Anger and threats from the Axis and, a rebirth of determination on the part of Great Britain tonight greeted President Roosevelt's defense message to Congress.

Attitude of the Axis was summed up in the unanimous opinion of the government-inspired Japanese press. "Roosevelt's message to Congress was a de facto declaration of war against the Axis powers," the papers said.

But in Britain the London Evening Standard sounded the keynote by terming Mr. Roosevelt's speech "Hitler's Bardia," and the Evening News hailed the message as a "milestone on the road of war."

Germany issued new admonitions to American ships to keep out of blockaded zones in Europe. "Any American ships thrown into the whirlpool will meet their doom just as quickly as any others within the war zone," authoritative Nazi quarters said.

Also the Germans warned once more that America would be faced with a war on two oceans—and hinted strongly that Germany was prepared to play an important part in the Pacific.

Chancellor Hitler's own newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, said: "The three-power pact (including Japan) guaranteed us favorable bases and defense lines at all points wherever they might be needed."

President Roosevelt's speech, it was asserted by German authorities, revealed clearly that continued German-American relations are merely theoretical—that "Roosevelt is practically in the war."

Italy reacted similarly. Political circles in Rome said Mr. Roosevelt's speech "amounts to voluntary declaration of ideological war."

In Tokyo, Admiral Nakamura, navy spokesman said: "Japan would do well to prepare for an attack by the United States. Only preparedness could, perhaps, prevent war in the Pacific."

U. S. in War, Mexican Paper Says

Mexico City, Jan. 7 (AP).—The newspaper Ultimas Noticias, in an editorial saying the United States "in fact" had already entered the European war, today urged Mexican political leaders not to assume a "yes-man" attitude in their relations with Washington.

Jersey Convicts Bund Leader And 8 Others

State Charges Them With Promoting Hatred Against Jews

By the Associated Press

Newton, N. J., Jan. 7.—Wilhelm Kunze, national German-American Bund leader, and eight associates were ordered today to appear for sentence before Judge John C. Losey of the Sussex County Court, who upheld indictments charging them with "promoting race hatred against people of the Jewish religion."

John Winans, attorney for the nine, is expected to appeal after the jurist passes sentence, set for January 31, under statutes permitting prison terms of three years and fines of $5,000 each.

The defendants admitted the facts set forth in the indictments, but contended that the laws under which they were brought, New Jersey's 1935 "race hatred" statutes, were unconstitutional.

The indictments were returned last October as the result of a rally at the bund's Camp Nordland, in Andover Township.

"The right of free speech is not absolute license to publish, print or speak anything one pleases," Judge Losey said.

Besides Kunze, who lives in New York, the men are August Klapprott, of Andover, the bund's Eastern leader; Matthias Kohler, of Irvington, State bund treasurer; Leonard D. Clark, of New York, writer for the bund magazine, Free America; the Rev. John C. Fitting, of Union City, State bund secretary; Richard Schiele and Paul Schaarschmidt, of Paterson; Carl Schipphorst, of Glen Rock, and George Neuppert, of Cliffside Park, trustees of Camp Nordland.

Klapprott, Kohler and Clark were charged with making anti-Jewish speeches; the others, with permitting them.

Mrs. Roosevelt Chides G. O. P. For Attitude

Commenting on the lack of applause on the Republican side of Congress during the President's speech on Monday, Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference yesterday, "It may have been a personal reaction to an individual, but after all he represents the choice of the people and it must be possible to rise above personal feelings."

Pursuing the subject, a reporter quoted a Republican leader, who said, "The President's speech was an impassioned plea for peace by fighting a war by proxy." The First Lady replied that it was not possible to alter the facts by turning a clever phrase. The whole discussion was brought because of the First Lady's column "My Day"—whereupon Mrs. Roosevelt read the column aloud—a round of applause followed.

Questioned again on her rumored trip to South America, Mrs. Roosevelt admitted she had been invited by the Latin ladies attending the Inter-American Commission of Women here several months ago.

She laughingly added, "You know they are very polite."

Mrs. Roosevelt still insists she has not been told she is going to South America by either of the two men who would do so—the President or Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

From now on it is not going to be so easy to get the First Lady of the land to "join' thing." Mrs. Roosevelt said it is rather meaningless to be an honorary member of so many groups. And she does not intend to join many new organizations this year. She admits she has the various organizations on file and also added that it is rather difficult to investigate one and all. She said "I don't want to be just a name."

In commenting on her resignation as sponsor of the American Rescue Ship Mission, Mrs. Roosevelt said that her phrase, "it was not under good auspices," simply meant that the same work was being done more efficiently by various other committees. She thinks, she said, that it is vitally necessary to bring Spanish Loyalist refugees from France to Mexico—for which the mission was raising funds. The mission has been accused of Communist domination.

Mrs. Roosevelt intimated that there is a move on in the National Youth Administration to give medical attention to rejected draftees to build them up. However, she said the plan was in such an early stage she could give no further information.

Auto Engineers Told What Army Expects

Gen. Gregory Says 200,000 Vehicles Are Due by Fall

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Jan. 7.—Maj. Gen. E. B. Gregory, Quartermaster General of the United States Army, said in an address to the Society of Automotive Engineers tonight that his department expects to obtain delivery of more than 200,000 motor vehicles between now and late summer.

"Today," he said, "we have about 40,000 motor vehicles in service. By March we expect to have around 140,000 and by the end of the fiscal year about 190,000. In addition there will remain about 60,000 more vehicles to be delivered during the late summer or early fall."

Maj. Gen. Gregory itemized the various types of vehicles needed and the uses to which they will be put.

He said there was no place in the present plans for the slow-moving, ponderous vehicles that formerly were used.

Speed is Vital

"Our trucks must travel 40 or 50 miles an hour or faster by day, and at 15 to 20 miles an hour at night without lights," he explained.

"To be satisfactory," he said, "all the vehicles should be able to climb a grade of 40 to 50 degress and to make a departure ranging from 30 to 45 degrees."

A reliable and fast system of motor movement, Maj. Gen. Gregory said, was a vitally important factor in the German conquest of France and the Low Countries. "In that campaign," he said, "all German supply was carried by motor. Activity in the repairs of wrecked railroads was not even attempted during the early stages of the conflict."

Opposes Pessimism

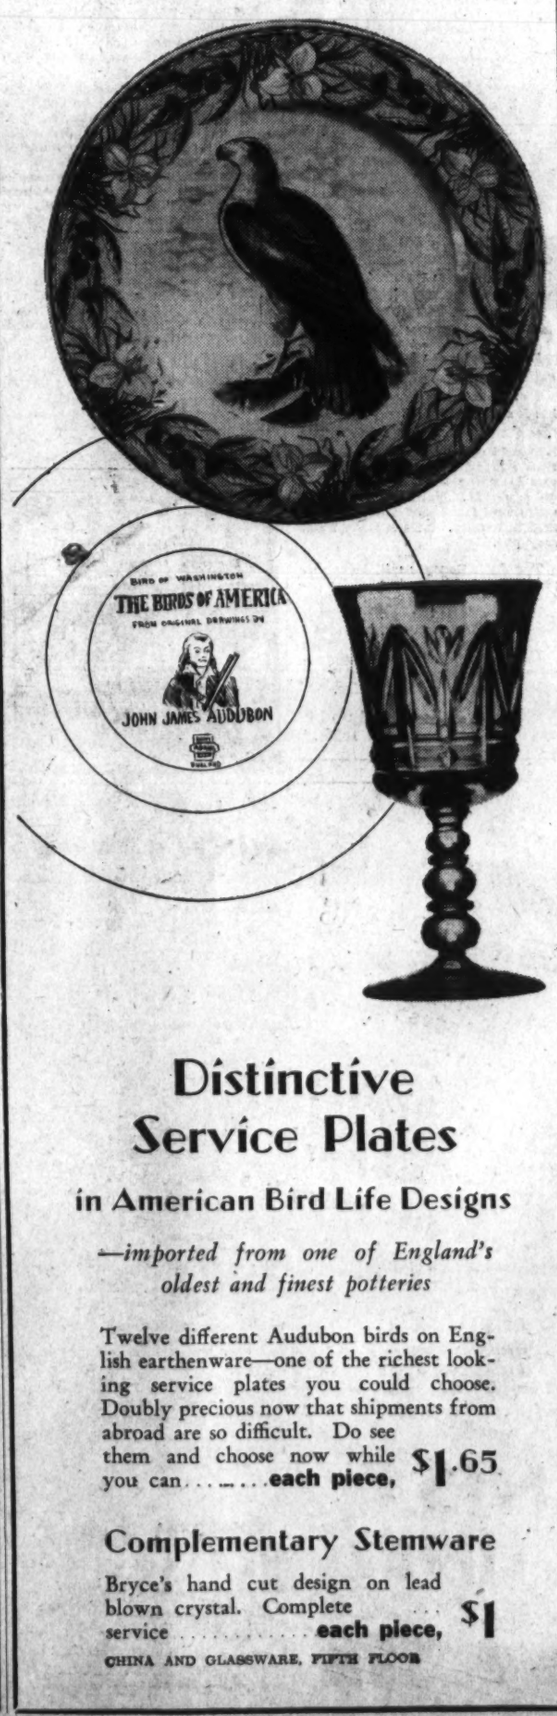

Arthur Nutt, president of the society, said in an interview that "I don't think it is right to take too pessimistic a view" of the aircraft portion of the national defense program.

Restraint Cast to Winds, 'Pastor Hall' Goes All-Out

New Picture, Opening Today at the Little, Is a Superbly Acted Indictment of Hitlerism Based on the Life of Heroic Pastor Niemoller

WITH A FOREWORD by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, applauding the film's defense of individual liberty against the aggression of totalitarian force, "Pastor Hall," opening today at the Little Theater, voices the most bitter and most vigorous attack upon Hitlerism yet to reach the American screen.

BELL

So grimly does it intensify the democratic point of view expressed in such earlier film plays as "The Mortal Storm" and "Escape," for example, that at times it comes dangerously near stamping itself as an instrument of sheer propaganda rather than entertainment. The tragic story of a devout churchman, who had the courage to proclaim God and not Hitler his Fuehrer, nevertheless, is so factual in its essentials and so terrorizingly forceful in its exaltation of the spirit that "Pastor Hall" takes immediate place among the most powerful contemporary condemnations of at least one phase of Nazi barbarism.

Frankly based on the heroic life of Pastor Martin Niemoller, condemned to a Nazi concentration camp for his defiance of Hitler in fighting for man's right to free thought, free speech and free action, "Pastor Hall" deals with life among the simple villagers of Altdorf, who suddenly find their peaceful and sleepy little community converted into a prison where everything they have been taught to cherish is verboten by former friends not blessed with the faith and fortitude of the man upon whom they have relied for spiritual guidance. The dramatic pattern is identical with that upon which "The Mortal Storm" was traced. The treatment of the same elements of love, hate, persecution and tragic brutality is one of unsoftened and unrelenting realism, with a final inspiring note of faith that is superb in its ringing truth.

Whatever may be the approach of the "amusement-seeker" to "Pastor Hall," nothing can blind him to the extraordinary strength with which the picture is interpreted by a uniquely competent and perfectly equipped cast. Wilfred Lawson's portrayal of the title role is a masterpiece of naturalism and the quiet power that wells gently from greatness. As his daughter, Christine, covetously wooed by the young Fuehrer of the local storm troopers, Nova Pilbeam is as ingenuously and tragically effective and Lina Barrie, as the victim of Nazi license, is the perfect symbol of her gender's pathetic helplessness under a ruthless regime. Seymour Hicks, a testy old retired general of the Imperial Army, is a lusty rebel and thorn in the side of his oppressors and Marius Goring a close second to Erich von Stroheim in his transcendent ability to make unscrupulous young officers supremely abhorrent. Not a member of the cast but breathes authenticity into the picture's mosaic of mental, spiritual and physical torture.

In point of direction, photography and all of the mechanical aspects that enter into the rounded completion of a superlative picture, "Pastor Hall," ranks high. Its greatest claim to distinction, however, lies in its willingness to hurl an all-out attack against the scourge of the present-day world.

The new bill at the Little is lent a leavening lighter and gayer touch by the inclusion of one of Walt Disney's happiest color cartoon comedies, Donald Duck in "The Fox Hunt." But it is "Pastor Hall" that should be seen.

Reform Trend Evident Among Film Villains

Hollywood today is going through a campaign of reform.

One by one, the screen's foremost villains are dropping their villainy to go about doing good in roles that present them to the public in a new, and softer, light.

All the black sheep are turning white in this wholesale metamorphosis, with the result that the list of the reformed is getting as long as the procession of the saved at one of the late Billy Sunday's revival meetings.

On that list, for instance, are to be found such eminent names as Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Basil Rathbone, Albert Dekker and Burgess Meredith.

Meredith, possibly, belongs in a little different category. Perhaps he was more the victim of circumstance in his screen character than just a natural villain.

There's no more shining example of this trend, though, than Albert Dekker. Remember Dekker as "Dr. Cyclops?" Or the brutal mutineer in "Beau Geste"? Now he's doing comedy—actually—comedy. And doing it with an amazing elan, too, playing the role of an obese orchestra leader in "You're the One," in company with such cut-ups as Edward Everett Horton, Jerry Colonna, Teddy Hart and Tom Dugan.

Brian Donlevy, who less than a year ago shared rank with Basil Rathbone as the screen's outstanding exponent of evil—he was successively the bad boy of "In Old Chicago," "Jesse James," and "Beau Geste"—apparently has permanently reformed. He first was presented as a sympathetic character by Director-writer Preston Sturges in "The Great McGinity," and has another pure part in "I Wanted Wings."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 7 (INS).—The gag about the actor who was called to the telephone and when he returned found his picture at Republic was finished, no longer holds good. If I were asked what film company has expanded the most in 1940 I would have to say this same Republic, which only yesterday was a small independent operating on a shoe string. "Sis Hopkins" will cost $750,000 and that is exclusive of the $50,000 paid for the film rights.

PARSONS

Judy Canova, the star, will have a cast surrounding her as big as you will find in any of the major companys' pictures—Charles Butterworth and Jerry Colonna will furnish the comedy, with Bob Crosby, brother of Bing, in the dramatic lead. Susan Hayward is being tested for Sis Hopkins' cousin. Judy's first picture, "Scatterbrain," was voted one of the best general comedies of the year. Gene Autry, as you know, was named as one of the ten best money makers, so Republic, we can truthfully say, has graudated from the "quickie" class.

You'll find David Selznick reading scripts like mad. With "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca" to his credit, two of the biggest money-makers in the history of movies, he is faced with the problem of competing with himself. He has asked Alfred Hitchcock to try and clear the rights to "The Lodger," Mrs. Belloc Lowndes' famous mystery story, which Hitchcock made 12 years ago in London. David will put Joan Fontaine in the woman's part and would like to get Charles Boyer.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan are naming their baby Maureen Elizabeth, after the two grandmothers; The Mary Heath-Harry Ritz wedding is not very far away; George Cukor has summoned all of Tallulah Bankhead's pals for a party at his house Sunday; Penny Singleton and Bob Sparks have gone to Cincinnati to get his parents' blessing; Sylvia Fairbanks made one of her rare public appearances when she visited the Macombo Saturday night with the Jack Warners.

While Ann Dvorak is in Lisbon, she will act at staff writer for the Associated Press, writing about the refugees who are there; Claudette Colbert has gone to Sun Valley to stay until Paramount completes casting on "Skylark"; Madame Schiaparelli will come to Hollywood in the spring to complete negotiations to a dinner dance honoring Deanna Durbin, Mrs. Betzi Beaton Stone and Vaughn Paul.

Seeing June Lang dancing with Johnny Roselli, her bridegroom, didn't look as if they were on the verge, as has been rumored for some time; Mary Beth Hughes still is very sick with the flu; Milton Berle will go to San Francisco with Joe Schenck to act as master of ceremonies for the infantile paralysis luncheon; Betty Grable and Vic Orsatti, an attentive twosome at the Scheherazade; Mischa Auer is planning a Russian New Year's celebration there for the thirteenth.

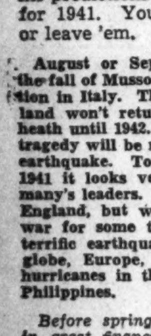

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

We've had numerologists, psychologists, mind readers, crystal gazers, astrologers, but I'll take my fancy predictions from my old friend, Dareos, who's been taking care of Hollywood folk for years. If some had listened, they would have saved themselves lots of heartaches. I like his predictions—here they are for 1941. You can take 'em or leave 'em.

HOPPER

August or September will see the fall of Mussolini and a revolution in Italy. The Queen of Holland won't return to her native heath until 1942. Japan's greatest tragedy will be not from war, but earthquake. Toward the end of 1941 it looks very bad for Germany's leaders. Turkey will help England, but won't get into the war for some time. There'll be terrific earthquakes all over the globe, Europe, also California—hurricanes in the South and the Philippines.

Before spring, France will be in great financial difficulty. He sees the passing of Winston Churchill in 1942, with Archibald Sinclair taking his place.

America can expect a falling off in the stock market in February and March, and during April and May there'll be another flu epidemic. Eastern weather will be very bad. America will make terrific strides in all kinds of machinery, especially radio-controlled airplanes and the death ray. And around the middle of June, Florida should look out for a magnetic storm, with great loss of life.

A good year for Gable. There'll be many rumors of separation, it will all be gossip, and Carole is due for a baby.

Hollywood will have an active picture year. Norma Shearer's light begins to dim. Rumors about Paulette and Charlie, but they won't divorce because they're well mated. Jimmy Roosevelt won't remain long in the picture business. Sam Goldwyn will have one of his biggest years, not in production—in happiness. Lawsuits not too good.

Mary Pickford should watch her health. The young Doug Fairbanks marriage will last. No marriage for Garbo. She'll have a quiet year, except for one picture. Hedy Lamarr should watch out for a terrific scandal which could end her career. Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow shouldn't divorce—result's bad for Myrna's career. And 1941 will be Dottie Lamour's best year.

Bob Taylors will remain together, in spite of plenty of rumors. If trouble comes, it will be his fault. Judy Garland shouldn't marry for a year and a half. The first part of Deanna Durbin's married life will be happy, but she can look for trouble at the ripe old age of 31. Jeanette MacDonald will do all right professionally and matrimonially. Nelson Eddy must stay put.

The Jack Benny's will have unsettled conditions, but will remain together. Bing Crosby's up for a good year. Shirley Temple will come back, but won't be the great star she was. The Johnny Considines can look forward to another baby, and the next after that will be twins.

Suppose I should end up by saying "God bless the Irish!"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 7.

H. C. HOPSON: Isn't your plan now to plead guilty in the income tax cases against you and turn over to the Government your entire fortune of more than $4,000,000? . . . L. B. Mayer: Your star, Spencer Tracy, will do the commentary for the new documentary movie about Mexico which John Steinbeck and Herb Kline have completed. . . . Orson Welles: Dita Parlo, the star of "Grande Illusion," who was unable to get out of France to appear in your movie, "Citizen Kane," at last has been released. Miss Parlo, an Austrian, was placed in a concentration camp by the French last spring despite her protests that she was not a Nazi. The Germans released her, with great ceremony—a parade and blowing bugles. "The Frenchmen I knew," she now states, "were more Nazi than the Germans."

LYONS

NATIONAL PRESS CLUB: Lyle Wilson, head of the Washington Bureau of United Press, will be transferred to Berlin. . . . Dramatic Guild: Sidney Kingsley, who was about to start work on his new play, has just been classified in the 1-A group by his Draft Board. . . . BMI: The new Songwriters Orchestra, conducted by Michael Loring, had a break-in date at Reading, and will start a cross-country tour under the blessing of ASCAP. The musicians in the band will include the authors of such hits as "Whispering," "Avalon," "Umbrella Man," "Blueberry Hill," "Music Goes Round," and "Flat Foot Floogie." . . . Equity: Those old feudists, Fred Allen and Jack Benny, pooled some of their money into backing part of the recent $100,000 flop musical, "All in Fun."

FELIX FRANKFURTER: Last night Marc Connelly and Lucius Beebe discussed the Sacco-Vanzetti case, the defense committee you helped organize, and Gov. Fuller's refusal to spare the lives of the condemned martyrs. . . . Beebe insisted that Sacco and Vanzetti really were guilty and deserved execution. "In fact," added Lucius, "every time I return to Boston I throw flowers in front of Gov. Fuller's house." . . . "Why?" asked Connelly. "To cover the blood?"

JOHN BARRYMORE: Elaine Barrie now is a night-club entertainer at the Bowery in Detroit. . . . Gene Buck: In Moss Hart's new show, "Lady in the Dark," Ira Gershwin, and Kurt Weill, stanch members of ASCAP, decided to be playful. That's why one of the characters sings 32 bars of "Practice Makes Perfect"—the rival BMI hit . . . Howard Hughes: The Harmon Trophy—of which you, Col. Lindbergh and Maj. Seversky have been the only American winners—weighs 360 pounds and, therefore, is too large to display in an apartment. Henceforth reproductions will be made in miniature for presentation to the winners.

CORDELL HULL: One of the Philippines' most important legislators—who came to the States to secure Roosevelt's signature on legislation prolonging Quezon's regime—stopped off in New York long enough to get some rumba lessons at Arthur Murray's. . . . Carmen Miranda: The first featured entertainer to be signed for your Olsen & Johnson "Crazy Show" is Romo Vincent of the Hurricane.

CITY COUNCIL: Mayor LaGuardia's newest $1-a-year-aide is Mrs. Florence L. Shientag, wife of the Supreme Court justice. She's Fiorello's new legal secretary. . . . Cartoonists Guild: Jean Renoir, the French movie producer, who arrived here recently, met Hendrik Willem van Loon yesterday. They found each other perfect models, and spent the day making sketches of each other.

LORD HALIFAX: Harry Hopkins is taking no peace proposals nor deals for Irish bases. His three-week mission will be to confer with Churchill, Bevin, Morrison and Beaverbrook, learn exactly what material England needs and work out a plan of accomplishing this. . . . Hopkins' daughter, in the meantime, has been sent to school . . . His passport arrangements were completed on Saturday. The State Department's passport division phoned the Department of Commerce, which Hopkins once headed, and said: "We have only a 'head' photo of Mr. Hopkins. Have you a 'head and shoulders' picture of him"? The passport division admitted that, for once, they'd abandon the red tape and use the head photo unless a better picture could be obtained. The Commerce Department supplied it.

WILLIE HOWARD: Phil Baker is going to Boston today to see your "Crazy With the Heat" show. If he goes into that musical he has some sketches in which you'll be his stooge-in-the-box . .

WHITE HOUSE CHEF: Eleanor Roosevelt is interested in "The Open Road," an organization which has been sending college students to visit other lands. At the last meeting Mrs. Roosevelt arranged for 80 members of the organization to come to the White House. One of them suggested that it would be nice to have the President there when they dine. "He'll be there, but we won't put it down on his calendar," Mrs. Roosevelt explained. "If the President knows of such dinners in advance he's apt to say that he's too busy, and make other arrangements. And so we won't put this dinner for 80 on the White House calendar yet. We'll surprise him."

Two Eagle Scouts to Watch Parade From President's Box

Two Eagle Scouts to be assigned to the President's box during the inaugural parade January 20 will be chosen Saturday at 7:30 p. m. at Powell Junior High School, the inaugural committee announced yesterday. Selection will be made by a committee of Scout officials from candidates named by each troop.

Meanwhile, Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the finance committee of the inaugural committee, named vice chairmen and other members of his committee. Its function, he explained, will be to raise the guarantee fund to erect grandstands and other structures, revenue from which will not be available until shortly before the inaugural ceremony.

A total of 200 Boy Scouts will be assigned to grandstands as ushers, first-aid dispensers, couriers and guides. In all, 1,000 Scouts will assist in one way or another during the parade and ceremonies.

Of these, 50 will come from Baltimore and a like number from Richmond. Arrangements to care for these youngsters are in charge of James Murray, while Ben Buckner, jr., assistant Scout executive, will care for feeding the Scouts.

Vice chairmen and members of the finance committe named by Fleming are:

Carter T. Barron, Col. Harrison Brand, Jr., Frederick Buchholz, Lee D. Butler, Thomas A. Butt, Morris Cafritz, Thomas Carson, P. O. Caffin, James E. Colliflower, John H. Davis, W. W. Everett, Gerald D. Gromer, Granville Gude, John J. Hasley, Col. John A. Korman, M. L. Langford, William J. McElroy, L. Gardner Moore, Edgar Morris, Henery S. Owens, John E. Parker, William H. Industry to Ask Japanese Crab Tariff Today

U. S. Canners Sell Only Fifth as Much, Hearing to Be Told

In the hope that Government intervention can help it grow to the point where it can employ at least 18,000 persons annually, one of America's youngest industries will ask the Tariff Commission today for protection against competition from Japan.

A committee of nine men, representing crabmeat canners along the Eastern seaboard, will present its case today at 10 a. m. before the commission. Its case, briefly, is that crabmeat canned in Japan by low-paid Japanese labor has been underselling the domestic product for the last year. So great is this competition, the committee will claim, that domestic canners were able to find markets here for only 3,000,000 pounds of their product last year, while Japanese canners disposed of 15,000,000 pounds to American housewives.

Protective Tariff Sought

Wages paid American labor, the committee contends, and hours worked, plus the cost of cans, cartons and other materials, bring the domestic wholesale price to a minimum of $2.50 a dozen cans. Japanese canners, they say, maintained the same price until last January, when they cut their price to $2.15 a dozen. The committee contends American canners are unable to meet this price and stay in business.

It will ask the Tariff Commission today to equalize the prices by a protective tariff. The Japanese canners and importers are expected to reply tomorrow. West Coast canners already have been granted a hearing by the commission, at which Japanese canners did not present a case.

Years of Research

As explained by S. G. Harris, of Beaufort, S. C., chairman of the canners' committee, canned American crabmeat has been on the market only about four years. Its appearance followed years of research dedicated to overcoming chemical conditions which made American crabmeat difficult to can. Success of this endeavor, Harris said, made a new industry possible which employs at present about 3,000 men and women, chiefly Negroes, who had been greatly in need of work.

Continued cut-price competition from Japan, he said, will force this new industry out of business, while protection will enable it to expand and largely take over the Japanese business here in addition to that it already has.

The committee includes Harris, George T. Harrison, of Tilghmans Island, Md.; Earl Dize, of Crisfield, Md.; Floyd Moore, of Hampton, Va.; R. K. Barter, of Stonington, Me.; R. G. Ruark, of Belhaven, N. C.; C. L. Lewis, of Brunswick, Ga., and T. D. Shaw, of Jacksonville, Fla. Its lawyer is Hugh M. Frampton, of Washington.

At a strategy meeting of the committee last night, Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, who aided the crabmeat canners in obtaining the Tariff Commission hearing, expressed optimism over the future of the American seafood industry.

Dr. Vogel Urges Preventive Care In Mental Ills

Keeping people productive and happy was described yesterday as "the biggest problem yet remaining in the public health field."

"Health officers should be concerned with the quality of life as well as the quantity of life," said Dr. Victor H. Vogel, of the United States Public Health Service.

"Over $200,000,000 a year is spent to care for more than 600,000 persons in institutions for mental cases. New cases are being admitted at the rate of about 120,000 a year. States are struggling in an effort to provide beds for this tide of admissions."

Proper psychiatric guidance, given at a public or private clinic, can rehabilitate men and women, enabling one to be self-supporting and content who otherwise would require institutional care, Dr. Vogel said.

He recommended the establishment of mental hygiene programs in all States, counties and cities which have health departments.

Miriam Favors 'Tea Party' for Boston Critics

MIRIAM HOPKINS

Only Dirt in Play In People's Mind, Actress Asserts

By the Associated Press

Boston, Jan. 7.—Miriam Hopkins laughingly favors flinging the Boston City Council into the harbor "the way the tea once was."

The actress expressed her opinion in an interview after the council unanimously adopted an order yesterday calling for a censor's investigation of a new play, "Battle of Angels," in which she is starring.

The vote was preceded by Councilman Michael J. Ward's demand that the police go to the theater and "close it up."

Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty and a censor attended the evening performance and announced the play, writen by Tennessee Williams, could continue if certain lines were expunged.

After a consultation, Timilty said, the management agreed to make the proposed changes. The Theater Guild is presenting the play.

Miss Hopkins said the drama, dealing with a Mississippi delta wife who falls in love with another man while her husband lies critically ill, was "not dirty" and that "I haven't got to the point where I have to appear in dirty plays."

"The dirt is something in the minds of some of the people who have seen it," she added. "They read meaning into it according to their own suppressed feelings."

A Woman's Place Is in Civil Work, Gen. Cox Says

A plan by which women can disprove the adage that "a woman's place is in the home" by doing their bit for the Nation's safety was advanced yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District National Guard commandant and head of local Selective Service administration.

Speaking before more than 40 women at a symposium on speech in the Mayflower Hotel, Gen. Cox referred to many jobs being done in England by women, and pointed out that a similar plan could be applied here to aid the defense program.

"The condition of the world today," he explained, "is no longer serious, but critical. Women, just as men, can have a great part in national security by relieving men of civilian duties."

Mrs. Helen Moorhead, member of the board of directors of the Foreign Policy Association, said the Government is now conducting a survey of jobs in which women can replace men. "When they ask us what we can do, let's be sure it's something, if only a four-minute speech," she added.

U. S. Orders Davis to Face Election Probe

Subpenas Issued For Oil Operator And Associate

Department of Commerce officials announced yesterday that William Rhodes Davis, international oil operator who has been described as the bearer of a German "peace agenda" to the State Department, would be brought before the special District of Columbia grand jury investigating campaign expenditures on Thursday.

Issuance of subpenas requiring Davis and his business associate, Henry W. Wilson, to come to Washington to testify was announced by Maurice M. Milligan, Special Assistant Attorney General, and William S. Tarver, assistant United States attorney. The grand jury is inquiring into possible violations of the Hatch "clean politics" and Corrupt Practices Acts in the 1940 Presidential campaign.

Davis has been described as a large contributor to the Democratic campaign fund in 1936 and to the Republican campaign fund last year. Political conjecture also has been to the effect that it was Davis who put up the money for the "three networks" radio campaign address by John L. Lewis, then president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, in which he appealed for the election of Wendell L. Willkie as President and staked his continuance in the C. I. O. office on the outcome of the election.

Waiting to testify before the grand jury as the Davis announcement was made yesterday was Ernest T. Weir, Pittsburgh steel man and chairman of the Republican finance committee.

Yesterday's witnesses also included Kenneth R. King, assistant treasurer of the Republican National Committee; Oscar Ewing, assistant chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Wayne Johnson, of New York City, and Ross Harris, of the John Price Jones Co.

F. Trubee Davison, curator of the American Museum of Natural History, a former assistant Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, who was chairman of the United Republican finance committee of New York, is to testify today.

In New York, Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, who first disclosed that Davis had acted as the emissary of high Nazi officials in presenting a German plan for a peace conference to the State Department, said:

"If this Administration is attempting to intimidate anyone by the issuance of Federal supenas, then perhaps that democracy of which we heard about from Mr. Roosevelt Monday afternoon is in more serious danger in the United States than even the President realizes."

260th Artillery Studies Itinerary For Trip to Texas

Two days in Federal service, the 260th Coast Artillery spent yesterday groping its way through an avalanche of paper work to set its accounts in order before leaving next Monday for Fort Bliss, Tex.

Between 7 a. m. and 5 p. m. another 200 enlisted men were given physical examinations and word was received that only two of the regiment's 97 officers had failed to qualify physically. Officers estimated that a score or more might have been rejected after induction had the rigid physical requirements of last fall remained in effect.

Dozens of letters from chambers of commerce and governments of cities along the route to Texas were studied. Camp sites for nightly bivouacs and week-end maintenance halts will be selected largely on the basis of information in the letters, staff members said.

Evolution In Aviation

The death of Amy Johnson Mollison is another grim reminder of how far and how rapidly the world has advanced in the art and science of flying. For when she first shot into the world's headlines in 1930, while piloting a light plane from London to Port Darwin, Australia, aviation was still in its pioneering stage. It was being hailed with ever-mounting enthusiasm as a force which, by telescoping distances, tended to bring nations and peoples together.

It has done that all right. But the revolutionary consequences of the development of flying did not end there. In 1930 the grim side of the aviation picture was not yet apparent, although there had been warning signals in the first World War. Now the destructive potentialities of the airplane are being outlined in grim detail. The plane has not only telescoped distances; it has also obliterated the distinction so long and so carefully observed between the soldier and the civilian, between armies in the field and populations behind the lines.

The bombs that fall on belligerent cities and towns do not seek out those in uniform. They treat everyone with satanic impartiality—women and children as well as men. And in the total war of today nations call upon the technical skills of everyone. All-embracing war efforts tax the whole population's reserves of courage, fortitude and stamina.

Amy Johnson Mollison was not technically a member of the British armed forces. Yet, as a flier in the Air Transport Auxiliary, she was performing essential war work. Her untimely death at 32 was a real casualty of the aerial warfare which her pioneering efforts in aviation helped to make possible.

The Quality Of Justice

One of the greatest contributions that has been made to the science of government in recent years is the introduction of efficiency methods in our Federal courts. The Supreme Court has put into effect a simplified code of procedure, probably the best of its kind lawyers have ever devised. And Congress has set up in the Federal judicial system an administrative office which makes possible a more equal distribution of cases among judges and provides machinery for constant study and improvement of judicial practices.

The salutary results of these reforms are already being felt. Under our Federal system, however, by far the greater volume of lawsuits and criminal charges are tried in State courts. The great advance which has been made in the management and working rules of the Federal judicial system will not be fully effective until the State courts have been brought into line. For, as Judge John J. Parker of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals recently pointed out, it is the State tribunals "which affect most intimately the life of all the people."

In an address last week Judge Parker brought to public attention the campaign of the American Bar Association to modernize the rules and practices of State courts. Committees of experts have been at work on this problem for several years. They have brought together in one body of rules improvements in practice which have been tested in various courts in different sections of the country. Many of the States now follow this code in part, but the association is renewing its campaign to secure adoption of all the proposed reforms in every State.

Five objectives are sought: 1. Every State is asked to provide its judicial system with a competent administrative head so that its judicial man power may be used to the best advantage and delays minimized. Judicial councils to study problems of the courts are recommended, and, with the judiciary thus organized, it would be authorized to make its own rules of procedure. 2. The jury system would be strengthened by better means of selecting jurors and by giving judges more discretion in helping juries to understand the law and weigh the evidence. 3. Simplified Federal rules governing trial practice are recommended to the States as a means of attaining uniformity and helping the courts to arrive at just decisions. Pre-trial practice, so effective in narrowing disputes and shortening trials, would thus come into use in the States. 4. The procedure of administrative agencies should be simplified in the interests of efficiency, fair play and equal justice. 5. Appeals should be made less complicated and expensive.

These objectives are wholly admirable in this day when our democracy is being assailed as inefficient. "If democracy is to live," says Judge Parker, "democracy must be made efficient; for the survival of the fit is as much a law of political economy as it is of the life of the jungle." There can scarcely be a greater contribution to the cause of good government than improvement of the quality of justice. The States have a weighty responsibility to bring their judicial systems into line with the best practice that legal minds have thus far evolved.

Spearhead Of Defense

President Roosevelt's executive order creating the Office of Production Management is a positive and hopeful step toward carrying out the national policy which he outlined to Congress on Monday. In speaking of our production for defense, the President told the assembled legislators, "I am not satisfied with the progress thus far made." The reorganization he has brought about is a belated but nonetheless essential move to close the gap between expectations and actual performance in the manufacture of weapons for defense of democracy.

Certainly the Office of Production Management will be a notable improvement in comparison to the present setup. The hard-working men who have been directing the defense program to date have been loosely organized in an advisory commission. Its members have been individually responsible to the President and they have functioned largely as individuals. The new OPM is a coordinated unit composed of William S. Knudsen as director general, Sidney Hillman as associate director general, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox.

The President has delegated substantial powers to the OPM. It is charged with responsibility for formulation and execution of "all measures needful and appropriate . . . to increase, accelerate, and regulate the production and supply of materials, articles and equipment and the provision of emergency plant facilities and services required for national defense." It also has the task of coordinating the activities of the various departments contributing to the defense program; of coordinating the placement of defense orders; of assuring an adequate supply of raw materials; of planning the mobilization of the Nation's production facilities; of controlling priorities and planning additional defense plants where needed. These are broad powers. While the OPM will continue to function under general direction of the President, it is clearly designed to give the defense program the spearhead of centralized authority it has heretofore lacked.

This centralizing trend is carried still further. While power to direct the production of weapons for defense is assigned to the OPM as such, Mr. Knudsen becomes definitely the administrative head of that organization. He is instructed to "discharge and perform the administrative responsibilities and duties required to carry out" the work of the OPM. In this undertaking he will be under supervision of the President and in constant association with Mr. Hillman. Moreover, he will give executive direction to such policies as the four-man OPM may prescribe. But in spite of these restraints, his administrative responsibility for speeding up the output of airplanes, tanks and guns appears to be quite definite.

It cannot be taken for granted, of course, that this improved organization will bring about the speedy armament which the Nation is demanding. Much will depend upon how efficiently the new OPM is administered. It appears to be well designed to bring together the agencies directing our defense efforts and to provide the centralized driving force so essential in any colossal undertaking of this sort. Even the most perfect central organization, however, gives no assurance that men and machinery will be quickly marshaled into an effective working relationship.

The American people should not be allowed to forget that the work of building our defenses in this chaotic and threatening world is only just beginning. The OPM has properly called for the full cooperation of management and labor in the enormous task of making the United States an arsenal for democracy. For, as these defense chieftains point out, "democracy is fighting for its very life in its struggle to retain the principle of a free economic system."

Bergson

The philosophic doctrines of Henri Bergson have had an influence upon contemporary thought and actions scarcely second to those of the late Sigmund Freud. Indeed, it would be difficult to say where the influence of the one ends and the other begins. For, whatever the apparent optimism of Bergson as opposed to the Freudian pessimism, the two are in some sense complementary.

It is fair to say, at any rate, that both Freud and Bergson have contributed tremendously to the anti-intellectual temper of our times. Both have discounted the role that human reason can, or indeed should, play in the ordering of life and of human affairs. For the Freudians all life, all history, all mythology became an expression of an everlasting conflict between the social and the destructive human impulses. Bergson, too, held instinct and intuition rather than reason is the key to truth.

Bergson has been styled both a realist and the most brilliant of the pragmatists. Nor is this a paradox. What he did was to provide a metaphysical basis for the principles elaborated by Nietzsche and Vaihinger in Germany and James in America. He removed spiritual truth from the realm of the abstract and absolute to the realm of mutability. Thus reality becomes a flux, expressible like any other form of motion only in terms of duration. The one constant is the creative idea, the elan vital, whence this evolution of truth receives impulse and direction. As in the new mathematics the same thing does not happen at the same time for any two observers, so in the Bergsonist metaphysics truth is not the same at any two given points of experience.

Freud, unlike most psychologists, was a lucid and persuasive writer; Bergson, unlike most philosophers, was a brilliant and poetic one. These gifts undoubtedly had much to do with the wider and wider influence of their ideas throughout the second and third decades of this century. Thus it is a sad but interesting irony that Freud in his old age became the victim of those destructive and ineradicable impulses which he found in the human soul, and that Bergson lived to find himself unjustly stripped of his honors by a conquering regime, whose leaders in word and action deny any abstract and absolute reality of justice.

Contracts In Writing

Five courts of appeals had upheld the National Labor Relations Board in ruling that collective bargaining agreements must be put into writing before the Supreme Court sustained that interpretation of the law on Monday. Only one court of appeals had taken a different view. Justice Stone's opinion in the Heinz case thus logically follows the predominant reasoning of the lower courts.

Employers are not compelled, of course, to enter into agreements with their employes. All the Labor Relations Act requires is that they bargain in good faith. When an agreement is reached, however, the employer can't reasonably decline to put it into writing and sign it. Refusal to sign a written contract, the court points out, "has been a not infrequent means of frustrating the bargaining process . . ." Unwritten agreements lead to confusion and dissatisfaction and tend to discredit unions relying upon them. "The signed agreement," writes Justice Stone, "has been regarded as the effective instrument of stabilizing labor relations and preventing, through collective bargaining, strikes and industrial strife." So the court concluded that the company's refusal to sign the contract it had entered into was an unfair labor practice within the meaning of the act.

It is well to have this positive and forthright reasoning straight from the Supreme Bench. The cause of genuine collective bargaining can be promoted best by definite written agreements that can be readily understood by both sides. A decision permitting employers to evade an essential step in the bargaining process would have seriously weakened the protection which Congress intended to give to working men.

Better Health, Too

President Roosevelt's call for immediate widening of opportunities for adequate medical care has given impetus to plans for accomplishing that result. Senator Wagner, after a conference at the White House, said he would present a bill somewhat similar to the one sponsored by him which lost out in the last session of Congress. The original plan, which provided for Federal aid to State programs of hospital building, general medical care and other services, encountered objections from the President. The new plan, it is assumed, would be more in line with Mr. Roosevelt's views.

The Senator remarked after his visit to the White House that an expansion of health facilities could be worked out in connection with the defense program. Means for guarding the health of workers in essential industries already are known to be under survey by the Federal Security Agency and the United States Public Health Service, but the nature of any plans under consideration will not be revealed officially for a week or so. Knowledge of how these plans will fit in with Senator Wagner's must await an announcement from one of the Federal agencies concerned.

The public has a vital interest in whatever program may be evolved. The success of the defense effort depends on the health and well-being of the workers. Universal health examinations for them and some method of insuring adequate medical care are indispensable. But any system under which general medical care for these tens of millions would be paid for directly with Federal funds is out of the question.

Funds for the program should, in part at least, come out of the pockets of those who will benefit by it.

DAWN TOO SOON

"It was the lark . . ."

Romeo and Juliet

The night burns to its ending, and the day
Puts out the stars and turns the gold moon white.
No word will halt the westward course of light,
Nothing at all achieve the sweet delay
That would instruct the sun upon his way
To move less swiftly. Now upon the sight
The wonder dies, and soundlessly the night
Has perished. And there is no word to say.

We Have An "Understanding"

The Post Impressionist

O Gentle Joe!

I JUST LOOKED out of my window into the back yard and saw Joe, my cat, walking along the top of the fence. I must say there's something about Joe that I like very much. It may be his air of unconcern or his way of living, but really I think I like him for his disposition. Perhaps the fact that the world is so full of cruelty makes me appreciate very much Joe's benevolent ways.

I found him in my back yard about two years ago, and I built a house for him with a box the grocer had given me. As a kitten he spent his days lying in the sun, cavorting among the flowers and occasionally chasing an orange butterfly.

Later, when he grew up a bit, Joe began to exhibit the characteristics of a boy of 10. He became adventurous, and began to explore one back yard after another. Even an unexpected and exciting encounter with a police dog in the yard down at the end of the block did not abate his strong sense of curiosity. He poked into the neighbors' cellars, stopped to watch the lady planting flowers, talked with innumerable and various cats, walked along a teetering board to see if it would hold and hurt his paw when it didn't and he fell.

His tastes and habits were peculiar, too. One day, to tease him, I gave him a small slice of custard pie. He surprised me by eating it all, and looked up for more. He's the only cat I've ever seen who enjoys conversing with a human being. When I imitate his yowls he imitates mine. The craziest thing he ever did was to climb a 25-foot clothes pole to get at a pair of collegiate-looking socks which were waving in the breeze. The claws of one paw became entangled in some threads, and he had the devil's own time extricating them without falling.

Joe was completely free and unconcerned, a curious and careless liver. Then Kelly appeared on the scene.

No one knew where Kelly came from. One knew only that Kelly had arrived. He was a big, soiled-looking white cat, with a face like a bulldog's and a disposition to match. His right ear was split and he walked with a limp.

Whenever Kelly appeared suddenly on a fence top there would be a mad scramble in all directions of the cats congregated in the back yard. Then Kelly would jump down in a heavy but easy way and finish the food which they had left. He attacked Joe once in our back yard, and there was a terrific battle until I broke it up by picking off Kelly with a rock. Joe was pretty badly beaten up. After that he spent as much time as he could in our house.

A few months after this encounter began a period of nonbelligerence. It may have been that Kelly's leg was giving him trouble, or that he had found other interests, for Kelly was nowhere to be seen. During this period of apparent peace Joe became his usual self again. He sunned himself, he visited and he explored. Then came the crowning stroke of his career—Joe adopted a kitten.

He returned from one of his expeditions to find this thin gray little thing in his box. At first the kitten was afraid of Joe, and hissed a steam-like hiss at him and arched his back. But before long it began to know Joe and they became friends.

After that they shared the same box, and Joe saw to it that she got some of his food. Of course he would not allow the kitten to eat or drink from his bowl first, but he always left something for it.

At this time Joe was a little more than 2 years old and somewhat of a bachelor. Yet he could frequently be seen playing with the kitten or washing the kitten's face with his tongue or gnawing out a kink in her fur. Everything was peaceful and things went well.

But in a few days a snarl and a yowl, then the sound of an overturned box and cats scampering, announced Kelly's return to active service.

One Sunday morning, while Joe was in the house watching me reading the morning papers and the kitten was toddling across the yard, playing with a rubber ball, Kelly suddenly appeared on the fence. He eyed the kitten for a moment, then he jumped down and made directly for it. Joe heard the kitten scream and jumped excitedly up on the window sill. When he saw what was going on he became even more excited. I opened the window and yelled "Scat," but Kelly would not. Then I saw that Joe had jumped from the ledge into the back yard. Kelly saw him coming and released the kitten to get at Joe.

They flew at each other and began to claw, kick and bite. Amid a chorus of piercing snarls and yowls they rolled all over the yard.

The kitten found her way down into the cellar just as I came up with a broom. I whacked Kelly with the stick end, and he just had strength enough to leap up on the fence and drag himself across the other back yards. I don't think he'll be back for a long time.

Later the kitten came out of the cellar, and they had their milk. When they had finished they climbed into their box.

As I sit here now I see that Joe, his eyes blinking in the sunlight, has begun to smooth the kitten's fur with his tongue.

I guess you understand why I like him.

Religion Vs. War

Yes, there is somthing fundamentally wrong with a so-called civilization, as E. K. Goldsborough points out, when a trio of vicious rulers, Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin, are permitted virtually to dominate the globe. Are we who call ourselves Christians so impotent that we must submit to such tyranny?

Following the World War, Armay Godoy wrote: "It would not have happened if those who started it had the right religion. If the Christian world had been united, no one would have dared to start a war. If the 500,000,000 in the Christian world were united, an end could be made of war on the earth. When the Christian world practices the right religion it will be united. The right religion is the religion that appeals to intelligence. The wrong religion is the religion which appeals to the feelings and passions and prejudices and ignorant superstitions." M. B. CHAPMAN.

The devil and the pro-Nazis must have an interesting, to say nothing of gratifying, time these days, sitting in sheltered places watching the different American factions tear one another to pieces.

Mr. Underwood Denies "Old School Tie" Governs England

The final paragraph of my letter to The Post of December 19 reads: "You may say all kinds of things about England but you cannot say she is not a democracy. And you cannot say she has a ruling class." Well, my critics have said all kinds of things, but none to controvert these two assertions, which, indeed, are easily verified by a little research in that magnificent institution, the Library of Congress.

I was glad to have Mr. James H. Whyte's friendly criticism, but to comment adequately on all of his points would demand a dozen or more pages. I therefore confine myself briefly to facts. While it is true that America, thanks to a press without equal in the world, is often better informed of happenings on the other side of the Atlantic than people who live there, she is less well acquainted with the history of social and political progress in the British Commonwealth during the past half century. (I may add that England is much more ignorant of American history.)

I hold no brief for Mr. Ramsay MacDonald; but in fairness it should be said that he died, as he lived, a poor man. I have known many English politicians but cannot recall one, either Conservative or Liberal, who did not, indeed, lose financially by taking up politics. Ramsay MacDonald never owned his own motor car. Though his head may have been turned by the patronage of London's political hostesses, he never forsook his class. He did not even find jobs for his children. His eldest son's wife did her own housework; his daughter kept a small village inn.

As to "Whitehall," that is, the British civil service, self-effacing, hard-working, economical, incorruptible, it is a model of its kind. But it is not staffed from "the privileged classes." Only recently a member of the United States Supreme Court asked me whether it was true that only a man who had been educated at Eton and Oxford could hope for a post in Whitehall. From inside association with all three institutions I was able to assure him emphatically that this was not so, and had not been so for over 50 years. "Whitehall" is open to all by competitive examination. Etonians there are few, Oxonians a minority. Even alumni of the "public schools" are far outnumbered by others. Promotion is entirely by merit. Family and other influences can do nothing. True, most men in the highest ranks have had a university education; but that does not mean they came from a privileged class or even were educated at Oxford or Cambridge.

Great Britain has over 20 universities, including that of London, the largest in the world. A man of sufficient ability can obtain his education free, and a great part of his maintenance also, at any of them. At Oxford and Cambridge more than 50 per cent of the students receive some support, and, from an acquaintenance with four, I should say there are fewer rich (and what else does "privileged" mean?) men at Oxford and Cambridge than at Harvard and Yale.

Much nonsense has been written about "the old school tie"—chiefly by Englishmen. The spirit of the "old school tie," loyalty to one's alma mater, is not a thing for shame. Let me give one example. The world will remember forever what happened at Dunkerque. But not everyone knows that withdrawal from Dunkerque was made possible by a military "episode" which occurred at Calais. To gain time by keeping off the Germans advancing from the south, four battalions of English riflemen were ordered to hold Calais at all costs. For three days and nights against overwhelming odds these men fought in the streets, from the windows and on the house tops. Of 4,000 only 30 survived. Their officers came mostly from one public school. To have done less than their best would have been to let down the school. So they died for the "old school tie." It is one of my proudest memories that I once held a commission in one of those regiments. But I do not wish to give the impression that England's army officers come only from the public schools. In 1914 out of about 5,000 officers in the British army no less than 700 had risen from the ranks, a percentage not exceeded in any other army, and I believe it has since then increased.

As to "privileged classes" at the foreign office, in the years after the great war the minister was usually a self-made, even a labor man: Ramsay MacDonald, Alexander Henderson, John Simon. If foreign policy has not been in the interests of the people, it can at least be said that these men came from the people and were elected by the people. And if the system required reform in a popular sense they were in a position to put it through. Can it be true that not till we come to the Conservative Anthony Eden (Eton, Oxford and of an ancient family) do we get a foreign policy in the interests of the people? If so, there seems to be something to be said for that chimerical "ruling class."

I agree wholeheartedly that Sir John Simon should have taken the risk of cooperation with Mr. Stimson in the Manchukuo affair in 1931. Indeed I have press clippings of speeches I made in America before the present war precisely to that effect. But there are many who think that Anglo-American cooperation in world affairs should have begun at a much earlier date.

Is it fair to say England sanctioned Italian aggression in Ethiopia? Only by a play on the word "sanctioned" I think. Surely England, at great cost to herself, including the ruin of the South Wales export coal trade at the time, gave a lead in cooperative endeavor to restrain Italy, which the other nations failed to implement. Mussolini, at least, has no doubt about it, and makes it his excuse for fighting England today.

Theresa H. Russell asks about the British "Empire." No intelligent Englishman today wholly approves the methods by which the empire was originally acquired. But no "countless legions of conscript British soldiers have been forced to perish on desert sands," because except in the middle of the Great War and again today when we have adopted the same democratic system of military service as that of the United States Army, the British army has always been a volunteer army. No "nations or races are kept by force under British dominion." A simple proof of this is that nowhere in the world are there refugees from British rule. No part of the British Empire pays taxes or tribute in money or labor or any other way to Britain. Far from that, Britain helps to improve the standard of living of the colonies by free gifts of millions of pounds. No part of the British Empire is obliged to buy what it needs from Britain or to sell its products to Britain. The colonies take only 25 per cent of their imports from Britain. More than half their trade is with foreign countries.

Canada, Australia (including Tasmania), New Zealand, South Africa and Eire are all free and independent countries—yes, as independent of Britain as are Brazil or Belgium; some of their tariffs hit British trade seriously; more than one of them restricts the immigration of British subjects. Indeed most of the British Empire has long since come to an end!

Ask Mr. Mackenzie King of Canada, Mr. Casey of Australia, or the great Gen. Smuts, who once led the Boer armies against England, what they think of the British Commonwealth of free nations. The Imperial Conference of 1926, representative of all its components, unanimously passed a resolution saying of it: "Free institutions are its life blood . . . Free cooperation is its instrument."

The President's Speech

IN HIS MESSAGE to Congress, the President enlarged and expanded the essential thesis of his only other speech since reelection, showing more clearly than in the first one the acute danger to this country of a German victory which would lead to Nazi domination of Eurasia and Eurafrica.

He pointed out the extraordinary and unprecedented power complex that would be involved—of population and resources many times that of the entire Western Hemisphere, and of a Nazi-dominated Atlantic Ocean.

THE OBSERVATIONS of the President are the A B C of geopolitics, naval defense and commercial freedom, obvious to any student of history, geography and economics. They involve the issue for which we fought the War of Independence, the War of 1812 and the War of 1917. They involve the fundamental and inalterable truth that the freedom of a nation implies not only its freedom to live in its own way on its own soil, but the freedom of its citizens to travel, and conduct their individual or collective commerce on equal terms with all other nations on the international highways of the world; namely, the oceans and their connecting seas.

No generation of Americans that look beyond their own comfort and convenience to the lives of their children and of Americans yet unborn can avoid the fearful responsibility of the issues.

Were there even no ideological concepts involved; were the German struggle for the immediate domination of Europe, Africa, the Near East and the British Empire, in collusion with Japan, a mere imperialistic struggle along traditional lines, so audacious a program would immediately involve the relative freedom and power of the Americas and the United States.

For, from being the largest single geographically contained free-trade and organized industrial and political area on the planet, we should become a relatively small nation—relatively small in respect to industry, production and military and naval power.

Even granted that no essential differences concerning ways of life as expressed in the political, economic and social sphere divided us from the colossus that would loom from Central Asia to the Atlantic, the pressure of that teemingly populated hemisphere would be upon this one.

And no American government which failed to meet the issue could hope to justify its role in the grandiose history of the United States of America.

YES, THE ISSUE would be there, even presuming the best possible outcome, even presuming that the new order of the Eastern Hemisphere shared, as the British Empire and Commonwealth and the collective nations of Europe have hitherto done, almost identical social-political ideals with ourselves.

The issue would be there if, for instance, Great Britain were the aggressor in this war; if Great Britain were attempting to build a consolidated, British-dominated empire from the British Isles to Central Asia in combination with a Japan who hoped to dominate the Far East and the Pacific.

We could argue that historically Britain has stood for equality of trade conditions and freedom of the seas, but the Americas could not contemplate with equanimity so gigantic a consolidation of power knowing that governments and their policies change and that so titanic and monopolistic an area would sooner or later and inexorably come into conflict with a relatively small but rich and relatively empty and unexploited Western Hemisphere.

Were that the policy of Britain, yes, of Britain under Churchill, this column would have been no less zealous in its warnings to America than it has been in all the years since it began to appear.

FOR RELATIONS of power, of population and of wealth between the areas of the earth politically controlled under single governments determine the personal and collective freedom, wealth and happiness of the citizens of those countries, leaving ideological considerations completely out of account.

And the men who carved this Nation out of a wilderness in only five generations deserve that their heirs should preserve and cherish the power and the freedom that they gave us and pass it on in even greater strength and nobility to those who will walk this soil when you and I are dust.

Nor do I hesitate to say that "Freedom has often required blood for its fuel" and will continue to require it until that time when the human race, adult at last, recognizes the new fact of the world, a fact still too blinding for our adolescent minds, that the "have-not" era is over; that science, technology, the division of labor and the rationalization of production—all products of a relatively few minds and all products of Western civilization—make possible an era in which freedom is compatible with ordered cooperation, and war an anachronism.

NOW, IN THIS CRISIS, the issue is further immensely intensified by the social revolutionary forces that seethe openly or beneath the surface wherever men live on this earth. That, too, the President has grasped, and courageously indicated.

The Nazis spread by the sword the greatest revolution in human history. And this movement is the more confusing and disastrous in that it combines revolutionary and counter-revolutionary forces. For on the one hand, it recognizes more clearly than we the full implications of the scientific-technological world, and on the other it wages war and terror upon the humane values which science and technology must serve if they are to be liberating and not tyrannous forces: if the machine is to serve the man and not vice versa.

This counterrevolution seeks, not integration, into a cooperative order, but gleichschaltung, subservience to an established, Germanic, master-race pattern.

And the political technique by which they enforce subservience is the technique of the gangster and the kidnaper, the technique of holding for ransom.

THIS MAKES ME doubtful whether any invasion of the United States would be necessary for our subjection were we to stand isolated in a Nazi-dominated world. The attempt would be made to bring us to our knees by economic strangulation, blackmail and civil war.

Our immediate markets are in Eurasia, not elsewhere. Whole sections of this country depend for their prosperity upon these markets—the cotton and tobacco planters, for instance, the wheat farmers and the copper mines; and American industry, with a largely internal market, depends in turn upon the relative prosperity of these areas.

A gigantic combination dominating the Eastern Hemisphere and controlling the ocean exits to Asia and Europe could, and, on the record, would, extort internal political concessions as the price of trade; a market for cotton in exchange for the curbing of the press; for oil in exchange for the persecution of the Jews; for industrial products in return for the removal of a government.

And there would be those in this country who would exchange institutions for what would seem, at the moment, prosperity and protection against the revolt of millions and millions of unemployed.

THIS IS NOT going to happen. There is a day ahead in which the flag of the United States will wave highest in this world—the symbol of unity with diversity, organization with freedom, science for humanity, peace and reason.

Provided we will it so, plan it so, and pay with joy.

Historic Bum

WHAT a bum! What a never-to-be-adequately-laughed-at palooka Benito Mussolini turned out to be the minute they rang the bell, yanked the stool from under him and sent him out to fight!

History has given us some memorable bums in the ring and some historic stumble-bums in command of nations, too, but never one like this ludicrous tramp with the silly tassel dangling before his eyes from a trick hat designed to make him look ferocious and scare the world.

Fainting Phil Scott was a bum, but, after all, he was a sportsman and a gentleman, too. He didn't go around blowing his face full of wind like a brat in a tantrum, giving people the glare and telling the world what a killer he was. The old prostrate pompier was just a journeyman bum. His manager would dig up a fight for him, and he never said any more than that he would just do his best and hoped to win.

JOE BECKETT, the human horizon line, as we used to call him, was a bum, too, and Fred Fulton was a museum bum, but they seemed to realize that they were bums and never embarrassed anyone but their handlers when they soared out of their corners and crashed in midring, as thousands jeered.

And, of course, that Kaiser answered the standard conscription of a bum when he yelled the German equivalent of "one side, please!" and high-tailed for Holland, deserting his soldiers and his people when they needed him most.

But what a bum this Duce is, this colossal phony who placed himself at the head of a mob of burlesque-show generals in lion-tamers' uniforms, backed by all the chiseling grafters and the posturing fancy-dans of Italian suburban society who were arching their necks at other men's wives and took over a whole nation as a cheering section for his vanity.

HIS GORILLAS waylaid some individuals on dark streets or mobbed them in their homes and made them drink castor oil and kerosene and told themselves that that was brave going. The muckers all joined up and denounced their love rivals and those to whom they owed honest debts of money and had them killed or sent away to exile camps.

He had big posters made picturing himself in an iron hat in a heroic pose against the sky—against eternity, even—as the greatest man the world had ever known, whose glory would never die.

All this time the big bum was bragging of his invincibility, his indomitable will and telling the world about his irresistible legions. Those legions were something. Four million soldiers he had, in a nation of 40 million, and vast herds of tanks that he liked to show in the movies, snorting over the landscape with himself scowling from an imperial reviewing stand, with his chin thrust out. And thousands of planes darkening the sky and the battalions of foot soldiers marching along telling the world how they loved to cut throats. That was a show for you.

THAT CHIN effect recalls the remark of Jack Dempsey the first time he ever saw Primo Carnera—another bum, though a friendly bum and harmless. Dempsey was old then and out of action, but when he was asked what he thought of Carnera, he said, "My, my! He has a wonderful chin, hasn't he? A big prominent chin. I would love to have a shot at that chin."

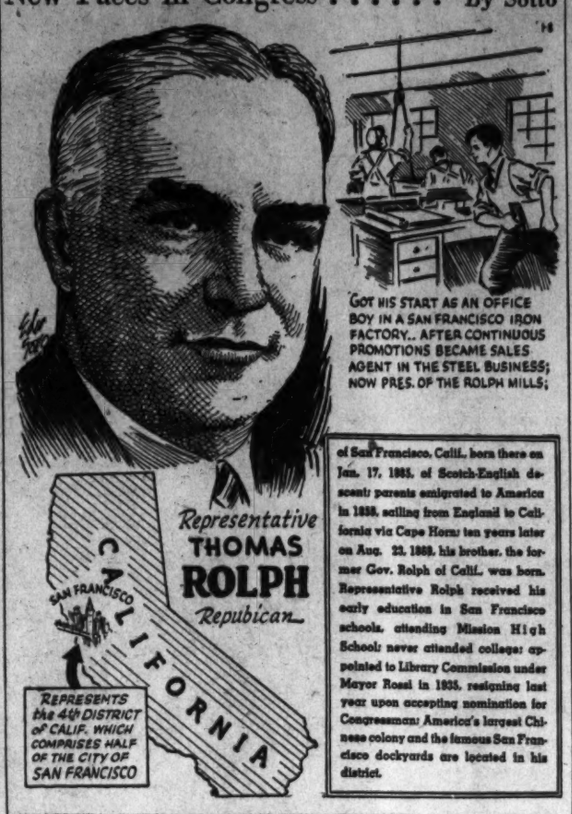

So the bum went to Spain for a little no-decision war, and barely escaped a knockout by a lot of raggedy tramps, and claimed that it was just a gymnasium workout and therefore didn't count. Then he waited until the French were knocked kicking and gave them the foot while they were down. Then he went into Greece, and was chased out so fast by a little scrub army that, in running away, he didn't even have time to take down his own daughter's name from over the postoffice in Porto Edda. And while this was happening the British—those bums who had shown their cowardice at Dunquerque—yelled, "be absent, bum!" and chased the big tramp clear out of Egypt.

So this is the bum of Generoso Pope and the bums of the Italian consular service have been trying to sell to free Americans of Italian birth and descent.

Mussolini! The Duce!

What a bum!

Blueprint For Aid To Britain

IT IS TYPICAL of the President that after playing with a number of other alternatives, he decided to put his "lease-lend" plan for aiding Britain in the form of a request to Congress for broad authorizations for himself. Fortunately, in this instance, there seems to be no wiser and more practical way to handle the problem.

The first clear intimation of his intention appeared in his forceful address to Congress on the state of the Union. Members complained that he failed to supply "blueprints" of his policies. No blueprints were offered because, at the very moment when the President spoke, the House legislative drafting service was just putting the finishing touches to a bill prepared on specifications laid down by representatives of the State, Treasury, War and Navy Departments. The President had settled the principles on which the bill should be written some days before, but he was himself unable to consider the precise details of the measure until he returned to the White House from the House chamber and found the first draft lying on his desk.

IF HE and his advisers are extraordinarily expeditious, the measure may be approved and introduced before these words are printed. Meanwhile it can be stated that if the final version is anything like the draft that went to the President on Monday, the "leasing-lending" system will be simple, flexible and direct. It will not depend on any such cumbersome expedient as a special armament lending corporation, the setting up of which has been reported. And it will be squarely based on the principles enunciated by the President in his statement to Congress.

At the heart of the contemplated system is a simple, discretionary authorization to the President. Under it he could give to Britain, or to other nations, like China, which are also fighting for democracy, any war materials, either existing or in production, which the chiefs of the Army and Navy consider should be given. The President virtually announced he wanted such an authorization, in his message to Congress, when he said: "Taking counsel of expert military and naval authorities, considering what is best for our own security (we should be), free to decide how much should be kept here and how much should be sent abroad."

UNDER THE same authorization, he could also make deals for repayment of the leases or loans of war materials. There is much confusion on this point, since it has been assumed that the "lease-lend" system required return of the war materials themselves, or of equivalent goods. Actually repayment is much more likely to be asked for in raw materials not produced in this country, as rubber, tin and wool from the British Empire, or tungsten and tung oil from China. Each shipment of war materials will thus build up United States raw material credits with our semi-allies. And we can then draw on these credits as the need arises, either when the war is still in progress, or in the post-war economic settlement.

Finally, still under the same authorization, the President could use any part of the money appropriated for American defense to purchase war materials for Britain, China or any similar nation. As this is obviously implied in the first of the principles outlined above, it may not be specifically stated in the bill. Yet the requirements of the semi-allied democracies will clearly be carried in our own defense budget and will perhaps not be differentiated from our own requirements.

ON THE WHOLE, the proposed system ought to work very well. Persons who dislike too broad Presidential requests for power will probably complain that a blank check is asked for. Congressional isolationists will undoubtedly make much of this point. Possibly it would have been wiser for the President to have asked that the desired powers be lodged in a corporation specially set up to exercise them. But this would have made little difference, since the corporation would have been organized under White House supervision and would therefore have been obediently responsive to White House commands.

Practically speaking, if support for the nations fighting for the cause of democracy is a settled American policy, the proposed system is about the simplest and quickest way to implement this policy. Whether the system is administered by the Office of Production Management or by a joint committee of the War and Navy Departments, decisions will be taken on the merits of each case. And thus the chances of the future will be provided against. For example, if the counselor of our embassy at Vichy, Robert Murphy, sends an encouraging report of his visit to Marshal Weygand, the new system will make it easy to include the French Mediterranean colonies among the nations we are ready to support.

IN THE Congressional debate on the lease-lend system, many wild charges will certainly be made, and the isolationists will talk very long. Yet the President has handled the Congressional problem more shrewdly and tactfully than usual. He did not finish his plan until he had consulted his Congressional leaders. He took their advice on strategy, consenting to start the bill in the House. He made Speaker Sam Rayburn the first sponsor of the plan, asking him to bring the departmental experts and the legislative drafting service officials together under his aegis. And in the end, the sentiment in the country seems likely to put the new plan over.

The War In Libya

By Barnet Nover

Britain's Blitzkrieg

WHEN THE ITALIANS captured British Somaliland last August, the Fascist press described the event as one of world-shaking dimensions.

Thus one Gaetano Polverelli, writing in Mussolini's own paper, Il Popolo d'Italia, of Milan, described the loss of Somaliland "as a manifest sign of the inevitable British decline." The whole world, he went on to say, "is witness to the extremely precipitous flight of the British troops, routed by the Italians, who had many old and new accounts to settle with England, and who are settling them so brilliantly." And it was in the same spirit of rhetorical abandon, although with overtones of impending disaster, that Mussolini, in his speech of November 18, praised the "lightning-like attack" of Graziani's forces on Sidi Barrani.

SINCE THEN, the Fascist press and Italian spokesmen have changed their tune. The "well-shaven British gentlemen" who last August, in the words of Polverelli, were put to flight by "these unshaven men, without riches, without such luxuries as biscuits and marmalade" (meaning the Blackshirts), have in the meantime carried out an amazingly successful blitzkrieg in Egypt and Libya.

The assault on Sidi Barrani last month was a crushing surprise, despite Graziani's insistence that it was not. Within a week the whole Italian line from that outpost to the Libyan border had been smashed, with tens of thousands of Italians taken prisoner and considerable stores.

There followed a deceptive pause before Porto Bardia which Graziani attributed to "the valor of Italy's soldiers," but which was principally the result of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's calculations that a prolonged siege would cause Bardia ultimately to fall into his hands like a ripe plum. And that is precisely what happened. Bardia proved no "second Alcazar," as was, for a time, predicted in Rome. Bardia surrendered in little more than two days after the actual assault on the city began, and the victors found themselves with upward of 30,000 prisoners on their hands and much mechanized equipment.

THE BRITISH FORCES are now rapidly moving on Tobruk. On general grounds, that heavily fortified base should prove a hard nut to crack. Wavell's army must now reckon with the bulk of Graziani's forces, which, despite estimated losses of 94,000 men, probably still outnumber the enemy. But there is no telling what demoralizing effect the defeats at Sidi Barrani and Bardia have had on the morale of the Italian troops nor how seriously handicapped the latter are by the loss of irreplaceable material.

In his report to Mussolini on December 22, Graziani spoke bitterly of the lack of armored cars, tanks and other mechanized equipment which had prevented him from taking the offensive in Egypt. It is doubtful if this shortage has since been made good. The supply problem has hardly become easier for the Italians during the past 17 days. Nor can Hitler help his ally overcome this serious handicap.

The only assistance which Mussolini can expect from Germany, so far as the African theater of war is concerned, is in the form of planes and fliers. That may not be enough unless these planes and fliers are sent in far greater numbers than anyone anticipates. And these reinforcements, however great, would suffer from the same supply difficulties that Graziani has been faced with from the beginning.

IT WOULD be dangerous to assume that the fighting in Africa will have a decisive bearing on the outcome of the larger struggle. There is still every reason to believe that the war will be won and lost in the British theater. Nonetheless, there is now a real chance that the British will succeed in rolling up the map of Libya. And if they do, both the moral and material effects of such a development would be considerable.

In the meantime, the Italian cabinet meeting yesterday under the chairmanship of Mussolini adopted a resolution "solemnly reaffirming" Italy's "unshakable fidelity to the Axis and tri-partite pacts." It could do no less in view of the pathetic eagerness to get aid from the Reich. It could do no less in view of the fact that Germany has large numbers of unemployed troops who might be sent across the Brenner. In a very real sense Italy today belongs among the captive nations, the prisoner of Mussolini who is, in turn, the prisoner of Hitler.

U. S. Peace Aims

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Essential Freedoms

IN HIS ANNUAL message the President again brushed aside all thought of a "negotiated" peace. His phrase was "a peace dictated by aggressors and sponsored by appeasers."

"We know," he said, "that enduring peace cannot be bought at the cost of other people's freedom."

He set forth again the four essential freedoms on which he believes a more satisfactory world can be founded. These are:

Freedom of speech.

Freedom to worship as one pleases.

Freedom from economic want.

Freedom from fear, which implies drastic disarmament.

THIS, he said, is not the chart for the millennium but the foundation for the kind of world that can be attained in this generation.

Whether or not such a world can be attained, the indispensable first step toward it is the destruction of the Nazi system. Like Hitler, the President believes that the struggle between the Nazis (and their allies) and the democracies is irreconcilable.

By the President's analysis, a negotiated peace could be no more than a truce. Given the present military situation it might easily be a truce which would make it impossible for the British to resume the war and would swing them into the Nazi orbit. The bargaining power of the British would be improved if the Nazis attempted their long-awaited invasion, and failed. Or, if Hitler became convinced that the attempt would be suicidal. Or if the British could muster the means to lick the submarines. The temptation might be strong in Great Britain to negotiate a peace which would leave the Nazis supreme on the continent.

THE GREAT decision which the British may have to make within the next few months is whether to get the best peace terms they can from Hitler or to commit themselves to fight until the continent of Europe has been liberated.

There is believed still to be in high places in England sentiment for trying to bargain with Hitler. If, and as, the bargaining position of Great Britain improves, this sentiment is likely to grow. For there are many military men who doubt that the Nazi grip can be broken until the continent is invaded and the German armies are beaten in the field.

In their long struggle with Napoleon, the British once became so weary that they submitted to the advice of the "appeasers." The result was the Treaty of Amiens, a lop-sided affair which left Napoleon supreme on the continent and returned most of the overseas colonies which the British had captured. About all the British saved was their navy.

THERE MAY be food for reflection in the fact that that "appeasement" movement was inspired by the British commercial classes. They were distressed by the dislocation of trade and loss of profits, and hoped to recover their continental markets.

In this they were bitterly disappointed. Napoleon wanted a truce only to consolidate and expand his new order on the continent. The ink was hardly dry on the covenant before he began to violate it—by a series of minor actions, no one of which seemed important enough to provoke the British to take up arms again.

The uneasy truce lasted fifteen months. The war was resumed when Napoleon thought he was strong enough to invade and conquer England. His ambition was dashed by Nelson's victory at Trafalgar. But the British, by then, had seen that they could never be secure until Napoleon and his new European order had been extinguished. And they fought on for ten years to the final victory.

That was before the submarine, poisoned gas, and the airplane.

AMIENS WAS not fatal to Great Britain. A truce with Hitler might well be. It would take the starch out of the captive people of the continent, and give Hitler a chance to replenish his supplies. If the British demobilize they lie open to a surprise Nazi assault. No alternative to complete defeat for one side seems feasible now except a peace leading to active collaboration between Great Britain and the Nazis.

Such collaboration, the President believes, would be disadvantageous, and probably acutely dangerous, to us.

The President, in every way short of full belligerence or the promise of it, is trying to undermine "appeasement" sentiment in England, as well as here. The sending of Harry Hopkins to England is part of this effort. Hopkins is not only the President's closest and most trusted friend. By background and general outlook he is especially fitted to talk with the British labor leaders. They are committed to the destruction of Naziism, and are working on plans for the reconstruction of Europe.

Hopkins may be helpful, not only as a reporter, but in doing some groundwork for a statement of peace objectives which will squelch the "appeasers" in Great Britain as well as here.

Heavy Demand for Midget Furniture

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 7 (AP).—Next Christmas, says Mrs. Dorothy McWilliams, the WPA Recreational Center is going to make 2,000 pieces of its "miniature furniture" for distribution to needy children.

The center turned out about 200 pieces for Christmas gifts last month, and found "they were simply not enough, so popular did the toys become."

The furniture was small-scale copies of new and antique styles, made out of cigar boxes, plywood, and scrap wood, Mrs. McWilliams, director of the recreational center, said. The workers turned out cradles, rockers, chairs, tables, settees, beds, desks with tops, and other types of household furnishings. Some of the furniture resembled that at Wakefield, George Washington's birthplace, but "that was just coincidence," Mrs. McWilliams added.

Manassas Fitting Virginia Youths for Defense Work

By Robert Devore
Post Staff Writer

Manassas, Va., Jan. 7.—Amid the noble boxwoods of the old Swavely School here where young Virginia gentlemen once prepared for college and where, before that, young Virginia ladies read their classics, the Commonwealth and Uncle Sam are fitting Virginia farm boys for work in the Nation's defense factories.

From one end of the State to the other, National Youth Administration supervisors have selected 300 boys, whose families no longer were able to send them to school, for a year's training on the old campus and in the fine academy architecture just across the road from the Southern Railway depot.

The institution now goes by the somewhat unacademic name of the Manassas State Vocational School and NYA Resident Project. It used to be known as the Eastern College for Women, and, earlier, in the 1890s, as the Eastern College for Men, before Eli Swavely, now a private tutor in Chevy Chase, Md., came there for a few years to run a preparatory school specializing in West Point and Annapolis candidates.

Swavely closed his school in 1934. In the following years the buildings fell victim to vandals and lack of repair. The lawns grew high and the boxwoods rank.

The new school came last September. Presently, the lawns regained their close-cropped green. The boxwoods were trimmed. The buildings were made inhabitable. The plumbing was restored, the heating plant rebuilt.

The transformation at Swavely was the work of the boys. It was at the same time a vital part of their training. The instruction theory on which the school was founded—half textbook study and half work for an eight-hour day—was put into play at once.

Already an old barn on the 40-acre campus has been rebuilt into an electrical shop with transformers for supplying the school's power. The boys have set out ten telephone poles in a line as true as any power line.

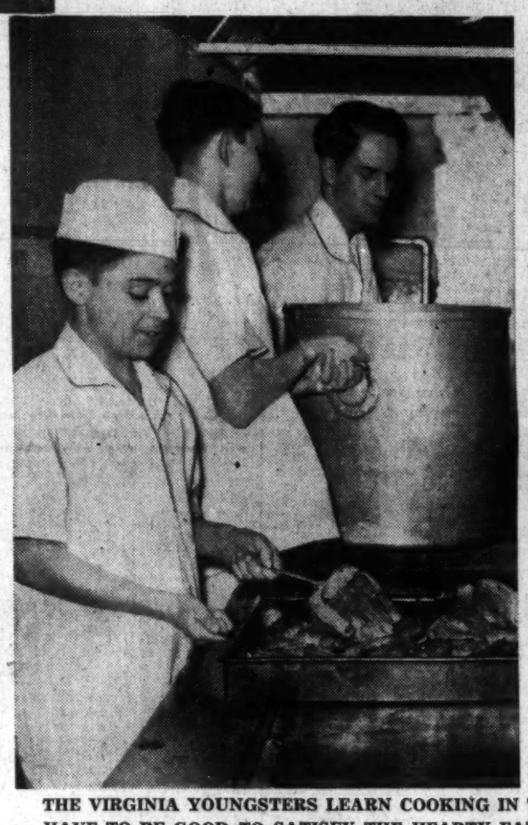

Their biggest undertaking is the main shop building, which is being put up entirely by boy craftsmen. In 2½ months, one-half of the building's ultimate 50,000 square feet of floor space is under roof.

In this building the students will work at their trades—painting and decorating, carpentry and cabinet-making, sheet metal and air conditioning, auto mechanics, machine shop practice, acetylene and electric welding, blacksmithing, plumbing and steamfitting and shoe repairing. While the work of restoration was going on and the shops were being built around them, they've already made metal waste baskets for public schools and repaired the steel smoke stack at a Manassas school and 1,700 pairs of shoes for welfare agencies.

When the boys come to Arthur E. Jakeman, school director, and his staff, their aptitudes are analyzed and they are assigned to a trade. When they leave a year later, according to Jakeman, most of them are capable of doing skilled tasks without supervision. A survey of graduates—the school operated at Fort Eustis, Va., for 2½ years before the expanding Army moved it out—has shown that 95 per cent of them find employment almost at once.

The State pays the salaries of the school faculty, which includes M. S. Burchard, assistant director; C. S. Berryman, head of the work department; J. Vincent Davis, senior instructor, and Dr. H. H. Hemming, dean of men. Cost of materials and $30 monthly pay for each boy—he turns $20 of it back for room and board—is paid by the NYA.

Communities near Washington are well represented. Roscoe Landis, who is learning cooking in the kitchen, is a protege of Mrs. Everette McIntyre, of Arlington; Norman R. Anderson, Alexandria, is learning carpentry; Raymond Williams, also Alexandria, auto mechanics; Claude A. Cash, Arlington, the same trade; Charles E. Cattlett, Front Royal, sheet metal; James R. Devine, Vienna, carpentry, and James E. Eilers, Herndon, and Press W. Jenkins, Culpeper, painting.

Text of Bullitt Speech Urging All-Out Aid for Democracies

Following is the text of former Ambassador Bullitt's speech at Chapel Hill, N. C.:

The 5th of December, 1938, it was my privilege to accompany President Roosevelt on his visit to Chapel Hill. The President began his address that day by quoting the words: "We live in a world of change."

The speed of change has been so accelerated since the President spoke those words that it has become enormously difficult to "see life steadily and see it whole." Nations have lost their independence in a few hours. Shrines and landmarks of centuries have been blown to dust in a night. The world of yesterday does not exist today. The world of today will not exist tomorrow.

We are trying to live our lives in peace, in freedom and in Christian decency on an earth where there is little peace, less freedom and a constantly diminishing area of Christian decency.

Geography Is Shrunken

Moreover, we are obliged to think of our relations with other nations in terms of a shrunken geography. For the first time in our history the war machines of Europe can reach the Western Hemisphere in a few hours. The physical isolation in which we have lived and developed our own way of life is at an end. Whether we like it or not—and most of us don't like it because we were happy in our isolation—the earth has been so contracted by the airplane that in a very real sense all the nations of the world have become our neighbors.

Another invention has abolished distance completely for the ear. The radio enables us to hear instantly a voice speaking in any spot on earth. We can no longer ignore ideas on other continents. They are in the air, in our homes, our offices, and our automobiles. There is an old and noble saying: "Nothing human is alien to me and my brother's sorrows are my own." So also today is his propaganda.

The moral change which this shrunken world has suffered is even more bewildering than the geographical change produced by the radio and the airplane. Before 1914 all the nations of the earth accepted in one form or another the ethical principle of Christian life—the great Commandment: "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you." The Chinese phrased it passively in the words of Confucius saying: "Do not do unto another what you would not wish him to do unto you." The Mohammedans and the Buddhists had their phraseologies. But all men, except a few tribes of savages, bowed to a moral doctrine that was either that of Christ or close to that of Christ.

Were Ashamed to Kill

The Emperor of Japan, the Czar of Russia, the Emperor of Germany, the Emperor of Austria-Hungary; like the King of England, the King of Italy, the President of France, the President of the United States, and the heads of all smaller nations, were linked by a community of moral doctrine. All were ashamed to kill without due process of law, to be cruel, to lie, to break their pledged word. A unity of moral outlook had replaced to some degree the old unity of Christendom. If men did not live up to their principles, they at least felt a sense of guilt when they did not; and if their principles did not guide their actions, at least they restrained their actions. The rulers of all nations spoke the same moral language.

The community of moral outlook which existed before 1914 exists no longer. The Bolsheviks in Russia were the first rulers to deny the validity of Christian ethics when they declared: "Religion is the opium of the people," and instituted a government of the people, by the dictator, for the bureaucrats: a government based on secret police and firing squads under which only an obedient slave can enjoy relative security.

The Fascists in Italy followed, but discreetly, since they knew that the Catholic Church was Italy's greatest asset and feared to lose that asset. But they installed the lie, the pledged word given and broken, as their chief weapon in international politics.

"A Genius of Evil"

The Nazis under the leadership of a genius of evil then turned their backs on all the moral teachings of Christ, Mohammed, Confucius and Buddha, and announced that the highest virtue was to be hard and that there was one master race—the German—which was superior to all other races, that this race had the right to conquer Europe and then the whole earth and rule triumphant over a world of slaves.

The Japanese, meanwhile, rediscovered a divine mission for themselves, and to prove their moral superiority began to disembowel the Chinese with their bayonets.

In the course of a few brief years Russia, Italy, Germany and Japan turned away from even lip-service to the moral principles which had been accepted generally throughout the world before the war of 1914. The speed of this transformation seems extraordinary until one considers that the moment a dictator seizes power he establishes immediate and absolute control over all avenues by which thought can reach the human brain. He controls the press, the radio, the motion picture and all speech. He shields his people with the utmost care from the intrusion of truth. And into them he pours propaganda. No man in any totalitarian country, in these days of dictaphones, can express an opinion at variance with the dictator—even privately to his most intimate friends or his family—without risking a firing squad.

"A Creed of Cruelty"

Moreover, there are in the human animal powerful and imperfectly repressed instincts that respond to the dictators' creed of barbarism. Evolution is a long and slow process, and in spite of 20 centuries of Christian civilization a savage hides beneath the surface of each civilized man's nature. Hitler was able to force the people of Germany—who had given the world Goethe and Beethoven, and had given the United States so many splendid citizens—to adopt a creed of cruelty, because he offered an enjoyable outlet to the primitive anthropoid who lurks in man and delights in cruelty and slaughter.

In our country, we still are free men—the heirs of 20 centuries of Christian civilization. Our homes, our communities, and our Nation are founded on our belief in the eternal verity of the teachings of Christ. Our lives are so permeated by this belief that we almost forget it exists. It is as present and impalpable as the air we breathe. We are so accustomed to living in liberty and Christian decency with free churches, free speech, a free press, and free discussion that we forget that these are luxuries which now can be enjoyed in only a very few countries. And we are apt to forget that when freedom leaves, fear enters.

Unless one has lived in countries where a man does not know whether the workman on the bench next to him, or his closest associate or friend, is, or is not, a secret agent of the all-powerful dictator—where every man and woman fears to hear in the night at the door the knock of the secret police—it is difficult to comprehend the degree to which fear dominates human life when freedom is destroyed, or the horror that life becomes when lived in total fear.

Can't Believe Dictators

Existence in the totalitarian states is not life as we Americans understand life, but is living terror.

No bridge of understanding can be built between our nation and the totalitarian states, because a minimum of good faith is as necessary for friendly understanding between nations as between individuals. The dictators have proved to us that we cannot believe a word they say or trust a pledge they make. They have discarded for themselves and for their peoples the whole code of international morality. Force unrestrained by morality is their creed. Their threat to us is a threat not only to our independence but also to all that we care about on earth. Our country is in danger. Our way of life is in danger. Our Christian civilization is in danger. We can expect no mercy or honor in their dealings with us. And we face the threat of this new barbarism on a shrunken earth.

To carry out their plans of conquest, Germany, Italy and Japan leagued themselves together by an agreement signed in Berlin on September 27, 1940. The threat of ultimate war against us is contained in that agreement has since been underlined in red by the Chancellor of Germany, by the foreign minister of Japan, and by spokesmen of the Italian government.

How are we going to meet that threat?

Sense Is Called For

At no time in our history has there been greater need for clear thinking by all Americans. We cannot solve this problem by emotional reactions or epithets, or good intentions or high-sounding words. We have to think hard in the old American way—with cracker-barrel common sense.

Let us begin by remembering that the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, even in these days of airplanes, are formidable obstacles to invasion of the Americas. So long as the British navy continues to hold the Germans and Italians on the other side of the Atlantic, while our fleet watches in the Pacific, we have the practical equivalent of a two-ocean navy. This is the situation today. But if the British navy were eliminated, we should have a one-ocean navy—and we would still have two oceans to defend. And a one-ocean navy can cover two oceans just about as well as one pair of pants can cover two pairs of legs.

We are building ships of war as fast as we can, but we shall not have a two-ocean navy until 1945. If, before that time, the British navy should cease to defend the Western Hemisphere on the Atlantic side, we should be able to protect either the Pacific Coast or the Atlantic Coast; but we could not protect both. Without the British fleet, we could not bolt both the front door and the back door of our national home.

Warns Against Optimism

Some people faced by this fact comfort themselves with the belief that even though Great Britain should collapse, the British navy would continue to fight and hold the Atlantic for us. Unfortunately, we cannot shape our national policy on pure optimism alone. The present government of Great Britain would no doubt desire the fleet to continue to fight even though the British Isles should have been occupied by the Nazis. But when disaster overwhelms a country, its government falls. The French government of Reynaud desired the French navy and army to base themselves on North Africa and continue to fight against Germany. That government fell, and the French army and navy were withdrawn from the struggle. In the face of this recent example, it is not wise to be too optimistic about a continuance of war by the British navy—if we should be so blind as to permit by default the conquest of Great Britain.

We know that Latin America is vital to our national defense. But if we are thinking honestly we have to admit that in many states of Latin America there are strong totalitarian elements. If Great Britain's resistance to Germany and Italy should collapse, the way would be wide open for the installation of totalitarian government in one or more states of South America. Recently a distinguished opponent of President Roosevelt's policies argued that even if the dictators should control all South America as far north as the Equator, we could still be safe. The experience of cities in England has shown that the Panama Canal cannot be made secure at this moment against bombarding planes based on South America. If the Canal should be put out of commission, our one-ocean Navy would be fixed in one ocean, and the other ocean would become a broad highway—open for invasion.

More than 90 per cent of the human race would be controlled by the dictators and be organized against us. A Japanese iron ring around Asia and Australasia and a German iron ring around Africa and Europe, including Great Britain and Ireland, would cut us off from trade with so great a portion of the earth that we—in a mutilated stump of the Western Hemisphere — would be thrown into economic disorder. The standard of living of even the poorest American would be gravely reduced. And we should have to try to support with our crippled economic system armaments colossal enough to resist the whole world. How long under those conditions could we keep alight the flame that was kindled on the Fourth of July, 1776—the flame of freedom for all men?

Because it is disagreeable to look at these facts, there are still a few Americans who close their eyes and mumble that we ought to try to come to some reasonable understanding with the dictators. Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway and Denmark did everything they could to avoid displeasing the Nazis; but they were attacked as ruthlessly as if they had acted with outright hostility to Germany. Their fate has shown what happens to nations that try to appease the Nazis. Yet those who cannot bear to look at the harsh reality still comfort themselves by dreaming that we can get close to the dictators and establish cooperation with them. That kind of wishful thinking reminds me always of the old limerick:

"There was a young lady of Niger,
Who went for a ride on a tiger,
They came back from the ride,
With the lady inside
And the smile on the face of the tiger."

If we cannot appease the dictators, and if the victory of the dictators would have such tragic consequences for ourselves, what should we do?

"Answer Is Obvious"

Help the British! Help the Greeks! Help the Chinese!

That answer is obvious.

Help how?

We hate war and because of that hatred the question of entering this war as a national policy does not even arise. We know that the surest way to defeat the Axis powers is for us to go to war in support of Great Britain, Greece and China, but we hate war so much that we prefer to take a chance on the ability of the British, the Greeks and the Chinese to defeat the dictator powers without direct military assistance from us. We know what the consequences of totalitarian victory would be for us, and we are taking this risk with our eyes open. Unquestionably the people of the United States at this moment prefer to take this risk rather than go to war.

How can we diminish the risk?

Calls for All-Out Aid

Only by giving to those who are fighting the Axis powers every possible supply, material, munition, and arm than can be of use to them. We must give what they need, not what we think they need, not what we think we can comfortably spare. We can not, in our own self-interest, give less than what they need. If we have not got what they need, we must produce it and produce it fast. Merchant ships, war vessels, airplanes, guns, munitions, steel, wheat—all that we give will be used in defense of our own security.

If we should stack the cards against the British by withholding what they need and we have, we would condemn ourselves to war at a day not distant, alone, without allies, and unprepared.

It was so greatly to the advantage of the totalitarian states to have us stay out of war while they are attempting to conquer Great Britain, Greece and China, that they will almost certainly not make war on us so long as Great Britain stands—no matter how much material aid we furnish and no matter what form that aid may take. The dictators will fume and fulminate but they will not risk declaring war on us unless they first have conquered Great Britain.

"We Must Buy Time"

Each day that the British, the Greeks and the Chinese hold out increases our own readiness to parry attack. But it is no secret that today we are far from prepared. We must buy time in which to prepare. We can buy that time only by helping the nations that are now holding the totalitarians away from our shores.

The totalitarian governments have expressed the opinion that we are already too late—that nothing our "clumsy democracy" can now do to accelerate production will produce enough weapons in time, and that they will conquer Great Britain before we wake up.

Our method of production during the past six months has been the comfortable and lazy one of superimposing production for defense on the normal business of the country. That was the method employed by France and Great Britain before they were drawn into war. It led to the defeat of France and to the deadly peril in which Great Britain now finds herself. It has failed us, as it failed them. And the President has now declared that production for defense must take precedence over other production. The Nation, from East to West, from North to South—every man, small or great—must respond to the President's leadership. This response will constitute the acid test of our democracy, of our ability as free men, acting of our free will, to banish every thought of self and selfish gain.

People As a Unit

The problem of increased production cannot be solved by any small group of men, however able they may be. It can be solved only by the whole American people working together as a unit. Without being in war, and in order to keep war from our shores, we must now produce instruments of defense as fast as though we were in war.

To find within themselves the will to work as if they were in war is hard for men who live in peace. But the instinct of self-preservation should tell each individual American that the very existence of all that he holds dear depends now on his own efficiency and his own readiness to work and to sacrifice for his country.

We read each day in our newspapers and we hear each day on our radios the news from London, and we should all know now just what Churchill meant when he promised his countrymen nothing but "blood, toil, tears and sweat." If we toil and sweat now—but only if we do—we may be able to escape the blood and tears.

"Asked to Fall on Knees"

At this time of danger each American must ask himself each day not what he can get from his country but what he can give to his country, and must ask himself each night "Have I given enough?"

We are told by propagandists for the dictators that our democracy is outworn, inefficient, a thing of the past, that our Government of the people, by the people, and for the people is sure to perish from the earth. We are asked to fall on our knees before a system in which one man decides for all other men what they shall think, eat, drink, wear, and do; a system the essence of which is fear, the secret police, the firing squad, the concentration camp and torture. We are told that this is "the wave of the future."

But we know that through all changes on this earth, there is that which does not change: the eternal nature of the Commandment: "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you." We know that no "wave of the future," no firing squad, no torture, can change that truth. It has already hung on the Cross.

The totalitarian dictatorships have turned their peoples away from that truth and are trying to impose on Europe and the world what they call a "new order." By their works we know them, and we know that their "new order" is a very old order indeed; the foul, old order of slavery.

Wave of Freedom

Our forefathers died for the right of a man to bow to no master but God. They started the wave of the future: a wave which has not yet even begun to reach its crest. The wave of the future is freedom, democracy, peace. The wave of the past is slavery, dictatorship, war.

Our forefathers took this continent and made it a good land for men of every race to live in. We, too, can turn our faces into flint. We have in our American loins the strength of every people. We are, in living truth, a brotherhood of man. And we can take the future as our forefathers took the past. The inventions that have shrunk the world are now being used for slaughter and propaganda. We can use them to establish peace and spread truth.

In this past year, men of good will throughout the earth have felt more deeply than for centuries the need for a unity of Christendom. Each one of us, each individual American, has his place today in the construction camp of Christendom.

We know how to work; and we know how to fight; and we know what it is to be free. The slaves of the dictators are not the future. We are the future.

And the future is ours!

Modern Miss Gets Glove Cue From Pilgrims

Those Conservatives Went In for Gay, Fringed Gauntlets

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

AUSTERE Pilgrim fathers gave the modern woman the cue for wearing gloves to add spice to her costume. These forefathers could not suppress an innate love for decoration. They wore gauntlet gloves, heavily embroidered and fringed, to liven their dark, conservative costumes.

Women today depend upon gloves to supply the color note for their costumes, and especially at this time of year to give their winter wardrobe a life. In buying gloves now, women naturally want to look ahead to what will be popular later. In the spring scene they will find Pilgrim fathers gauntlets echoed through a modern interpretation of the Western and Mexican theme in gloves.

Casual Styles Best

"Casual" is the word for many of the new gloves. Flared guantlet types and simple gloves, "custom made" in appearance, are the mode. They boast details of fringed effects, beadwork, nailheads buttons and military and patriotic motifs.

Stitching is the outstanding effect on many of the new gloves. It takes on as many different forms as the fancy can create—diagonal, crisscross, zigzag, saddle stitching and others.

Color is the keynote of these classic casuals. Saddle tones predominate from the beautiful California version to orange, antique and brown varieties. California Redwood is the newest in the saddle family. Navy, a natural for spring, takes its usual lead. Abode, a new clay or pottery color, is favored, especially in doeskin. Red is a "must," the new yellow red being preferred.

Western Influence

Rustic rawhide pigskin adapts well to novelty stitching and other Western effects. Kid, cape, cabretta—similar to cape, glace—meaning any lightweight leather, goatskin, deerskin and mocha are leathers that appeal to American taste.

Jaunty gloves are not the only type popular in the spring trend. For the more feminine taste, there are long button gloves, usually more than four buttons. They are classic in line and either devoid of decoration or are decorated with delicate hand detail. Often they emphasize the silhouette by color, as brilliant Kelly green—a coming favorite.

As a happy thought, why not play the field with these new gloves for color and decorative accent? Some styles are designed to add a clever jovial note to the costume. Although not so practical, they are designed to have fun with, such as long fringe and nailhead decorations on brilliant colored gloves.

Other gloves may add smart accents and yet be practical. A simple styled glove in a light color, as saddle tan, is an unmatched combination for navy blues, browns and other basic colors. Ensembles, conservative in color, can be worn several seasons by the simple addition of bright accessories.

Keep the Flavor In Sausages

You will get best flavor results from link sausages if you cook them this way: Lay sausages flat in a frying pan, add a little water. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Drain off any water and cook the sausages uncovered until well browned. Turn with a fork, taking care not to pierce skins.

Brighter Gloves Herald Spring

Just like a kitten, new spring gloves don't rebel at washing—they love it. These washable doeskin Kislav gloves are typical of the popular longer length glove which is vying with the new short casual length for spring approval. A pair of these gloves in beige, Mexican, saddle colors or orange red will do wonders to an old winter dress.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

'They'd Never Be Missed'

WEARING her new spring hat, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, announced at her press confeence yesterday her personal credo for 1941.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I want to get a lot of reform work done during the coming year," said the famous crusader, "and so I have decided to make a ruthless revision of my list of so-called friends. While observing the human race at Palm Beach over the holidays, I reached the conclusion that life was becoming more complex every day—as well as shorter—and that what we all needed was to sweep a lot of the human underbrush out of our lives. Consequently, I have resolved that I will waste no more of my valuable time on people who handicap me or generally depress me.

"For example, I shall no longer have time for persons that I have to be careful about mentioning things before. Life is difficult enough as it is without having to remember anybody's pet peeves or prejudices in regard to politics, religion or what-not.

Intends to Quit Walking on Eggs

"I shall no longer have time for persons who have to be handled carefully for fear they will explode, or for persons with chips on their shoulders, or for those who are always on the lookout for slights and eagerly waiting to don the crown of martyrdom.

"I shall have no time in the coming year for brusque persons who break in with "Oh, I don't think that way at all!

"I shall certainly have no time for infantile grown-ups who stage temper tantrums.

"I shall have no time for persons who tell me things for my own good. Since we all know that our friends freely criticize us behind our backs anyway, why on earth should we have to have a double dose of the same thing?"

"I shall have no time for irresponsible people who are always half an hour late—nor will I have any time for those maddening self-righteous pests who arrive ten minutes ahead of time to my own discomfiture.

"I shall have no time for people who try to drive or flatter me into doing things I don't want to do.

"I shall have no time for long-winded people who tell of what happened to them or somebody they know, or what Mike said to Pat.

Announces Ban on Dilatory Guests

"I shall have no time for people who can't say good-by at the door in five minutes, or who call up on the phone and talk for an hour, or who burst in on me at my home or my office without due warning.

"I shall have no time for women who talk about their stemware and their silver patterns and what their husbands think about the European situation.

"I shall have no time for boorish men who have to be drawn out, flattered and cajoled to get them to talk at social events.

"I shall have no time for balloon people who use fancy words and false accents and put up a false front; nor for arty people who 'cannot live' unless they are surrounded by beauty; nor for fussy people who argue with tradesmen, make scenes in restaurants and have to have every detail of their surroundings just so.

"I shall have no time for moody people, childish people, temperamental people, neurotically antiseptic people, professionally optimistic people, moralizing people, opinionated people and above all unadaptable people. I shall have no time——"

"Just a minute," Mrs. DeGoofey, interrupted an editorial writer, "did it ever occur to you that you might have no friends left?"

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Town Five Months, Girl Government Worker Has Had Three Marriage Proposals; She Holds 'Rosemary' at Fault for Failing to Win Beaux

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading "Rosemary's" letter in The Sunday Post, I feel that I must write to say that her failure to meet any men, during her five years here, is entirely her own fault. Even though I have writers' cramp from answering Christmas mail, I want to supplement your reply to her.

I came to Washington five months ago from Michigan, to accept a Civil Service position with the War Department. At present, I have almost as many beaux as I had at home. I have had three proposals of marriage in these five months. But I seem to have a heart with a revolving door, which admits a new love as the old one exits. I am not pretty; I dance badly, and I am a poor conversationalist. But, at 23, I am far from being "socially stagnant."

My parents are dead and I am the only sister of four brothers. I have lived with them my entire life and I know whereof I speak when I say to Rosemary that men are just as eager for love and marriage as girls are; just as hopeful of meeting "the right one." There are many men from "back home" working here in Washington,—living like "hermits," as Rosemary is, because of their lack of "social sense."

To the list of suggestions you have given Rosemary, for enlarging her circle of acquaintances and making herself more attractive, I wish to add Mrs. M. V. de-Roquelaine's Social Club, which came into existence in the War Department. Mrs. de Roquelaine organized the club for girls and men in Rosemary's predicament—so that they can make friends. Everybody goes "stag" to the club's social affairs. Mrs. Roquelaine came here as a Government worker during the last war. She has "lived" Rosemary's problem, and knows from experience how lonely Washington can be for young persons who are "socially stagnant."

Rosemary might also attend the Y. W. C. A. dances, held every other Friday night at "Y" headquarters at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest. Or the Y. M. C. A. held every Saturday night. She might join an organized hiking club, such as the Wanderbirds or Capital—which have other parties, too.

What bothers me is Rosemary's inconsistency. She probably traveled thousands of miles, alone, to accept a Government position here in Washington, on her own. Yet she hesitates to venture out, alone, to a social gathering. I ask you—isn't that inconsistent? Of course, there are a great many "wolves" in Washington, but Rosemary should be able to take care of herself, at the age of 25. It seems to me if Rosemary were to put as much thought and preparation into a campaign to meet men, as she did in order to succeed at her Government exams, she could get that husband she wants.

And what's wrong with admitting she would like to be married? Most Government girls, when asked their ambition, will say, "I want to be a stenographer," or "a secretary." Why can't it be just as correct, socially, to admit the deeper truth—that they want to be a wife and a mother? Hermit Rosemary must remember that happiness is like a kiss—one must share it to have it. Sincerely yours, RHEA MARIE M.

Writer Artlessly Reveals Secret of Her Charm

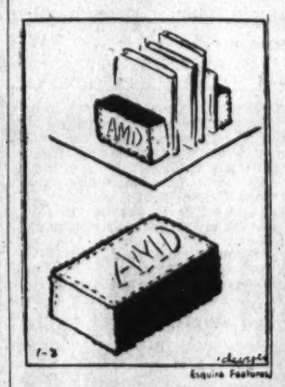

DEAR RHEA: There is more to your letter than apears on the surface. Your "do-something-about-it" interest in Rosemary's problem of loneliness, which drove you to write this letter for her benefit—despite the fact that you already have "writers' cramp" from answering Christmas mail—shows why you have a superabundance of friends and beaux and popularity and love. All unawarely, you have given Rosemary the clue to the basic solution of her loveless predicament.

It may be true, as you say, Rhea Marie, that you are not pretty; that you dance badly; that you are a poor conversationalist. But you have charm—which is more important. You have that irresistible magnetism which belongs to the person who is warmly and genuinely and spontaneously interested in the other fellow and his problems. Your responsiveness to the needs of your fellow beings is what attracts them to you as the flower attracts bees.

The unintentional contrast you have drawn between yourself and poor Rosemary—who is utterly self engrossed—is the most potent suggestion that could possibly be given her. And a suggestion, I must frankly admit, that I completely overlooked in my earlier remarks and recommendations to her. Thus, while I am appreciative of your specific additions to Sunday's answer, I am twice grateful to you for affording Rosemary an artless illustration of that attitude-toward-life she must make her own—if she is to win people's love, after making their acquaintance. So, thanks a million, Rhea Marie, for your total contribution. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Record Number of Notables Seen At Second White House Reception

Red-Coated Marine Band Orchestra Plays Lively Waltzes at State Function; Gold-Braided Aides Greet Guests

By Hope Ridings Miller

WHILE THE RED-COATED Marine Band Orchestra played a series of lively waltzes, several hundred high-ranking Government officials met and mingled at the White House last night.

The occasion was the second State reception of the season and it drew a record number of notables whose names lead the lists in the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments and also in the Federal agencies. Least exciting of the annual receptions given by President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the function went on the boards last night with the usual pomp and circumstance but brought out a much larger throng of top-hatted and tiaraed guests than checked in at the same party last winter.

Following the procedure observed at all similar fetes, the 18 guests entertained at dinner before the reception were ushered into the Red Room, while other notables were coming up th marble stairway and going on to the East Room. Gold-braided aides, making themselves useful as well as ornamental, took time about escorting great ladies to the rooms in which they and their husbands were to wait until President and Mrs. Roosevelt began receiving.

A quarter of an hour after the usual time when guests begin passing down the line, the familiar strains of "Hail the Chief" heralded the approach of the host and hostess and members of the Cabinet.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S necklace, fashioned of claws from a tiger shot by her uncle, the late Theodore Roosevelt, was a stunning accent for her ensemble. Her gown of gray tucked net with a ruffled lace skirt ending in a modified train was also set off with a fichu of lace and a diamond and emerald clasp on the v-shaped decolletage.

A number of "regulars" were missing from the brief pageant. Mrs. Cordell Hull is in the hospital and the Secretary of State probably was by her side. Walking directly behind the Chief Executive and the First Lady were Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr.,—she wearing a handsome gown of plum colored satin and lace, fashioned with cap sleeves and a wide, gored skirt. Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson were next. Her regal gown was of midnight blue velvet, cut on simple lines and set off with a diamond necklace.

MRS. ROBERT JACKSON was another who was missing because of illness, but the Attorney General was there, and walked last in line with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. Wearing a beige net frock, sprinkled with gold sequins, Mrs. Frank Walker accompanied her husband, the Postmaster General. Chantilly lace over a flesh-colored satin was the choice of Mrs. Frank Knox who came in with her husband, the Secretary of the Navy.

Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes were not among the guests. Mrs. Claude Wickard, wearing an emerald green brocaded frock, accompanied her husband, the Secretary of Agriculture. Chic is the word for the black crepe frock worn by Mrs. Jesse Jones, who with the Secretary of Commerce, has just returned from a trip to Texas. Her gown had a deep yoke of coral crepe, generously studded with gold sequins and pearls. Chatting over a glass of punch later in the evening, Mrs. Jones gently chided the Secretary about the ever-present rabbit's foot that hangs from his watch chain.

APPROXIMATELY half the ladies who walked down the receiving line had on long white gloves. Corsages—orchids, gardenias, roses and carnations—were very much in evidence, and a few gay blossoms were used to accent coiffures. I saw dozen of three-strand pearl necklaces, and no end of costume jewelry—ranging all the way from heavy bracelets of Mexican silver, to dainty coral clips and buckles.

A number of men carried white gloves, and a few obeyed the rule of formal dress to the last notch and wore them all evening. "What'll I do with these now?" one big-wig asked his wife, as he waved his gloves in her direction right after they got to the State dining room. She didn't know. He settled the matter by cramming them into a pocket.

THE LIVELY waltzes, mentioned earlier, came later in the program—after the state dining room was filled with guests who had already passed down the line and were crowding toward the west side of the room, where punch and cakes were served at a long table.

Still later, the Marine Band Orchestra packed up its instruments and quietly slipped away, as the Navy Orchestra went into action in the East Room, and dancing was very much the order of the hour.

"Would you kindly give me the first dance?" handsome Reginald Grady asked his pretty sister, Patricia. "Because," he added, "I've already asked someone for the second."

With a gracious smile she agreed, and soon the son and daughter of the retiring Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady were twirling gracefully across the polished floor of the East Room. Miss Grady's frock of white and silver lame was becomingly fashioned with an off-the-shoulder neckline, a fitted bodice and a full skirt.

SEVERAL STATE Department officials were on hand. They are as a rule invited to the diplomatic reception, but that colorful party was of course canceled this year. The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle were present, the latter wearing a gown of dark blue velvet fashioned on medieval lines and a delicate gold tiara which was made in Paris. Mrs. Breckinridge Long, in green lame, accompanied her husband. James Clement Dunn and Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck came down

Dinner Precedes State Reception

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained 18 guests before the reception at the White House last night. Red roses, white buddleia and maidenhair fern decorated the table.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jessie Jones, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins were in the company.

Others there were the Undersecretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Paul Appleby, Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the Pan American Union; Leo T. Crowley, Mrs. Grenville Emmet, John H. Grady, Mrs. Frederick Stuart Greene, Harry A. Millis and Miss Marguerite A. LeHand.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

DISCOVERING America in the days of Columbus had not much more hardship attached to it and rather more charm than has a modern voyage from Europe to the New World. A saga of the modern seas could be written about the attempts of Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, former French Ambassador to the United States, to go from Vichy to Lisbon, to New York, to his new post in Brazil. Finally getting a place and embarking on the Clipper from Lisbon last month, the same Clipper which brought home Capt. Alan Kirk, the Ambassador's ship-of-the-air was turned back by bad weather. Returned to the starting point, some of the Clipper passengers, among them the amiable Count de Saint-Quentin, had to give up their places aboard and be left behind when the plane took off again for the United States. This was doubtless a measure of precaution to lighten the plane for heavy weather, but it left the count stranded again. Eventually he was able to get passage on a Portuguese cargo boat which was due to arrive in New York yesterday. This delayed arrival leaves in doubt whether the popular Frenchman will have time to visit his friends in Washington as his plans were to sail from New York for Brazil on January 10.

AN ATTRACTIVE visitor to Washington is Mrs. Henri Stebelska, cousin of Count George Lasocki, of the Polish Embassy, who is staying with the Lasockis for a few days. Mrs. Stebelska is half American and was brought up in France. Her mother is one of the Allen family of Pelham Manor, so she is related by marriage to Mrs. Julian Allen, the former Alice Harding. After a dramatic flight from the Germans as they occupied France, Mrs. Stebelska arrived in America via Lisbon and found refuge with her cousins at Pelham Manor.

Mrs. Stebelska is a recent bride, but not the fortunate white-satin-and-lace bride to which we are accustomed in Washington. She was engaged, with the wedding in the offing, when the Nazis started pouring into France. She and her fiance fled to her family's home in the country, were married there at 6 o'clock in the morning, and kept right on fleeing. With a faithful retainer and their dog the young couple arrived in Lisbon on their refugee honeymoon. Here, with the complete courage of the Poles, Henri Stebelski left his bride to find her way to her mother's family in America while he made his way to England to continue fighting.

DROPPING BY to call on the Snowden Fahnestocks the other late afternoon I found them, in their usual hospitable manner, making casual callers welcome. Mrs. Fahnestock was charming in a sage-green tea-gown and seemed to have no other ambition in life than to make things pleasant for friends who strayed in out of the cold, while her husband expertly shook up the where-withall to warm them.

Also arriving to call were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ives and Mrs. Wainwright Abbott. Mr. Ives was for a number of years in the Foreign Service of the State Department and he and Mrs. Ives have many friends in the Capital. Since he resigned from the service Mr. and Mrs. Ives spend most of the year at Pinehurst in the enchanting old log house which they have done over.

MRS. MARION WARBURG left yesterday for a trip to Jamaica and the Dominican Republic . . . Owen Davis Host To Brother and Wife At Theater Party

Owen Davis, the noted playwright, and Mrs. Davis were hosts to the former's brother and sister-in-law, Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis, at the National Theater last night, where Mr. Davis' current mystery comedy, "Mr. and Mrs. North," is a hit.

Appearing in the play is Owen Davis, jr., who is staying at the Willard Hotel, where Mr. and Mrs. Davis also are registered. Following last night's performance, Col. and Mrs. Davis entertained at a family party at their home, 3800 Columbia Pike, Arlington, Va.

Miss Rayburn Is Honored At Luncheon

Mrs. Sheppard At Party Given By Mrs. Lanham

The Lone Star State and some of its residents, and Miss Lucinda Rayburn's resemblance to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge were chief topics of talk yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Fritz Lanham in honor of Miss Rayburn—"Miss Lou," as she is known to friends.

One of the many fetes planned in honor of the sister of the Speaker of the House, the party took place at the Shoreham Hotel, and all guests were Texans, including a number from the Texas Congressional contingent.

Mrs. Lanham was trimly turned out in a black frock, accented with a gold necklace and a burgundy velvet turban, edged with a petal design in a lighter shade. Miss Rayburn's ensemble was set off with a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Morris Sheppard was ranking guest in the company of 14. Others there included Mrs. Richard Kleberg, Mrs. Wright Patman, Mrs. Martin Dies, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. William Robert Poage, Mrs. George H. Mahon, Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Mrs. Paul Kilday and Mrs. Sam Russell and Mrs. Eugene Worley, wives of the two new members of the Texas delegation.

Still others at the luncheon were Mrs. Jack Beall, of Dallas, Tex., who will be at the Shoreham Hotel until after the inauguration; Mrs. Roy Miller and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

A number of luncheons were in progress at the Shoreham at the same time Mrs. Lanham was giving hers. Col. and Mrs. Frank J. Morrow entertained a company of eight, having among their guests Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman. Mrs. Walter Guy was hostess to a larger party, and Mrs. Albert Knox also had guests lunching with her.

Back to College

Miss Virginia L. Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley W. Burgess, of Twenty-ninth Street, has returned to her studies at Sweet Briar College where she is a member of the freshman class.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THIS WEEK 92 young men, many of them familiar faces around town, are undergoing the painful ordeal of oral exams to enter the Foreign Service. The possible future diplomats are the only ones out of nearly 500 who succeeded in passing the stiff written tests given all over the country last fall.

DUDLEY HARMON

The theory that you have to be rich and look well in a top hat to get into the Foreign Service has been thoroughly exploded.

SEVERAL EXAMS ago the son of a former Ambassador was turned down, while a young man who had been earning his way as a bell hop was admitted. This year one of those who passed the writtens earned part of his tuition by working as a cook in California. Still short of the necessary expenses, he spent last winter as floor walker in a Washington department store. Others, already in the service, have backgrounds as varied as salesmen, clerks, Army officers and dairy farmers. Some stuffed shirts still creep into the Service, but less than formerly.

DESPITE THE number of diplomatic posts which have been blitzkrieged out of existence, the State Department is short of men. This is because new posts have been opened up in such strategic places as Dakar, and many towns in South America in which we have not hitherto been represented. For the first time in many years, a consulate general is being established in Vladivostok.

In countries such as Holland and Belgium the diplomatic officers had to leave, but consuls and vice consuls are still on duty. Only in Poland was every member of the Foreign Service ordered out.

THE WRITTEN examinations concern law, economics, government and other subjects in which months of study are required. But the orals are different. A board of officials simply tries to size up, in a few minutes of conversation, what kind of a person you are. They ask nervous young men such questions as "Why do you want to go into the Foreign Service?" "What are your hobbies?" "How do you spend your leisure time?" "What did the morning newspaper say?" Occasionally there's a controversial question, such as "What do you think of the principle of teaching Communism in the public schools?" A story going the rounds for years says that one young candidate was asked if he played bridge, and on saying yes, was given a pack of cards and told to sort a good hand. But Col. Campbell Turner, who runs one of several Foreign Service schools here, is quite sure this never happened.

WITH THE arrival of the season's first cold wave, many people are determinedly heading south. Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the Senator from New Jersey, and her sister, Mrs. Sidney Lee, will be off tomorrow for a week at Abbe Sound. The Walter Lippmanns leave today for Nassau.

OTHER news notes: Hallett Johnson, Counselor of our Legation in Sweden, has arrived in Washington on leave. Mrs. Johnson and their children have been in this country since shortly after the war began . . . Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Miller will come here from Des Moines for the inauguration and will be at the Willard. They will entertain at a cocktail party January 21 at the Mayflower.

Mrs. W. C. Naude Entertains at Tea

Gathering in a congenial group for tea, Mrs. W. C. Naude entertained yesterday afternoon in honor of her mother, Mrs. John Gill, who is visiting here from New England. Mr. Naude is the First Secretary of the South African Legation.

Among the guests were Mrs. Ralph W. Close, wife the South African Minister, Mrs. William Dempsey, Mrs. Ernest Draper, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Harry G. Meem, Mrs. J. J. Pelley, Mrs. Max Boyd, Miss Pat Jarrett, Mrs. H. Bissett Norment, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Countess de Castellane, Mrs. Frederick Linesey, Mrs. Arthur Schroeder, Mrs. Mary Goodhue, Mrs. Huntington Randolph Minor, Mrs. Johaan Seigruhn, Mrs. Jan Jordaan, Mme. Molekamp, Dr. Alma Jane Spear, Mrs. A. L. Childs, Countess de Gramont and Mrs. Rifot Tierana.

Inaugural Day To Be Busy One For First Lady

Schedule Between Now and Then Also Will Be Crowded

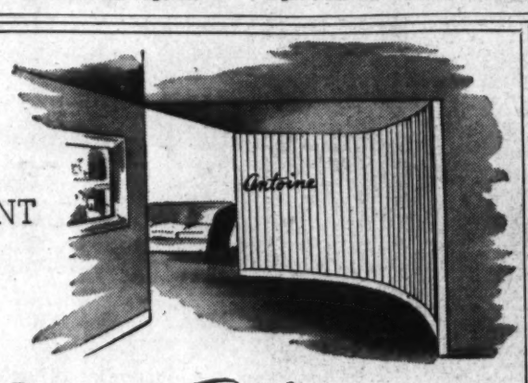

It is full speed ahead for the White House social schedule which will be climaxed by the inaugural. Fortified by the recent purchase of three new dresses Mrs. Roosevelt told of plans for a busy inauguration day at her press conference yesterday. Church services at St. Johns will start the proceedings, and from there the First Lady will go to the Capitol to see the President take his oath of office for the third time.

A buffet luncheon—some 1,600 guests have been invited—at the White House will precede the parade. The President will receive the Governors and electors just before the traditional tea at the Executive Mansion which starts at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will receive at the tea. Because of the large crowds invited Mrs. Roosevelt said the food, at both the luncheon and tea, will be served in the East Room as well as the State Dining room. At the gala concert on Sunday evening, January 19, Mrs. Roosevelt will occupy the White House box.

"All the children but James," said Mrs. Roosevelt, hope to attend the inaugural ceremonies. However, those plans are subject to change. On Friday afternoon the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Hyde Park, where they will meet their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, who came East on a business trip. When told that Franklin, jr.—who only this week started a new job—had asked for January 20 off, Mrs. Roosevelt chuckled and said, "very presuming."

An unusually crowded schedule is in store for Mrs. Roosevelt. Today she will attend a girl scout luncheon at the Willard. There will be a musicale at the White House at 4 o'clock and she plans to be on hand for the National Symphony Concert this evening. Tomorrow she will attend the speaking class for the Congressional ladies and entertain the

Club Told Of Plucky British Child

'In Spite of Hitler's War, I'm Growing,' Youngster Writes in Poem to 'Godparent'

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

"In spite of Hitler's war, I'm growing."

This line, quoted from a verse of thanks, written by an English child to an American "godparent," was read by Lady Mayer of London last night to a group at the Women's City Club. She spoke the interest of the Save the Children Federation.

Sir Robert and Lady Mayer who have recently come from England where they assisted in administering the funds sent from this country, were both here from New York City for the meeting. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, who was appointed temporary chairman of the Washington organization, presided. She will be assisted in forming a local committee by Miss Quincy Smith, president of the Women's College at Damascus, Syria, who was here on furlough when the war started and has been unable to return; Miss Mary Morris Wright, of the Junior League, and Mrs. Charles Sawtelle.

Mrs. Wiley was the first to volunteer as a member of the Washington branch after Lady Mayer told of the Federation's work and to pledge the $30 which gives supplementary support to one child for a year.

There were few dry eyes in the audience as Lady Mayer spoke of the bombings that have wiped out the historic landmarks of England. "But England is something else than these things," she declared. "England can't be bombed; it can't be smashed and it can't be broken. It is something more than material structure; it is an essence. If all England is razed to the ground, as long as one English child lives, England lives."

She emphasized the importance, not only of giving financial aid which is imperatively needed for the children, but also of exchanging letters with the sponsored child and his parents—if he has parents—giving him an understanding that "suddenly, in a world that goes from terror to terror, there is someone who really cares and who is kind and is sending aid."

Lady Mayer explained that the Save the Children Federation was formed after the first World War and from that time on, has helped children without respect to race or creed, wherever they needed help. In this country, for the last eight years, with the same staff of volunteer workers who headed the Near East Relief during the first war, it has given assistance to children in remote mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee. When the Hitler regime came and refugees flooded England, it was ready to take care of them, she said.

Until a comparatively short time ago, England was in the position of America, said Lady Mayer—a giver. Now it is receiving instead. Thousands of children need immediate and continued support, she asserted and these are not only British, but also the French, German, Belgian, Dutch and Norwegian refugees. All refugee children are being treated exactly the same as English children, she said.

Sir Robert also spoke briefly and told of the plan many college groups and clubs are using, sponsoring a child as a group when individuals cannot afford the entire responsibility.

1,000 Attend 'Blanket Tea' To Provide Funds to Aid British Nearly 1,000 persons attended the "blanket tea" given yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel by the Washington Chapter of Hadassah to provide funds to supply an emergency need for blankets in Palestine.

Mrs. Moe Offenberg, president of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, welcomed the guests, and in a brief talk announced that the second shipment of supplies sent following the emergency appeal had reached its destination safely. They are being distributed to institutions and to refugees, she said, including the immigrants saved following the blowing up of the Patria in the harbor.

Children are still being given passports by the British, including those from enemy countries who have been in camps in unoccupied France. They are being started on their way to Palestine by a circuitous route, she said.

A fashion show was a feature of the afternoon, planned under the chairmanship of Mrs. Bernard Wilner, chairman of the Palestine Supplies Committee; Mrs. William I. Ogus, adviser; Mrs. Paul Pearlman, and Mrs. Joseph Kaufman, cochairman of tickets.

Members who served as models in the fashion display were Mrs. Edward Cafritz, Mrs. Milton Ritzenberg, Mrs. Louis Janof, Mrs. Mac Wolfberg, Mrs. Stanley Korman, Mrs. Nathan Berstein, Mrs. Wilner, Mrs. Herman Becker, Mrs. Lorraine Leon.

Junior Hadassah will hold the first meeting of the new year tonight at 8:15 at the Jewish Community Center. Milton Baldinger will speak and the members will sing Palestinian songs and dance the hora, the modern Palestinian folk dance.

Saturday, at 10 p. m., paid-up members will dance modern American style at their second formal affair of the season at 2400 Sixteenth Street. Miss Cynthia Michaelson is chairman, assisted by Miss Ruth Morgenstine, Miss Ruth Sirota, Mrs. Irene B. Sherman, Miss Selma Simon, Miss Selma Maisels, Miss Dorothy Greidenberg, Miss Hilda Siegel and Miss Nan Tarason.

Visiting Officers To Be Entertained By Eastern Star

The District of Columbia Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will convene tomorrow night at the Willard Hotel, with the grand matron, Mrs. Minnie J. Burdine and grand patron, Edward C. Steagall, presiding.

The first session will be devoted to the reception of visiting grand officers from other jurisdictions and reports of officer and committee chairmen of the local grand chapter. Election of officers is scheduled for Friday, with the polls open from 4 to 8:30. The new officers will be installed Saturday, with a banquet following at the National Press Club.

D. A. R. to Hear Noted Educator

The approved schools committee of the District D. A. R. will have Dr. Robert L. Kincaid, vice president of Lincoln Memorial University, as the guest speaker at a meeting this morning at 11 o'clock in the library of the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts Avenue.

Dr. Kincaid, who is widely known in educational circles, represents a university founded as the result of the expressed desire of President Lincoln that mountain girls and boys should have an opportunity to obtain a more advanced education than that offered by the small isolated mountain schools. Lincoln University is situated near the famous Cumberland Gap at Harrogate, Tenn., and is known as "a living memorial sustained by a grateful people."

Dr. Kincaid will be introduced by Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, State chairman of approved schools, who will entertain at dinner this evening in his honor. The meeting is open to all Daughters and others interested in educational work in our Southern mountains.

Emily Nelson Chapter will observe its thirty-fourth anniversary with a reception at the Chapter House Saturday from 8:30 to 10:30 with Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, the State officers and Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks as honor guests receiving with the regent, Mrs. John J. Ragan.

THE ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE has just been presented a new ambulance by a donor who prefers to be anonymous. It will replace the league's old truck and is the most modern kind of conveyance for sick or injured animals.

It has a special body, equipped with three cages and a lethal chamber, one of the cages large enough to accommodate a Great Dane. The ambulance is on call all day and, for dire emergency, at any hour of the night.

It is welcomed by those interested in the league's work and is expected to be of great help in taking care of the approximately 20,000 calls received during the year.

FUN FOR POETS—Members of the Arts Club and their friends who are lovers of poetry will have a chance to test their familiarity with famous poets at the program following the club dinner tomorrow night.

"Parodies" is the title of the entertainment planned by Mrs. Esther N. Waldron. She and those assisting her will read parodies on famous poets and the audience will be asked to name the poet parodied. Ingenuity as well as memory will be required, the announcement promises.

Hostesses for the evening will be Miss Emily C. Davis and Mrs. Frances S. Dean.

LOCAL WINNER—While we're on the subject of poetry, it will be of interest to Washington friends of Inez Barkley Kirby, 5550 Edgemoor Lane, Bethesda, to know that she was awarded third prize on her poem, "Too Deep for Tears" in the national contest of the National Thanksgiving Poetry Association this year.

Announcement has been made of the winners by Mrs. Grace Kiess Swiggett, herself a poet, who was chairman of the contest for the District of Columbia and is also chairman of poetry for the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Other national winners are Kathleen Harrison, of Portland, Oreg., who was awarded first prize on "The Road to Thanksgiving" and Lucie Royce, of the State of Washington, who received second on "Symbol of Thanks."

Mrs. Kirby is widely known for her poetry and has won prizes in contests conducted by Blue Moon, poetry magazine edited by Inez Sheldon Tyler and Mattie Richards Tyler; in those of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and in contests outside of Washington. She is a member of the Wellesley Alumnae Club.

VERSATILE HOSTESS—Winnifred Grant, chancellor of Alpha Lambda Chapter, Phi Delta Delta Legal Sorority, and a third-year law student at National University, gave a cocktail party at her home recently and demonstrated her ability as a hostess. Managing a home with one hand and juggling law books with the other, besides holding down a job in the Veterans Administration, is no small task. However, she manages to keep going and is even considering taking on a quiz course for the June bar examination.

She is also treasurer of the Cy Press Club at National University and on the social committee. In her spare time she likes to bowl, play tennis and skate.

First Lady to Address Mrs. Butler's Classes

Forty young ladies from the finishing schools and colleges of the National Capital will have their first close-up of the First Lady tomorrow at 10 a. m. when, by invitation of Mrs. Hugh Butler, they will attend the opening meeting in her winter class of platform speaking to be held in Pierce Hall at Sixteenth and Harvard Streets.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be the principal speaker, with the balance of the program made up of prepared and extemporaneous speeches by wives of members of Congress, as well as women active in the social and civic life of Washington.

Medical Auxiliary to Meet

The next monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Medical Society of the District will be held at the Medical Society Building, 1718 M Street Northwest, this morning at 11 o'clock. Dr. Elmer Kayser, professor of European history at George Washington University, will speak on the present European situation.

the line early. Philip Bonsal was another State Department member present. He was accompanied by Mrs. Bonsal.

The high-ceilinged rooms were crowded with assistant secretaries and directors of various governmental bureaus. The Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor were there, she in a regal gown of the palest green satin and chiffon.

Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury John L. Sullivan and Herbert Gaston were present, Mrs. Gaston wearing pale blue. The Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Daniel Bell were also in the crowd. One of the handsomest ensembles there was worn by Mrs. Blair Bannister, who had chosen a satin frock of silvery blue and a cape of bright red velvet, edged in maribou, to match her sandals. Accompanying her was Mr. Bannister.

DIRECTOR OF the Mint Nellie Tayloe Ross appeared in pink crepe, set off with a corsage of violets crowned with a cluster of yellow rosebuds. The Comptroller of the Currency and Mrs. Preston Delano made the rounds, greeting friends on all sides. Mrs. Delano wore a stunning gown of black velvet with a collar of ivory lace.

The Director of the Budget and Mrs. Harold Smith were in the throng, the latter dressed in a frock which had a dark blue top and a wine colored skirt. The Assistant Director, Welldon Jones, was accompanied by Mrs. Jones, who wore a Roman striped frock fashioned with a full skirt. Mr. and Mrs. Jones recently arrived in Washington from Manila, where the former was financial adviser for Commissioner Francis Sayre, and before that for former Commissioner Frank Muhpry.

GEORGE T. SUMMERLIN, chief of protocol for the State Department, was on hand to see that all went smoothly. He chatted in the large hall with Dr. Rowe. Mrs. Paul McNutt, handsome in heavy black velvet with a jacket embroidered in gold, accompanied the Federal Security Administrator. With them was Miss Louise McNutt, their daughter, who was in sky blue.

Mrs. Ellen Woodward, of the Social Security Board, had a ripple of narrow white chiffon as a collar for her black frock. Abner Ferguson, of the Federal Housing Authority, was accompanied by Mrs. Ferguson. Judge Annabel Matthews, a regal figure in purple, was there, as was Assistant Commissioner of Patents Leslie Frazer, accompanied by Mrs. Frazer, who wore a black sequin and chiffon gown with a corsage of orchids.

Still others there were Miss Joanne Barnes, daughter of the Executive Assistant to the Treasurer and Mrs. George O. Barnes. Her gown had a long bodice of silver cloth with a wide tulled skirt. She was accompanied by her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Condon. Mr. and Mrs. James Twohy—she wearing a smart jersey white gown—were there; also Mr. and Mrs. John Hager, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon King, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams, Fred Penniman, sr., and Fred Penniman, jr., Mrs. Stuart Rice, and several hundred others.

Critics Acclaim Third Book Of D. C. Writer

Being acclaimed by leading critics is Katharine Dunlap's latest novel, "Once There Was a Village," published a few days ago. The third book from the pen of this Washington woman, who also has a number of short stories to her credit, this novel presents a picture of a French community of the type Mrs. Dunlap knows so well.

For many years Mrs. Dunlap spent much of her time in France, whene ten years ago she and her husband, the late Brig. Gen. R. H. Dunlap, purchased the Chateau des Coulennes, just 150 miles from Paris. Mrs. Dunlap's other two books are "Lady Be Good" and "Encore for Love," both of which were written in part in her French home which has since fallen into the hands of the Germans.

Supper Given For Miss Ward

Honoring Miss Anna Belle Ward, of Lexington, Ky., Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas entertained last evening at a supper party at their home on Sixteenth Street.

Miss Ward, author of a book on Guatemala, has just returned to Washington for a brief stay after several months in Hollywood. She showed the guests some films she took in California.

A number of diplomatic and residential Washingtonians made up the gathering. Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas will entertain again on January 26, when they will give a dinner in honor of the retiring Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady.

British Industrial Losses Put at 5%

Cities' Gaping Wounds From Raids A False Index to Blitzkrieg's Effect, Says Reporter in Uncensored Story

Taylor Henry, back from service as a war correspondent in England, discusses bomb damage to British industry in his second of four articles from the behind-the-scenes viewpoint of a writer versed in military science—and now unhampered by censorship. He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy.

By Taylor Henry,
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan 7.—While German night bombers in four months of blitz against England have laid waste some cities and blasted and burned huge chunks out of others, British officials claim that damage to the islands essential war industry so far has been surprisingly small.

Naturally, the extent of damage to military objectives in individual raids is a closely guarded secret. That is the reason official communiques constantly refer to the destruction of "homes, churches and shops" and never mention that factories, railroads or bridges have suffered as well.

But the average of estimates I gathered from a large number of observers places damage to all war industry in the country at less than 5 per cent, while damage to the aviation industry has been no more than 10 per cent.

Just before I returned to New York from England as the old year ended I made a week's intensive survey of the damage Nazi explosive and fire bombs had done to war industry.

Went Where He Wished

Without official sponsorship, I went where I wanted to and saw what I wanted to. I visited factory after factory and talked to officials and workmen in every city that had been blitzed—Coventry, Southampton, Bristol, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester and dozens of smaller industrial centers in the midlands.

I found many factories that had been destroyed or damaged sufficiently to stop production, but I found almost ten times as many that had not yet been hit.

And to your wartime Englishman all that matters is to keep up war production.

Two days before I left England I talked with a high official who has charge of tabulating damage to what are officially termed "key points"—essential industry and communication.

"To us it is a question of brutal realism," he said.

"Naturally, it's hard if your wife or children are killed by bombs, if the business your family has worked generations to build has been destroyed overnight. But as far as the war is concerned, to use one of your favorite American expressions: So what!

"Our factories are still turning out the arms with which to smash back at Germany and our communication networks are still transporting them."

Apart from London, the two hardest hit cities in England have been Coventry and Southampton. There the damage is almost unbelievably bad. After the war is over it will take three to five years to rebuild them.

In Bristol there are districts so badly hit they make Coventry look like a thriving city. In Birmingham whole sections, including part of its central business district, have been knocked into hollow shells of buildings.

Liverpool Better Off

Liverpool, on the other hand, has had it comparatively easy, while Manchester has come to be known as "the city the blitz forgot." Even the clocks are still running in Liverpool and Manchester.

In London, except for the east end, damage when I left was still spotty. The great fire raid on the "city" business district has happened since.

But even at that time it was almost impossible to go more than 200 yards in any direction without seeing spectacular evidence of bomb destruction.

However, approximately nine-tenths of Greater London is open space — parks, rivers, lakes and streets. A large percentage of bombs dropepd from high altitudes, even when carefully aimed, necessarily must explode harmlessly in these open areas.

Damage to cities, in addition to the estimated 5 per cent more or less permanent physical damage to industrial plants, nevertheless has had the effect of slowing up production.

Workers' homes have been destroyed; suburban bus and railroad lines to factory areas have been put out of action temporarily, and local food supplies have been destroyed.

If a man can't get his three square meals a day, if his means of getting to and from work has been knocked out, if he has no home to go back to for a night's sleep, his work suffers.

In one city only three bombs were dropped in the suburb where an important airplane factory is located. The nearest was half a mile from the factory. Yet because of disruption of transportation that factory was forced to work on half shifts for three days.

In another city the central section was so badly blasted that work in the surrounding industrial area—itself not even touched by the blitz—was stopped for four days.

But British officials declare that three days for one factory or four days for another, when taken in the light of 365 days a year for all of England's far-flung industries, is scarcely a pinprick.

There are apparently two reasons why bomb damage has been less than one might expect:

1. The way British industry has been scattered throughout the island over wide areas.

2. The basic difficulty of a night bomber flying at 12,000 or 13,000 feet planting sufficient direct hits on a comparatively small factory to put it out of action.

Before the war the great complaint of British industry was that it was too decentralized. It is that same decentralization that today is making it possible for Britain to carry on.

Factories grouped in Birmingham, for example, have been hit, and badly hit. The day after the worst blitz on Birmingham, I drove slowly through the city, got out at factory after factory and saw only blackened walls guarding twisted masses of machinery.

My immediate reaction was that the Germans must be delivering heavy blows to British war industry.

Then I drove on out through the sprawling mass of blast furnaces and steel mills that stretch for miles and miles to the north and west of Birmingham through West Bromwich, Walsall and Wolverhampton.

No real damage had been done anywhere in the whole vast area. In some of the most important factory towns workers told me the sirens hadn't even been sounded for weeks.

It is the same as you approach Liverpool through the great shipyards that line the Mersey River, make the circle through the port city that is carrying three-quarters of Britain's ocean-borne traffic and swing back along the northern bank of the Mersey to Manchester.

While British industry generally is thought of as being concentrated in these areas, actually factories dot the countryside in such a way that to knock any one specific plant out of action would take a raid approaching the intensity of those which laid waste the concentrated centers of Coventry and Southampton.

It is this decentralization that makes the work of the night bomber so difficult.

They're Hard To See

Picture to yourself a factory covering, say, a quarter of a square mile. During the day its camouflage melts it into the surrounding fields or rows of workers houses. At night it is blacked out so that even on the brightest moonlight nights it is only another blob of black on a black landscape.

High above, flying at around 13,000 feet—more than two miles high—is the Nazi bomber. He has come in "flying the beam" on a course which has been plotted previously to put him as nearly as possible over the factory objective when he hits the cross beam.

These beams are radio waves sent out from two points along the occupied French coast to intersect on the objective. They work much like the radio beam which keeps American commercial air line pilots on their course. A radio signal reaches its maximum intensity when the plane is on the course and fades as it turns to one side or the other.

When the German pilot reaches the bombing point, he hears a new note from the intersecting beam and immediately signals the bombardier to let go his load.

This first stick will be a "Goering Breadbasket" of combined high explosives and fire bombs designed to start a blaze near enough to the target to make it visible. If it falls anywhere within a mile of the target, it will serve its purpose.

Then comes the really tough job for the bomber. He must use his bomb sight—and the British admit the Germans have a "fairly good" bomb sight—to rain high explosives on the factory itself.

From two miles up in the air that is no easy task, as the bomb at that altitude must be released some two miles in advance of the target. And at two miles up, if the bombardier even so much as sneezes as he pulls the trigger, it may throw the bomb a quarter of a mile off its objective.

That is operating under ideal conditions.

But, as a rule, Nazi bombers have found conditions far from ideal from their point of view. Antiaircraft guns are blazing up at them from below, drawing a screen of bursting shells around the factory.

I was at an aircraft factory one night when a Nazi bomber got in so close we thought our number was up. He dropped his first load about 500 yards away and spaced the next three up to within 40 yards of the main building.

The next one had to be a direct hit. But it never came.

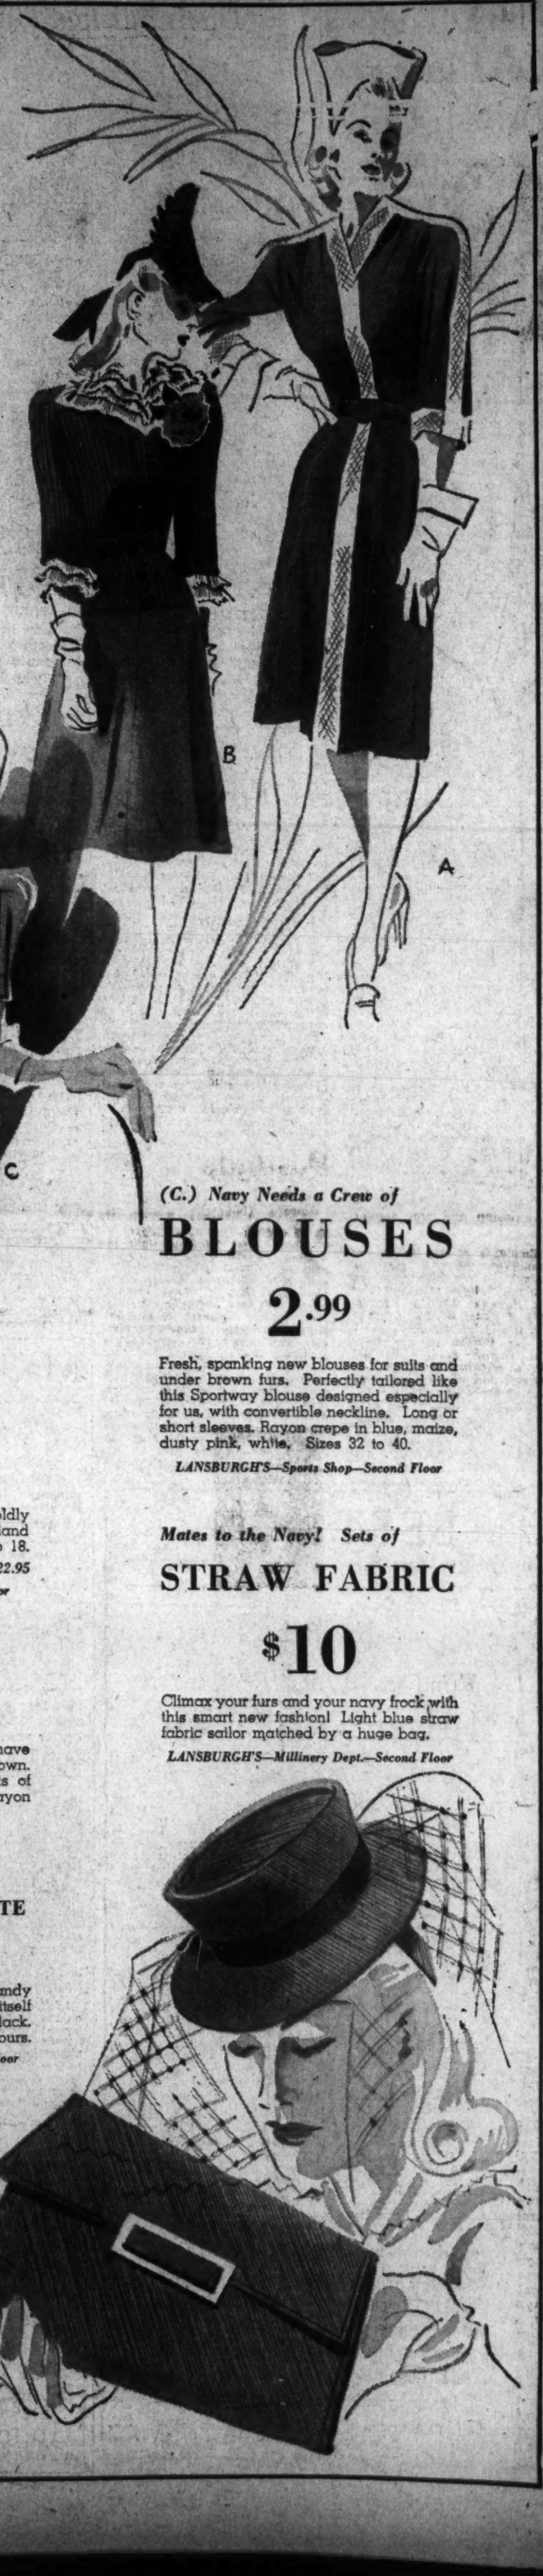

The antiaircraft guns ringing the factory had put up such a tremendous barrage that the Nazi had to bank and run to save his own skin before he had a chance to let that next one go.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

A Federal agency that faces unprecedented expansion is the Office of the Chief of the Army Air Corps. Civil service officials estimate that between 150,000 and 200,000 civilians will be needed by the agency within the next year or so. The huge estimate is based on the 50,000 plane goal of the Army. Personnel experts say that an average of three civilians will be needed to maintain each plane. Most of the new employes will be mechanics such as aircraft electricians, sheet metal workers, machinists and the like.

War Department is attempting to short-cut and stream-line its procedures by decentralizing its personnel work. Branch personnel offices, under the supervision of the Secretary of War, are being established at headquarters of the nine Army corps areas. Employes to recruit and supervise the tens of thousands of new employes are being trained here before they are sent to the field offices. Branch offices will be established at corps area headquarters in Boston, Governor's Island, N. Y., Baltimore, Atlanta, Columbus, Chicago, Omaha, San Antonio, and San Francisco.

The thousands of new employes, however, won't necessarily be stationed at corps area headquarters. They will be located at air depots all over the country, but all personnel matters will be cleared through the nine branch offices instead of through the Washington office, which would mean delays. The Navy Department years ago decentralized its personnel operations and it has operated much more effectively during the present emergency. War finally created a central civilian personnel office only last year. President Roosevelt ordered it.

Upward of 200 War Department employes will be transferred to handle personnel matters at the field offices. The employes are being trained by Clarence Edwards and Henry Rempe, managers of Civil Service Commission district offices at Denver and St. Louis, respectively, who have been assigned temporarily for liaison duty between the commission and the department.

Employes of the Bureau of Standards have a plan to "adopt" for the duration of the war the children of employes of the National Physical Laboratory of Great Britain, an English institution which is similar to our Bureau of Standards. The British government and British scientists are greatly interested, but the plans are being held in abeyance until spring.

Patricia O'Malley, CAA information assistant, yesterday left by plane for Guatemala to gather material for another book, "Wings for Carol," a novel about an airline hostess, will be making its appearance shortly. Pat is catching up with Alice Rogers Hager, CAB information chief, whose most recent book, "Wings Over the Americas," is going into its third printing.

Commerce officials are trying to get the old Bureau of Fisheries out of its building and Interior can't buy space to place the bureau . . . Morse Salisbury has been appointed director of information at Agriculture . . . John Stuart is the latest official to leave CAA . . . GPO retires its employes young. Five employes retired recently and their ages are: John D. Bradley, 33; Philip A. Deakins, 31; Caroline Brennan, 37; Andrew Gill, 36, and Charles F. Riecks, 42.

Civil Service Commission has put its ban on photographs in effect. Fingerprints will be used to identify persons taking Civil Service exams in the future . . . Civil Service Exams: Dental laboratory mechanic, assistant mechanic, and dental hygienist, $2,000, $1,440 and $1,620, substitute clerk-carrier, Post Office Service at Washington, 65 cents an hour.

Civil Service Commission has announced two tests which are designed to attract college students. The first test, junior professional assistant, pays $2,000, and it is open to students who will be graduated in the spring as well as those who are not more than 35 and who have received a bachelor degree with a major in one of the optional subjects. Optional subjects are administrative technician, agronomist, animal nutrition, wildlife biologist, business analyst, chemist, economist, engineer, forester, geologist, home economist, horticulturist, legal assistant, meteorologist, physicist, range conservationist, soil scientist, writing and editing assistant, and zoologist.

The second test, student aid, which pays $1,440, is limited to persons under 30. Junior students now attending accredited schools are eligible to compete. Twenty optionals are listed.

Loss of 2 D. C. Judges Slows Up Docket

100 Fewer Cases Handled in Final 6 Months of 1940 Than in 1939 Period

The loss of two judges in the United States District Court here decreased by 100 cases the hearings for the last six months of 1940 as against the same period the previous year.

The court was handicapped in the last term by the absence of Justice Peyton Gordon, ill since spring, and Justice James Proctor, who was assigned to direct a committee of lawyers preparing new rules for the court. Yet, the court disposed of 953 cases in the six months, compared to 1,050 for the last half of 1939.

Calendar Heavy

Outlook for the speeding up of the court hearings, however, is a gloomy one, according to Justice Oscar R. Luhring, who released the report. Justice Gordon's illness is expected to keep him from the bench for the present term, and Justice F. Dickinson Letts will shortly be compelled to take leave for a long-deferred eye operation.

The Criminal Court calendar is expected to be unusually heavy, with the American Medical Association antitrust trial scheduled to start February 5, and other cases due to arise from the activities of special grand juries now investigating election frauds and alien propaganda.

The report shows that there were 1,591 cases waiting trial January 1, 1940, and that the last of these cases will probably not be settled for 16 months. In that time, an estimated 2,500 other cases, now in preliminary states, will be ready for trial.

"Streamline" Blocked

In jury trials, the period between the time a case is ready for trial and the time it is tried decreased from 18 to 16 months, but increased from 11 to 12 months for non-jury cases.

Justice Luhring said that the "streamlined" pretrial hearings, in which cases are simplified nad sometimes settled altogether informany before trial, had proved a help in speeding up cases. He pointed out, however, that it does no good to streamline cases if the court cannot proceed to try and dispose of them.

Howard University School of Music presents Bernardo Segall in a piano recital Tuesday night in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel. Program: Variations on a Theme of Schumann (Brahms), Sonata in B flat major (Mozart), Ballade in G minor (Chopin), Choros No. 5 (Villa-Lobos), Conte (Medtner), Poeme (Skryabin), Etude (Stravinski), Widmung (Schumann-Liszt), Mephisto Waltz (Liszt).

BROWN

Bernardo Segall, Brazilian pianist, played last evening in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel for guests of Howard University's committee on artist recitals and received the cordial plaudits of a crowded auditorium. Interpolated by the school of music as an extra invitational event in the eighth season, the recital was rewarding both in the quality of musicianship and in the amount of unhackneyed compositions contained in the short program. One met some old friends as the G minor Ballade of Chopin and Liszt's "Mephisto" waltz, but in the company of less familiar sounds.

The program began with an early work of Brahms, Opus 9 to be exact, the 16 variations on a theme from Schumann's "Bunte Blaetter." Just why this work is generally neglected by pianists is a mystery, for it not only contains much poesy but also shows the first essay of Brahms in a direction which eventually led him to the splendid orchestral versions on Haydn's "St. Antoni Chorale." To Brahms the art of varying a theme did not mean merely embroidering it with lacy filigree but the utilization of its harmonic and rhythmic potentialities.

After a clear and dynamically interesting exposition of the variations, Mr. Segall proceeded with Mozart's B-flat major sonata, which is often heard in the version for violin and piano. Inasmuch as the violin part is not by Mozart, the sonata is best enjoyed as it was originally composed, and a lovely thing it is, particularly in the meditative slow movement.

In compliment to a compatriot composer, Mr. Segall began a group of modern pieces with Heitor Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 5, a striking and highly individual work in which a somber and almost elegiac mood is interrupted by a barbaric and rythmically exciting dance movement. This was followed by one of Nikolai Medtner's fanciful tales, a poem by Skryabin and an etude by Stravinski.

Mr. Segall has a virtuosic technique which he employs tactfully in the service of interpretation. His dynamic control results in an admirable range of tonal color, and he has poetic eloquence at his command.

Dorothy H. Dorsey Presents Jan Kiepura

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Jan Kiepura in a song recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall with Otto Herz as accompanist. Program of operatic arias by Verdi, Massenet, Bizet, Flotow and Puccini, and songs by Buzzia-Peccia, Sibella, Rossini, Novowiejski, Vieniavski, Gall and Marczevski.

Jan Kiepura, the Polish tenor, whose American career has ranged from the Metropolitan Opera House to the cinema studios of Hollywood, was greeted enthusiastically last evening by a large audience in Constitution Hall. His knowledge of what constitutes a popular program was shown in his choice of "Celeste Aida" as an opening number and "Che gelida manina" as the closing punctuation. Between them he sang such sure-fire arias as "Le Reve" from "Manon," Bizet's "Je crois entendre encore" from "Les Pecheurs de Perles," Flotow's "M'appari" and Puccini's "E lucevan le stelle." And among the extra numbers after the recital he tossed in "La donna e mobile."

The most interesting part of his program was the group of unfamiliar Polish songs which he projected with authoritative surety. His readings of Novoviejski's "Baltic Legend," Vieniavski's "Kujaviak," Gall's "Barcarolle" and Marczevcki's "Na ust koralu" were instinct with patriotic fervor and emotional intensity.

The tenor's friendly and informal platform manner won the favor of the largely youthful audience. He seemed to take his listeners into his confidence, and to enjoy their enjoyment of his singing. His voice had the amplitude and the resonance requisite for the operatic excerpts with which he was so generous, but in lyric passages the tones were wanting in suavity. Sweetness of timbre was replaced by an admirably controlled pianissimo.

1941 Traffic Toll Soars to 5 As 2 Men Die

Deaths Are Equal To Figure for All Of January, 1940

Traffic deaths this year	5
This date last year	2
Total last year	79

Washington's 1941 traffic toll last night equaled that for the whole month of January last year.

Two elderly pedestrians succumbed at Casualty Hospital early yesterday. They were Boyd Unkle, 73, of 709 Tenth Street Southeast, and John Jordan 70, of 707 Newton Street Northwest. Both were struck crossing the street not at crosswalks.

MR. UNKLE

Unkle was knocked down by a streetcar at Eighth and I Streets Southeast, January 2. Jordan was struck by an automobile as he crossed the street in front of his home, November 2.

MR. JORDAN

Frank C. Bell, 53, of 3906 W Street Northwest, was said by police to have been the driver of the automobile. He was released pending an inquest. The inquest will be held Friday.

Inquests also were ordered for today into the traffic deaths of two 1940 traffic victims—Olive E. Edwards, 41, of 2827 Fifteenth Street Northwest, and Mrs. Marie Schwertner, 70, of 200 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

James M. Ticer, 20, son of former Mayor Edmund F. Ticer, of Alexandria, died in Alexandria Hospital yesterday of injuries sustained in an automobile accident which earlier had claimed the life of Miss Lynde Crocker, 24, Alexandria School Board secretary. He died at 6:40 a. m.

MR. TICER

They were injured a few minutes before midnight New Year's Eve when an automobile driven by Gordon D. Rust, 22, crashed into a fire hydrant at the foot of King Street Hill. They were en route to a dance at the Belle Haven Country Club with four other young people. The other occupants suffered minor injuries.

Woman Hit by Bus

Minnie Ramsey, colored, 50, of 5323 D Street Southeast, was in Emergency Hospital with a broken left leg and head injuries after she was struck by a bus in Columbia Pike, Arlington County. The driver told police the woman stepped directly in front of the bus.

Citizens Offer Reynolds Cooperation

Columbia Heights Committee Named To Push Legislation For D. C. in Congress

Full cooperation with Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, scheduled to be sworn in today as Washington's unofficial mayor and head of the Senate District Committee, was pledged last night at a meeting of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

A "Congressional committee" was named by President Luther R. Maddox to work with Senator Reynolds and other Congressmen in pushing District legislation. Members are George H. Brown, chairman; Mrs. Margaret H. Worrell, Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, Capt. J. D. Wright, Frank B. Hoffman, Col. G. B. Young, Alexander Cruickshanks and Col. Luther R. Maddox.

The citizens urged that District officials take action of 22 proposals submitted by the Federation of Citizens Associations in connection with local liquor legislation.

Thomas V. Reegan, president of the Conduit Road Association, addressed the Columbia Heights unit and stressed the need of cooperation in promoting civic projects.

New members admitted to the association last night were William M. Lucas, Joseph J. Caruso, Bernard Danzansky, James E. McKinney, Ada Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Nora Bernardelli and M. Nick DeLalla.

Southeast Council

Delegates to the Southeast Council last night voted to name a joint committee with the Southwest Citizens Association to push action on the proposed bridge across the Anacostia River at South Capitol Street.

Plans for a regular weekly broadcast over radio station WINX of Southeast Washington affairs were discussed and referred to a special subcommittee appointed to work out details. Headed by Henry W. Austin, of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, the committee is membered by E. J. Read, Vernis Abshur, W. E. Nair, W. A. Duval, Charles C. Gillikin, J. J. MacGregor and Frank P. Randolph.

An eight-point program for the alleviation of traffic conditions in the area was referred to the traffic committee for a report at the next meeting.

Mid-City

Approval of the Commissioners' investigation of tax-exempt property in the District was voted last night by the Mid-City Citizens Association, which pointed out that much of such property is being used for income-producing purposes.

Members also urged the Commissioners to revise Washington's income tax law to include those earning an income here while maintaining residences elsewhere, as suggested Monday by Elwood Seal, former corporation counsul for the District.

Frank B. Hoffman was named chairman of a committee to arrange for dedication of the Second Precinct building at Fifth and New York Avenues Northwest, tentatively scheduled for early in February.

Dante Appointed Assistant Counsel For the District

Lee F. Dante yesterday was appointed an assistant corporation counsel for the District by the Commissioners. He will enter District service on January 16.

A graduate of Georgetown Law School, Dante is a native of this city. He received his earlier education in the local public schools. He received a bachelor degree at Holy Cross College and was admitted to the District bar in 1936. For several years after this Dante taught law at the Universities of Detroit and San Francisco. His salary will be $2,600. He is 29 years old and resides at 3608 Rittenhouse Street Northwest.

Ralph D. Quinter, jr., assistant corporation counsel assigned to Police Court received a boost in salary from 2,600 to $3,200 in filling the post vacated by Michael J. Keane, jr., former assistant corporation counsel.

11,000 Properties Put on Sale to Pay Delinquent Taxes

The District yesterday placed on sale 11,000 parcels of property delinquent in real estate taxes.

Held in the office of the tax collector, the sale yesterday attracted 50 bidders. They "bought" tax liens on the property, which may be redeemed by the real owner of the property within two years. After two years, the owner must deal with the "purchaser."

The sale will continue until January 14.

For the first time in the history of annual tax deed sales, officials yesterday demanded certified checks or cash in place of the traditional personal check.

Mr. and Mrs. Hippo Will Soon Be Three, Zoo Gossip Has It

60 to 75-Pound Heir Should Arrive St. Patrick's Day, Keeper Calculates; Pygmy Hippos, Gaur Are Also 'Expecting'

Whatever a hippopotamus does in lieu of knitting tiny garments, Pinky is doing it.

Bongo—that's her mate—splashed in his pool at the Zoo yesterday and opened his maw wide at intervals for visitors' peanuts, as usual, but Pinky spent the day taking good care of her 2-ton chassis.

Pinkie Awaits the Day

The stork is scheduled to deliver their 60 to 75-pound bundle on St. Patrick's Day, according to the calculations of a keeper. A former circus trouper, Pinky is preparing herself by turning up her nose to peanuts, in favor of bran and hay, and avoiding too much exercise.

It is just three days short of a year ago that Mr. and Mrs. Hippo became three, but the baby didn't survive. For a while they were a morose couple, but time has a way of dulling the pain in memories.

Fact is, a sort of stork derby is going on in the Zoo's pachyderm house. Both of the lady pygmy hippos are shopping for layettes and so is the pair of gaur, which is a wild ox from the East Indies.

The Zoo snooper then took a look at the stork. He stood as straight as a ramrod, but he's going to be a stoop-shouldered bird before long.

Jewish Center Opens Annual Member Drive

200 Workers at Rally Which Begins Quest Of 2,000 Members

The Jewish Community Center's annual membership enrollment drive was officially launched last night with a rally of some 200 drive workers in the Cafritz Auditorium of the Center. The campaign will last until February 4 and has as its objective the signing up of 2,000 members in the Sixteenth Street institution for 1941.

Ezekial J. Londow, secretary of the Middle Atlantic State Federation of Young Men's Hebrew Associations, spoke to the workers on the importance of the community centers in the national defense program. He said that preservation of the morale of the Nation and development of the manpower through character building institutions was an essential part of the program to make America strong and an arsenal for the democracies.

Edward Rosenblum, executive director of the center, in his talk also developed the thought that the defense program necessitated an expanded program of activities for the Center and made necessary a large active membership. He pointed out that many men in uniform from nearby cantonments and naval training stations would use the institution's facilities while on leave.

Benjamin Ourisman, president of the Center, in a brief talk said that the Center was looking forward to the greatest year in its history and told of plans for celebrating the fifteenth anniversary of the dedication of the building next month.

Burnett Siman, drive chairman, presided and outlined the scope of the campaign.

Eddie's Monkey, Gypsy, Is Dead

Gypsy, the small monkey who was the constant companion of Eddie Bernstein, legless F Street newspaper vendor, died yesterday of a stomach disorder.

In his room at 933 H Street Northwest last night Eddie pointed to a bureau loaded with medicine bottles that had failed to cure Gypsy. He is sad at the loss of Gypsy, but he is hoping to obtain another monkey.

Gypsy was given him by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean after Eddie lost his first pet—Snowball, a white Spitz—nearly three years ago.

Man Falls in Anacostia, Then Swims to Shore

William Robinson, 42, of no fixed address, was walking across the Pennsylvania Railroad Bridge over the Anacostia River yesterday when he lost his balance. He plunged the 25 feet to the cold water.

None saw him fall but Robinson needed no help. He swam ashore and then walked more than 2 miles to Providence Hospital. He received first aid for shock and exposure and was sent to Gallinger Hospital for further treatment.

Chemistry Student Burned by Benzene

Abraham Fookson, 24, an employe of the Bureau of Engraving, suffered first degree burns about the face and hands last night when a quantity of benzene caught fire while he was conducting an experiment in a George Washington University chemistry laboratory.

Twenty students witnessed the accident. Fookson was taken to George Washington University Hospital. Fookson's home is at 1727 R Street Northwest.

Flood Control For Anacostia Wins Approval

But War Department Rejects Plan to Add To Navigability

Conditional approval of a flood control plan for the Anacostia River was announced yesterday by the Division Engineer's Office of the War Department, while a proposal to make the river navigable to Bladensburg Bridge was disapproved.

Protection of Bladensburg and part of Edmonston, Md., would be provided by the flood control project. However, it was specified that "cost of modification of drainage systems, highways, sewer systems, telephone, telegraph and electric lines" be borne by local interests. Easements from the railway company and rights-of-way also should be furnished locally.

The project would cost about $500,000, of which approximately $110,000 would be borne by local interests. Work would consist of protective levees along 1 mile of the left bank.

Disapproval of the navigation project was based on grounds that "two fixed bridges across the stream would restrict its navigability, if improved, and the large amount of silt brought down would make the maintenance of the improvement so costly that the small prospective benefits would not justify the expenditure."

Policeman Pursues Driver 15 Miles

A motorcycle policeman got his man last night—after a 15-mile chase in which a motorist broke most of the rules in the traffic book and reached speeds approaching 90 miles per hour.

Policeman Otis Chapman, of Sixth Precinct, took after the man when he sped up Georgia Avenue without stopping for a traffic light at Decatur Street.

The policeman opened his siren but the driver only raced faster. The car, with the motorcycle in pursuit, raced north into Maryland, circled south through Takoma Park, Md., and zig-zagged into the District until Chapman shot out a tire at New Hampshire and Eastern Avenue Northeast.

After the driver had been jailed at Sixth Precinct Station, Chapman still was unhappy about it all. He registered a loss for the chase, having lost his revolver after emptying the cylinder.

Day Workers May Get Holiday Pay

Rep. Randolph Says He Will Introduce Bill to Insure Payment

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday said he will introduce a bill to insure per diem workers payment for holidays on the same basis as annual employes.

At the same time it was indicated that the District-Virginia boundary bill will be one of the first pieces of legislation to come before the committee. Randolph said he would not call a meeting, however, until seven vacancies are filled. This may be done later this week.

One of a dozen District bills reintroduced since the convening of the Seventy-seventh Congress is the proposed bone-dry law, which Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, has offered each year since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The measure has never been considered by the District Committee.

Randolph has reintroduced the controversial amendment to the child labor law, designed to permit juveniles of 14 or over to appear on the legitimate stage under supervision of the Board of Education.

He also has revived bills to regulate installment contracts, amend the women's eight-hour law and to prohibit the assignment of wages for debts.

The Sumners resolution, which was blocked by the House Rules Committee last summer, has been reintroduced and referred to the Judiciary Committee. It is the latest plan for allowing the District national representation and possibly some form of self-government.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, has reoffered his bill to authorize a study of the feasibility of building railroad and truck tunnels under the Potomac River between Washington and Arlington County.

Among other District bills reintroduced are proposals to give watchmen at the National Zoo status of policemen, to amend the 1903 law relative to the licensing of hackers, and to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad to build a side track underpass across New York Avenue Northeast.

Blow Torch Explodes, Plumber Near Death

Alfred Foster, 48, of 3501 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, was near death in Emergency Hospital last night of burns suffered when a blow torch exploded yesterday. Two others also were burned.

A plumber, Foster was working in the kitchen at the home of Maj. Arthur C. Newman, colored, retired District National Guardsman, at 504 T Street Northwest.

Mrs. Beatrice Walker, colored, 64, of the T Street address, who was in the room, suffered burns to her shoulder and left arm. Maj. Newman was burned on the right arm.

The explosion sprayed Foster with gasoline, and he ran from the house with his clothing aflame. In a garage he stripped himself, but not before he suffered third-degree burns to his entire body. Doctors said he had little chance to recover.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Six flights up, at 511 Eleventh Street Northwest, is our favorite afternoon spot. Don't let us mislead you, though. The odor there is not exactly that of "Springtime in the Rockies." And if you are inclined to faint at the first whiff of essence of old sweatshirts, you won't like the place.

POVICH

It's the, well, hang-out, of Washington's little prize fight colony. They call it the Huron Athletic Club, but that's just a fancy name for the one big room with its bare walls where main-eventers and preliminary boys workout every day in the week, including Sundays. For them the chief attraction is the regulation ring, with ring posts and punching bags, big and little.

In appearance the place is a throwback to the back room of every preprohibition saloon. But in a virle sort of way it's a picturesque retreat in downtown Washington, particularly if you like the music of bodies being swatted, fellows grunting at their labors and fists playing a tune on the little bag.

On any day you'll find a dozen fighters in the place, the lucky ones signed for a spot on the weekly Turner's Arena card. The bulk of 'em are five buck per round preliminary boys, but there, too, is likely to be seen such comparative big shots as Phil Furr, who has earned as much as $2,000 for a single fight and is properly envied by the kids with dreams of a $150 down payment on a flashy roadster.

There isn't any color line at the Huron A. C. The boys rate themselves strictly on their fighting abilities. In the same ring, when it isn't being given over to a particular session, you'll find white boys and black, Cubans, Puerto Ricans and Filipinos. The suspicion always has been, anyway, that color lines in the prize fight business are drawn by promoters, not by the fighters.

For the past week, the ambitious young preliminary boys have been actually gaping at what has been going on at the Huron A. C. A champ has been working out there—to them a real live champion of the world, as personified by Ken Overlin, holder of the middleweight title. Overlin with no fights in sight, is training because most fighters like to train. And he doesn't lack for sparring partners. All of the motley gang at the Huron want to spar with him because they want to be able to say they were in the ring with the world champion.

Overlin, who has come to be something of a philosopher of the prize ring, was saying that a boxer passes through three separate stages during his career. "The first thing he wants," said Overlin, "is to earn enough money to buy a car. Then he wants to make enough money to get married. Then after he has banged around in the ring for a few years, he wants to get himself a protege. He loves to teach some kid all he knows."

At that moment, Overlin's last observation was being borne out completely. Over in a corner of the ring, Phil Furr halted his own workout to take a 145-pound lad in charge. "Never be satisfied with jabbing once, jab at least twice," Furr was saying. "Let me see you jab, then hook and then uppercut one-two-three, just like that."

The boy dutifully jabbed and hooked, then he asked Furr, "what kind of an uppercut, right or left?"

"Remember Sonny," said Furr pontifically, "there's only one kind of uppercut—a right. Anything you do with your left hand when you're not jabbing is a hook. That's what you'll learn after you've been in this business a few years." Furr was obviously pleased by his own oration.

Overlin grinned. "That's what I mean," he said, nodding toward Furr. "After you're in this business for a few years you want to start teaching it. Just as soon as you get around young fighters you begin to feel like an authority. That goes for every fighter who has had more than a dozen bouts."

They love Overlin down at the Huron A. C. Maybe it's because he personifies all that they'd like to be—world champion, owner of all the tricks in the trade, never rattled when he's against the ropes, able to shoot a punch on or off balance and clever enough to duck almost anything he doesn't want to get hit with.

"Don't ever get licked by one of these guys who tries to bore in and butt you with his head," Overlin was telling a colored lightweight who was in the ring with him. "There's a way to beat that kind. When he starts to butt, just pull him toward you—the dumb guy has his head down and can't see what you're doing—and then step back and bust him with everything you can put into a wide uppercut. He'll quit butting."

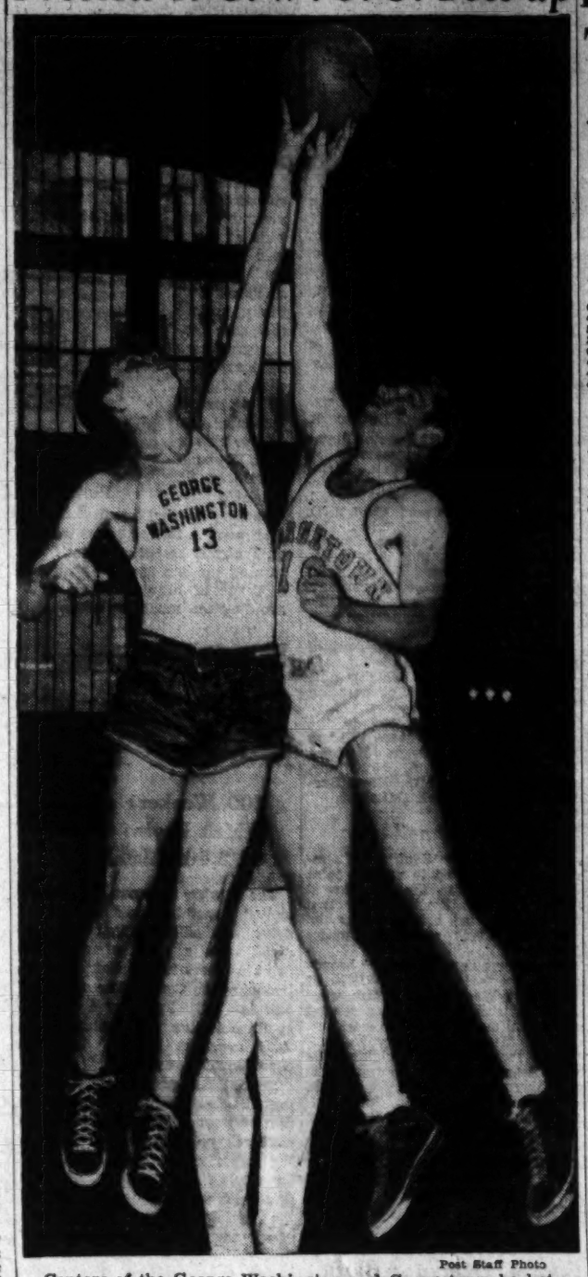

Overlin was clowning. "Hit me on the chin and I'll show you how to go down." Overlin was promptly hit on the chin and gracefully took a rolling dive to the floor. On the canvas, he propped his chin on one hand and grinned. "That's the dive I used to save for the last round against the local prides I used to fight before I got to be the champ. I'd beat those local yokels for nine rounds in a ten-round bout and then take this kind of a dive for 'em in the tenth. I wouldn't stay down long enough to lose the decision, but they would always demand a rematch and it meant one more fight for me when fights were scarce."

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

They're at it again tonight folks, the boys from Tewenty-first Street against the lads from Hilltop, or you may know them better as George Washington and Georgetown Universities which meet on Riverside Stadium's basketball court at 8:30 p. m.

Two well drilled and experienced teams, with only one sophomore in the combined staring line-ups are set for the intracity clash that will be preceded at 7:15 by the annual meeting between the undefeated freshmen squads.

City-wide interest in the game and the advance sale of reserved seats speaks for a capacity house and thus the largest crowd ever to see a basketball game in the District. With the temporary seats that are erected for college games, the stadium will hold 5,300.

G. W.'ll Have to Pay

Tonight's tilt will be Georgetown's home game and thus George Washington students will have to pay. The second meeting on March 5 will be the Colonials' home attraction.

The game tonight will also be the medium of the pioneer broadcast of college basketball in Washington. By special arrangement, Station WINX will put a play-by-play account of the game on the air, with George Gow at the microphone. On the air also will be the George Washington U. student band, which will play during the time outs and between periods.

Both clubs will answer the opening whistle with four-game winning streaks. The G. W.'s boast a slightly better record over the season's play, six victories in seven starts against four out of five for the Ripleymen.

With college basketball on the upgrade due to the new playing site and the crack teams that are benig produced by Coaches Reinhart and Ripley, tonight's clash will be the test to see if the rivalry will bring back the full houses.

Coach Bill Reinhart is expected to make a change from his usual starting line-up, and start Eddie Amendola, the senior from Corona, Long Island, who has filled reserve capacities in the past. Amendola was the leading scorer against Duke and Kansas State, although he did not start either game, and he also came through with a good performance against Minnesota. He will probably replace Charley Jones.

Gieble in G. U. Line-up

Amendola's forward partner will be Matt Zunic, the District's leading scorer, who has totaled 80 points in seven games. Joe Comer, the former Roosevelt High star who held a hot hand against the Hoyas last year, will start at center, while hte guards will be Reinhart's short but capable duo of Bobby Gilham and Lou Veltri, the former ranked by many as the best ball player in town.

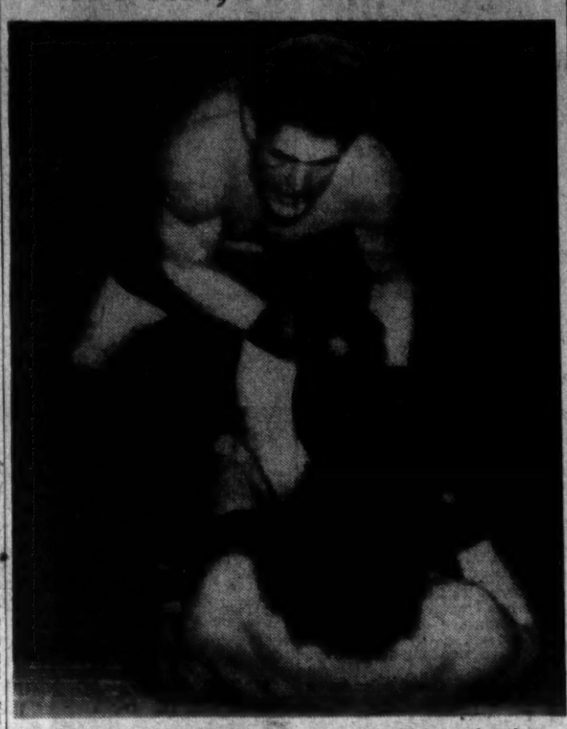

The Hoyas will also have one local boy in the starting line-up, Jim Giebel, the 6-foot-2 St. John's graduate who will pair off at forward with Jim Kiernan, of Albany, who in the Hoyas' last game against Canisius dropped 22 points for what one sports writer called one of the greatest one-man shows in Buffalo court history.

Bill Bornheimer, the 6-4 sophomore, who has given Georgetown its winning punch in three games, will be at center, while the G. U. guards will be Buddy O'Grady and Irving Rizzi. The latter, captain of the team, led Georgetown's winning rally over the Colonials in the second game of their rivalry last season.

The teams are about evenly matched in reserve strength with

Detroit Battler Hits Floor in 2d Round; Unanimous Verdict Turned In

By Al Hailey
Post Staff Writer

Phil Furr, Washington's perennial comeback campaigner who hasn't knocked anybody out in his last two or three comebacks, almost accomplished that amazing feat last night at Turner's arena but finally had to be satisfied with an 8-round decision.

As early as the second, he had Detroit's Gene Molnar wishing he had never left the Motor City and reeling around the ring on rubbary legs made that way by a stinging right high on his left jaw and a whistling left hook which had sent him dizzily to the canvas early in the round.

But Gene, whose handlers had to flag him down at the end of each round in order to help him find his corner, staged an uncanny comeback and managed to last out the eight rounds while 1,800 fans alternately screamed for a knockout or for Referee Eddie LaFond to halt the business.

Took the Works

Molnar, at 152, took everything the slightly overweight Washingtonian had to offer, and Philbert had to be satisfied with a unanimous verdict.

It was a sadly inept Molnar who faced fearless Phil in what was billed as the "main event" on Promoter Joe Turner's all-star program of four eight-rounders.

But if Gene was badly equipped it made no difference, for fearless Phil just couldn't find enough stuff to hit him with to finish him, although he had him at his mercy the greater part of the time.

The Detroiter was no good after Philbert pumped home that right hand to the head in the second. He did a "shuffle off to Buffalo" dance across the ring. Phil caught up with him, drove him back into the opposite ropes, took careful aim and then shot a stunning left hook to Gene's exposed chin.

Down on Knees

Gene slithered crazily back into the ropes and sank slowly to his knees. By the time he regained some knowledge of the fact that he had been hit, the count had reached six.

Furr then lost his entire sense of direction and spent the remainder of the night either looping his arms harmlessly around the Detroiter's neck or landing ineffectual punches to Molnar's cast-iron jaw and head.

Gene did a bit of comebacking himself after surviving the near-knockout and even raised a small mouse under Phil's right eye in the fourth round. Phil, getting more careless all the time, twice bounced off the ropes into Molnar's wild, looping right, and Philbert's timing was so bad that three times he shot blows that were low.

In what amounted to the semi-final on the night's card, Irish Jimmy Webb, St. Louis light-heavyweight, knocked out "Praying Al" Stephany, New York 175-pounder, in 2 minutes 5 seconds of the second round of their scheduled eight.

Al seemed to be wishing fervently he were anywhere but in the same ring with the lad Mike Jacobs has nominated for a part in ironing out the light-heavyweight championship muddle, and in the first round he saw one of Jimmy's death-dealing rights coming and sank to his knees before it landed just to think it over for nine seconds.

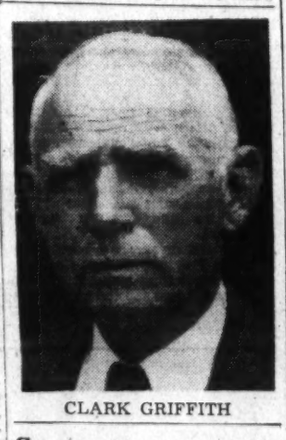

In the second round, Jimmy

Griffith Is Reelected President of Nat Club

A 22-year-old custom was observed by the stockholders of the Washington Baseball Club yesterday when they reelected Clark C. Griffith as president; William Richardson as vice president, and Edward B. Eynon, jr. as secretary-treasurer.

Whereupon, the newly reelected officers who also comprise the club's board of directors, revived an old custom of their own and declared a 10 per cent dividend on the stock.

CLARK GRIFFITH

The team's earnings for the 1940 season were not publicly announced but President Griffith stated that "we showed a little profit on the year." Griffith pointed out that the 10 per cent dividend declared was not indicative of large earnings.

"Our team is capitalized for only $200,000 and thus the entire dividend amounted to only $20,000," he said. "It is the first time since 1938 that we have declared a dividend."

"Fancy Price"

The purchase of a pitcher by the Nats was also announced by Griffith. He is Hardin Cathey, jr., 20-year-old left-hander who was bought from the Chattanooga club. "We paid a fancy price for him," said Griffith.

Cathey, the property of Chattanooga, has been pitching for two years with the Thomasville, Ga., team in the Georgia-Florida League. His purchase by the Nats is believed to be partly a gesture toward solving the financial problems of the Chattanooga club which is indebted to the extent of $40,000 to the Nats.

"We'd like to see Chattanooga continue under home ownership," said Griffith "and I told the stockholders today that the Washington club would prefer not to take the team back for the indebtedness."

Pitcher Cathey was highly recommended to the Nats by Dale Alexander, manager of the Thomasville club. The old Detroit first baseman formerly was the manager of the Sanford, Fla., team for which Sid Hudson pitched and was among the first to tout Hudson as a big leaguer. Cathey won 19 games and lost 18 last season. He is a young giant of 6 feet 4 inches and 190 pounds and is reputed to have control of a fast ball.

Despite the Nats' seventh-place finish last season, they played to an attendance of only slightly less than 400,000. The club treasury profited approximately $70,000 for rental of the park for football and other activities, but operated its farm system at a loss of $30,000, Griffith revealed.

"The stockholders approved expenditures for a new park for our Charlotte club in the Piedmont League and our purchase of the Greenville franchise in the South Atlantic League," said Griffith. "Our Orlando club in the Florida League operated at a $5,000 loss last season but we are hopeful of developing at least one pitcher from that team who should offset that loss."

The pitchers who have attracted Griffith's attention at Orlando are Joe Beck, a right-hander, and Bill Kennedy, a left-hander. Kennedy received a tryout with the Nats last season. Beck was the Orlando team's leading pitcher last season.

Reds Place 3 on Majors' All-Star Team

Walters, Derringer, McCormick Chosen By Sporting News

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 7.—As befits a world championship team, the Cincinnati Reds placed three players today on the annual all-star major league team picked for the Sporting News by members of the Baseball Writers Association.

Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer, the Reds' masterful pichers, and Frank McCormick, first baseman and the Nation League's most valuable player, were the Cincinnati selections. Ernie Lombardi missed winning the catcher's position by only 10 votes.

The American League champion Detroit Tigers were represented by one player—Hank Greenberg in left field.

Yanks Place Two

The New York Yankees, who placed five men on the team in 1939, when they were world champions, slipped to two—Joe DiMaggio in center field and Joe Gordon at second base, both repeaters. DiMaggio was almost unanimous, getting 301 of a total of 308 votes.

Other all-star choices were Ted William, Boston Red Sox, right field; Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox, shortstop; Stan Hack, Chicago Cubs, third base; Harry Danning, New York Giants, catcher, and Bobby Feller, Cleveland, pitcher. Walters, Feller and Williams were on last year's team.

Close Competition

In addition to Danning's narrow victory over Lombardi, close competition also developed for three other positions.

Gordon nosed out Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox for second base by 15 votes, McCormick beat Johnny Mize of the St. Louis Cardinals by 17, and Appling finished only 20 votes ahead of Lou Boudreau, Cleveland's freshman shortstop.

The all-star lineup of 11 players included six from the American League and five from the National.

Nebraska Rally Tops Kansas Five

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 7 (AP).—Nebraska roared back from a 12-to-13 halftime deficit to take a 33-to-23 victory over Kansas State tonight in the opening Big Six Conference basketball game for both teams.

Nebraska owed its victory to the drive of Don Fitz, lean guard, who scored 10 points in the second half, and flashed a floor game that gave the Huskers control of the ball much of the period. He was the game's high scorer with 12 points. Ably aiding the Scarlet Ace was Forward Sid Held, who dumped in 9 points.

Elizabethtown's Early Lead Erased; Final Period Even

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 7.—Staging a second period rally which netted 20 points, American University went on to nose out the Elizabethan College basketball team 54 to 53 tonight.

Elizabethtown romped into an early lead in the first period, rolling up a 12-to-5 advantage. American rallied and by half time moved out into the lead, 27 to 25.

Playing on even terms throughout the remainder of the game, both teams scored 15 points in the third period, and Elizabethtown one better than their rivals in the final session, 12 to 12.

At no time during the game did either team have an advantage of more than seven points.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 7 (AP).—Connie Mack, 78-year-old president of the Philadelphia Athletics, was a guest of Speaker Elmer J. Kilroy at the opening session of the Pennsylvania Legislature today and the occasion made him nervous.

"I don't know why I should feel so nervous today," Mack said in a brief speech to the House of Representatives. "The Yankees are not here."

Tough Card Faces Unbeaten C. U. Boxers

Faced with the prospect of having to rebuild his boxing team, Coach Eddie LaFond yesterday aannounced Catholic University's 1941 schedule—a seven-meet program opening January 25 at Brookland gymnasium with Lock Haven (Pa.) Teachers College.

The Cardinal fighters, undefeated and untied last year and unbeaten in three years, are setting forth on their toughest schedule in the past five years, according to LaFond.

Two newcomers, Southwestern Louisiana Institute and the United States Coast Guard Academy of New London, Conn., are expected to make the 1941 card tougher than last season.

These two replace one of 1940's two matches with Miami (Fla.) University and the well-remembered date with McGill University, of Montreal, Canada.

In addition to the two newcomers and Lock Haven, the Cardinals face Maryland, Columbus, Miami and the University of Florida—the latter two in Coral Gables and Gainesville, Fla.

Main interest in the Cardinal schedule, however, lies in the February 8 date with the University of Maryland at College Park and the February 22 encounter with Columbus University.

The Cardinal-Terrapin rivalry dates back to 1934 when the Marylands won the inaugural match, 5½-2½, but since then the Terps have been able only to hold C. U. to two draws.

Catholic U. fighters and Columbus fighters long have boasted of supremacy, but until last year they had never met in a ring to test out their pronouncements. In the in-

A.A.U. Relents; May Reinstate Football Stars

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 7.—Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, said tonight he would recommend the prompt reinstatement of any players in the New Year's Day East-West football game who communicated a desire to be reinstated as amateurs.

Ferris made the statement after a telephone conversation with William Coffman, of San Francisco, chairman of the Shrine committee which sponsored the game, and said it was predicated on the theory that most of the players were not properly informed of the requirements of the amateur rules.

"Either because they were not interested in competing further as amateurs, or through a misunderstanding of the amateur rules, or through misinformation," Ferris stated, "the football players who engaged in the East-West game, with one exception, failed to comply with the requirements of the amateur rules and thereby automatically rendered themselves ineligible for further amateur competition.

"However, since football is not one of the sports over which the A. A. U. claims jurisdiction, and since the proceeds of the game went to a recognized charity, the disqualified amateur players are eligible for reinstatement at once and I shall so recommend."

Ferris added that the violated rule had been long established.

Jeffra Hurts Hand

Baltimore, Jan. 7 (AP).—Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, the featherweight champion, injured his right hand in his 12-round bout with Billy Speary, of Nanticoke, Pa., last night and will be out of action for about two months. Jeffra won a unanimous decision over Speary in their nontitle bout.

Don MacNeill and Riggs Win Net Openers

National Ranking Stars Not Threatened In Dixie 1st Round

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 7.—Tampa's seventeenth annual Dixie tennis tournament got off to a delayed start today with the top-seeded players showing good form and advancing with little difficulty.

Don MacNeill, national singles champion, paced a strong field in the first round of the tournament which is expected to provide a preview showing of the 1941 national tennis picture. The Oklahoma City star easily disposed of Russell Tarr, of Tampa, 6—0, 6—2.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, ranking No. 2 nationally, advanced into the second round with a 6—2, 6—2, victory over Bobby Doll, 13-year-old Tampa junior champion.

The Nation's No. 3 player, Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., got stiffer competition from Mike O'Brien, of Tampa, former University of Notre Dame star. Kovacs, clawing and smashing, finally showed his superiority to win 6-4, 6-3.

The Kovacs-O'Brien match was one of two played today in the second round, Kovacs having advanced on a bye and O'Brien by default. John Kramer, of East Los Angeles, Calif., seeded No. 4 in the tournament, advanced past the second round by defeating Claude Luke, of Tampa, 6-0, 6-2. In the first round Kramer drew a bye and Luke defeated John Cabot, also of Tampa, 6-2, 6-3.

DIZZY DEAN

Unlike Dean of Old, Pitcher Thanks Cubs For 1941 Contract

By the United Press

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Dizzy Dean, whose ailing right arm cost the Chicago Cubs $185,000 and three players in 1938 and brought three wins and three losses to the club last year, signed his 1941 contract today at his 1940 salary—reportedly $10,000.

The first member of the Cub squad to sign in 1941, Dean inclosed the contract in a letter to General Manager James Gallagher. In the letter, written from Lancaster, Tex., Dean thanked the Cub management "for the fairness and consideration shown me," and reported that he was seeing a doctor regularly and taking daily workouts.

Commenting on receipt of the contract, Gallagher said:

"We're keeping Dean around for color and pep. He operates under his own rules, but I can tell the gang not to follow suit. Dean's our specialty number."

Players Brawl As Hawk Six Trips Rangers

3-2 Victory Gives Chicago Tie for 4th In Riotous Clash

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 7.—The biggest free-for-all hockey fight in Madison Square Garden since the memorable Donnybrook of the New York Rangers and Boston Bruins in the Stanley Cup Series of 1939 interrupted play for ten minutes tonight, thrilled the crowd of 11,125 and brought a lavish issue of penalties.

But it didn't keep the Chicago Blackhawks from carrying away a 3-to-2 victory over the Rangers and moving into a tie for fourth place in the National League.

Five major penalties, two of them to Joe Cooper, the Hawk defense man, were imposed by Referee Bill Stewart. The quarrel started in a first period flare-up when Cooper flattened Phil Watson with a blow to the head with his stick after Watson had elbowed him. Cooper got his first major for that, while Watson drew a minor.

The second period had barely got under way when Art Coulter scored on a long shot, tying the score at 1 to 1, after Cully Dahlstrom had netted in the first period.

Coulter's goal was the signal for a bitter fight. Cooper and Watson came together, first swinging, and Phil Hergesheimer and Coulter quickly joined in. All four men drew majors. The other players who got into the brawl, particularly Bryan Hextall, Murray Patrick and Dahlstrom, escaped without banishment.

The wholesale series of penalties calmed tempers and the rest of the game was devoted to straight hockey. Lynn Patrick gave the Rangers a 2-1 lead while the teams were playing four on a side, but two quick Hawk goals halfway through the last period brought the visitors victory.

Cooper had three stitches taken in his lip after the game.

Smooth Play Marks Battle At Riverside

Two Teams Settle Down to Real Hockey For the Benefit of League Officials

By Jack Munhall

On their good behavior and also in excellent form for the benefit of a representative of the league president who is investigating charges of inefficient officiating, the Washington Eagles last night crushed the New York Rovers, 5-1, at Riverside Stadium.

Before 2,200 paying patrons, including Al Frazin, public address announcer for National League Hockey matches in Madison Square Garden who was representing President Tom Lockhart, jr., the Eagles spotted the Rovers a 1-0 lead and then swept them from the ice. Scoring one goal in the opening session, two in the second and as many in the final, Washington won a victory that tightened its precarious hold on the Eastern Amateur League lead.

No Rough Stuff

Confining their energy to hockey to the exclusion of all the rough stuff that has marked recent matches, the Eagles incurred only two penalties, both minor, during one of the fastest and cleanest exhibitions seen here all season.

The triumph, Washington's sixth in seven current meetings with the 1938-39 champions who this year are struggling to keep out of the cellar, shoved them two full games ahead of the threatening second-place Orioles.

Even without Defenseman Johnny McTeer and Goalie Gordon Hemming who were informed by telegram yesterday of one-match suspensions for their part in the brawl at Atlantic City Saturday night, Washington threw up a well-nigh impregnable defense to check the high-scoring New Yorkers. Jim McCurry was conspicuous on defense for the close-checking Eagles.

Three Eagles Warned

As McTeer and Hemming were told of their suspensions, three other Washington star players—Len Burrage, Paul Corteau and Hal Dewey—were warned for their part in the hectic week-end match with the Sea Gulls and none took any chances last night before the critical eye of Frazin, who will make a report of the doings to President Lockhart.

The five Washington goals fell to as many different players, Roy McBride, Gordon Pranschke, "Rosy" Rossignol, Mike Germann and Norman Burns. New York's only point and the first of the match came early in the opening period on a shot by Jimmy Wilson.

Eagles Go Ahead

Stellar goal keeping by Johnny Fischer enabled the Rovers to hold a 1-1 tie in a particularly fast and clean first period, after New York had opened scoring in the second minute of play.

Wilson sent the visitors ahead at 1:42 on an unassisted goal climaxing 30 seconds of scrimmaging near the Washington goal. His shot, from about 20 feet out, appeared to glance into the net off the skate of an Eagle.

Some five minutes later Washington deadlocked the count when, after Fischer had turned in several fine stops, McBride tallied unassisted on a 20-footer from the left lane. Previously Fischer had robbed Burns and Rossignol of goals by checking their fast and accurate shots.

A Washington goal, made by Pranschke about two minutes before the close of the stanza, was nullified by Referee Harwood, who said an Eagle was in the crease.

Eagles Set Hot Pace

There were no penalties and the roughest incident of the period involved Lineman Pat Riley who was upset into the boards in a collision with 200-pound Ross Knipfel, Eagles' defenseman.

The pace and the Eagles became hotter in the second period and amid much jostling and high sticking, Washington flashed into a 3-1 lead. The officials overlooked all but one foul, New York's Hamilton drawing a two-minute holding penalty.

Smooth passing and deadly shooting accounted for a pair of Eagle goals in the space of one minute. Pranschke, who had been deprived of a goal in the opening session by penalty, authored the hosts' second point on a follow-up of a shot missed by Hal Dewey. Courteau, who worked the puck through the New York defense before sliding it to Dewey also received an assist on the play.

Pranschke Scores

Courteau, crashing through the two Rovers' defensemen, passed to Dewey to his left and Hal continued on, letting fly a shot as he skated past the net. The puck rebounded from the stick of Goalie Fischer and rolled out five feet from the cage. It lay there unclaimed for a moment before Pranschke darted in and blasted his goal from dead center. The time was 7:02.

Schoolboy Cage Champs Gang Up—and It Works

Four Roosevelt High cagers were in this scramble under the Riders' basket, against two from Central, which indicates the score of the interhigh basketball opener yesterday. Roosevelt took a 34-19 decision, to successfully open a defense of its title. Titlists Beat Central, 34-19; Tide Swamps Anacostia by 41-21

Perlo, Schulman Pace Victories Of 1940 Winner, Runner-up; 'Shoving' Incident Marks Vikings' Poor Effort

Presaging another hammer-and-tong battle to the wire, basketball teams of Roosevelt and Eastern High Schools came through their first encounters in the 1941 public school series yesterday with comparative ease.

Roosevelt, defending champion, slapped down a Central five that must have been thinking about something else, 34-19, and Easterns' 1940 runners-up hung a 41-21 beating on an inexperienced but scrappy Anacostia club. Near-capacity crowds watched the two games at the winners' gyms.

Roosevelt Wins

It was the best team on the floor by a mile yesterday, but Roosevelt could hardly brag about that. Central players, with the exception of lanky Center Sam Di Blasi, could do nothing right. The Riders' reasonably fast attack left them helpless and their own offense was something short of terrific.

Without Di Blasi, a three-sport star, the Vikings might have lost by 40 points instead of 15. The angular pivot man scored every one of the team's points in the first half, a total of eight, and appeared the only Viking on the floor with a notion of defense.

A slight shoving incident marked the early seconds of the final period, Di Blasi being the only casualty. He was waved out of action without getting in a blow while the only effective punch was thrown by Roosevelt's Tom Robertson, who was allowed to finish the game.

Perlo Justifies Praise

Bearing out observers who have called him the greatest high school ballplayer in 10 years, Hymie Perlo, the Riders' hawk-like guard, came through in high style. His mates were having trouble finding the ring from close in as the game began, so Hymie went into action from far out.

Taking careful aim while the Central man assigned to guard him was somewhere else, Perlo scored the Riders' first four points as they went into an 8-2 lead at the quarter. Six more points he rang up in the first half and he took credit for missing only one shot during that period.

At halftime the winners were out in front, 20-8, and that was the end of Central. The start of the final period saw it trail by 30-13, and with Di Blasi on the bench, the game was in the bag.

Ciango Good

In addition to Perlo, Roosevelt owed the initial victory in its title defense to Frankie Ciango, the slender "snow bird" artist. Ciango missed numerous cinch shots in the first half but recovered sufficiently in the second to tally 8 points, four less than Perlo, who led the scoring.

A total of 21 fouls were called during the dull battle. Roosevelt made good on 12 of the shots allowed it, missing nine. Central sank 3 one-pointers and missed five.

Eastern Triumphs

To spectators at the East Capitol Street gym, Eastern's club appeared every bit as good as the team which lost by only three points to Roosevelt in the final game of last year's series. Players, however, were slightly disappointed about the outcome.

The Indians of Anacostia, it developed, were the only foe in five White Tide outings to score 20 or more points on the 1939 titlists.

With that exception, the game was everything that Coach Phil Fox, a newcomer to Tide coaching ranks, could have asked. Fourteen players were used against Anacostia, which had previously dropped two decisions, and nine of them contributed to the final score.

Schulman Spark

Behind the clever floor work of its All-Metropolitan star, Moe Schulman, Eastern moved out at the beginning of hostilities to get matters over with as soon as possible. By half-time it had pushed the count to 24-8, and from that point on a steady stream of reserves went into action.

Against these Anacostia had considerable more luck, hanging up 13 points in the last two periods, with big Elmer Leukhardt carrying the load. He amassed 10 points for individual scoring honors of the game, while Eastern's best point makers were Neil Craig, Ritchie Poston and Capone, each of whom registered 7. Mike Lieb, of the winners, and Anacostia's Adams came next with 6 counters apiece.

After one quarter the Tide, finding difficulty solving the Indians' style of defense, was the possessor of but a 10-4 lead. It outscored Anacostia in every period, however, except the third, which ended with Anacostia having tallied 7 points to Eastern's 6. The count was already up to 30-15 favoring Eastern then.

Cawthon Quits As Texas Tech Football Coach

Colorful, Successful Mentor Resigns to Escape De-emphasis

By the Associated Press

Lubbock, Tex., Jan. 7.—Drawlin' Peter Willis Cawthon, maker of winning football teams and one of the most picturesque characters in the coaching profession, resigned today as athletic director and head coach of Texas Tech College to escape a deemphasis movement.

He acted "in the friendliest spirit, and with no disagreements or hard feelings toward anyone," after it became certain college athletic officials were determined to start scheduling minor opponents.

"It just boiled down to the fact that the school wanted to break away from a major schedule and I wanted to keep climbing in my profession," Cawthon said.

President Clifford B. Jones expressed "sincere regret" that Cawthon, and his entire staff, had tendered their resignations.

Cawthon hinted that he had started investigating other coaching jobs, but added that under terms of his contract, he would remain at Tech until August—if needed.

Only two years ago Tech's undefeated, untied team played St. Mary's Galloping Gaels in the Cotton Bowl classic at Dallas and lost, 20-14.

Formerly at Rice Institute and Austin College, Sherman, Tex., Cawthon came to Tech in 1930. His Red Raiders, famed for offensive trickery and massive, charging lines, gave him a record of 79 victories, 28 defeats and 6 ties over the past ten years.

The Cawthon Red Raiders played some of the Nation's outstanding teams from 23 States and became the first Southwest team to fly by plane to intersectional games.

Tie Hurts Wings

Boston, Jan. 7 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings, undefeated in six starts, dropped out of a first place National Hockey League deadlock with Toronto tonight as Boston's crippled Bruins held them to a 1-1 overtime tie before an 11,000 crowd at Boston Garden.

Johns Hopkins Takes Thriller From Wilson

Tannenbaum Flips in Shot in Overtime Battle To Beat Owls, 38-36; Wagner Ties Game

Johns Hopkins won a thrilling victory over Wilson Teachers of Washington at Ritchie Coliseum in College Park tonight as Bub Tannenbaum, Johnny forward, flipped in a two-pointer to top the Wilson five, 38-36, in an overtime battle.

The Johns Hopkins quintet opened with eight points in the first stanza while the Wilson five chalked up only five. At the end of the half the Hapkins floormen were out in front, 19-12, when Bub Tannenbaum sank three field goals in rapid order.

In the second half, the Hopkins second stringers opened and the Wilson outfit quickly moved in front to take up the attack as Charlie Ifshin tossed in a corner shot to give Wilson a 1-point lead, 28-27. From here on out it was a thriller as Bub Tannenbaum matched the Wilson quintet point for point. When the period ended Wilson was in the winning column, 30-27. Charlie Ifshin opened the final session with another field goal as the District five took a 3-point lead. Tannenbaum quickly closed in to cut the lead to a single point and Bill Cole, Wilson guard, once more moved the Teachers in front with a snowbird. As the session closed the Hopkins crew tied the knot at 36-36, when Billy Wagner, captain and star forward for the Johnnies, flipped in a 2-pointer from middle court.

After the overtime period had gone three minutes the Johnnies won as Bob Tannenbaum chalked up his ninth field goal and top the scorers with 18 points and gave Hopkins the victory.

The Wilson five missed two chances to move in front in the overtime sessibn as both Ifshin and Tom Laoke missed foul shots. Charlie Holben was the top scorer for Wilson with eight points, followed by Ifshin, Wilson forward, with seven tallies. In the second session the District pinemen tallied 24 points to 19 for the Baltimore crew.

Schoolboys Held To 4 Points in First Half at College Park

Maryland U's Frosh basketball combine chalked up its second victory in as many starts at College Park last night as the Old Liner Cubs swamped Woodrow Wilson High School, of Washington, 29-14.

The Little Terrapins rolled up a halftime score of 22-4 with the first-string five working as a unit. The second Terp quintet rolled into action also in this period and flipped in ten points to Wilson's five.

Scoring honors were tied between Don Schuerholz and Bill Hillock, with five each. The Wilson five was unable to operate under the basket as the Old Liners played a tight defensive game.

In the final period long shots started to click for the District five as they rolled in eight points in the closing seconds of the game.

Coolidge Quint Trips Briarley By 25-17 Count

Despite considerable difficulty with Briarley Military Academy's zone defense, Calvin Coolidge High five, newest of the District's public school aggregations, hung up the second triumph of its short existence yesterday, 25-17, at the Laurel Armory.

The victory, added to a one-sided margin over Woodward Prep in the opener, further boosted the coaching stock of Julian Colangelo and the playing ability of his young transferees.

Held to a 4-4 score after the first eight minutes, Coolidge put on the pressure in the second period to take its half-time rest with a 12-6 edge. Briarley's most productive period, the third, left Coolidge with a mere 21-16 advantage, but the margin held.

Hollowell's eight points beat out all oppositoin for individual scoring honors, but Briarley's Lodge ran a close second with seven. Next came Dennison, guard of the winners, with six points.

Gonzaga Five Tops Greenbelt

Paced by high-scoring Bob Mulvihill, center, who bagged 12 points, Ganzaga's Eagles swept to a 42-14 victory over Greenbelt yesterday It was Gonzaga's fourth triumph in five starts.

The Greenbelt boys tried desperately to stave off defeat, with Guard Egli doing most of the shooting, but the fast, smooth playing of Mulvihill and Counselman proved to be too much for the lads in green during the first half, the sides retiring at the half with Gonzaga leading 22-6.

Despite the intermission rest the Greenbelt basketeers found Gonzaga too much to cope with in the last half, Bernie Nolan and Franney Counselman keeping the victory ball rolling by their cagey playing. Nolan scored 10 points for Gonzaga.

Hoppe Turns Match Into Utter Rout

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Willie Hoppe turned his three-cushion match with Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, into an utter rout tonight, increasing his lead to 94 points in their four-day battle for the world's championship.

Hoppe defeated Schaefer, 60 to 37, in the night contest, giving the New Yorker a cumulative score of 240 to 146 at the half-way point. This afternoon he won the third block, 60 to 42.

They will play four more blocks of 60 points each, two Wednesday and two more Thursday, but Hoppe's fine form in the first four blocks has converted the engagement into nothing more than an exhibition.

Schaefer, the challenger, got only three points in the first 15 innings tonight while his steady rival was rolling up 17 points. The Cleveland veteran rallied briefly at this stage to pull up to 12-20, but Hoppe then got busy and again doubled the score and won going away.

Terps Pick Ring Line-up for S. C.

Dorr Only Senior Ready for Conference Champs Saturday

Maryland will throw everything but experience into the ring Saturday night at College Park when its boxing team steps up to meet South Carolina, Southern Conference champions, in the second half of a double bill offering Duke versus the Terps in a basketball game in the 8 p. m. opener.

Coach Mike Lombardo yesterday announced that he will be able to produce a fairly well-balanced squad, but that in all liklihood it will be graced by but one senior.

Charley Dorr, 127-pounder who last year understudied Bob Bradley, will be the only senior in the line-up. Dorr fought but one varsity fight last year and won it.

However, Hotsy Alperstein, 145-pound junior, and George Pyles, 165-pound junior, are expected to be ready to go. Both boys carried the load for Maryland last year and are expected to be the standouts on the 1941 squad.

This leaves Maryland with five sophomores on the squad—Judson Lincoln, 120-pounder from St. John's, of Washington, who broke even in two freshmen bouts last year; Pat Quinn, lightweight, from Towson, Md., Catholic High, who didn't fight as a freshman; Fred Bach, 155-pound reserve football halfback from Washington's Tech High, fighting for the first time; Herb Gunther, 175-pounder from Baltimore Poly, who won both his freshman bouts, and Leonard Rodman, 195-pound newcomer from the

Alperstein, Pyles And 5 Sophs to See Initial Md. Action

Pharmacy School in Baltimore.

Lombardo has a couple of reserves in Rowan Scarborough, a senior 135-pounder from Baltimore, and Bob Miller, of Hyattsville, who has shown promise in the 155-pound division. Scarborough, however, has been bothered by bad hands and feet.

It was announced yesterday that Virginia Poly has been added to the Maryland boxing schedule for a February 22 match in College Park. This date was arranged after it was learned that the Southern Conference boxing tourney at Columbia, S. C., will be held on February 28-March 1. The match is the seventh scheduled by the fighting Terrapins.

Williamstown Wins Feature of Closing Tropical Park Card

Takes Fourth Race of Meet; Pays $8.30

10,000 Brave Threat Of Rain to See End Of 16-Day Event as Favorites Are Upset

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 7.—Williamstown, a heavily campaigned gelding from Jake Freedman's barn, which seems to thrive on racing, was the equine hero of the getaway card here this afternoon. The St. James 4-year-old, which won 8 of his 27 outings in 1940, chalked up his third triumph in four attempts at the meeting when he led home eight rivals in the featured Ocala Purse, a 6-furlong dash decided over a slow track.

Well handled by Apprentice Willie Emery, Williamstown registered by a length and returned $8.30 for $2, completing his trip in 1:12 2-5. Hi Gold, representing J. A. Kinard, jr., barely saved the place by a head from E. D. Shaffer's Summer Time, a long shot. Close to 10,000 fans braved an early threat of more rain to see the 16-day meeting wind up. Old Sol was in evidence after the first few events.

Flying Lill, by finishing seventh, proved the fifth straight losing choice on the card.

Has Early Foot

Hi Gold had the early foot of the field. The colt first disposed of Sky Argo. Williamstown became the contender after a quarter mile, Emery shooting that fellow up on the outside along the backstretch. The consistent sprinter wore Hi Gold down in a hard drive and was going away in the final strides. Hi Gold, Summer Time, Sky Argo and Don Moss were bunched in that order behind the winner.

Bailiwick, $16.40, beat Dizzy B. a length and a half for the last purse. Grey Doll was third.

Apprentice Willie Emery also chalked up a double as a result of his streamlined victory astride Grand Duke, 3-to-1 favorite in the seventh contest. Autograph trailed the victor by a length while holding a length and a half margin over Old River for second money. Emery nursed Grand Duke along in front of his 11 rivals, saving enough for the hard drive through the stretch as Autograph made a futile bid.

Yantis Wins

Apprentice Knisley earned a double and the talent finally collected when Yantis, paying $7, easily accounted for the sixth purse. Merrily San followed the favorite home, three lengths back and five in advance of Flying Breeze. The latter, one of the rank outsiders, sprinted into a commanding early lead. He faltered badly, however, leaving Yantis and Merrily San to fight it out. Yantis drew out without much effort in the stretch run.

The stewards recommended to the State racing commission that Apprentice S. Parise be suspended 10 days for crossing over too fast from the outside on Boredom in the third race.

GOLD MESH, rated in front under slight restraint, had something in reserve when straightened into the stretch and drew out. HAPPY LARK worked his way forwardly steadily and wore FAIR TIME down in the final drive. The latter broke tardily and was rushed into contention rapidly the first 3 furlongs, but faltered from his early effort.

Daily Double, JAW BREAKER and GOLD MESH, Paid $102.40

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:08¼. Winner, Godfrey Preece, sr's, b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEE SCOT, $15.00, $5.90, $4.30; LEWISTOWN, $3.50, $3.10; FINANCIAL, $5.90.

WEE SCOT, responding to vigorous pressure the last quarter mile, got up in the last stride. LEWISTOWN, nearest in pursuit of the leader in the early stages, drew out through the stretch, but was unable to withstand the winner's bid. FINANCIAL, buffeted about early, finished fast when clear.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:37½. Winner, Mrs. J. Freedman's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEX HYGRO, $13.80, $6.30, $5.00; DAWN PORTAGE, $5.20, $4.20; RED MANTILLA, $7.60.

TEX HYGRO gained gradually on the outside leaving the backstretch and shook off DAWN PORTAGE after a hard drive through the stretch. DAWN PORTAGE secured clear passage on the outside, took a short lead through the stretch, but was not equal to the winner in the final drive. RED MANTILLA broke fast and showed the most speed, but faltered in the final furlong.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:06. Winner, J. Freedman's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILLIAMSTOWN, $8.30, $4.30, $3.80; HI GOLD, $5.30, $4.00; SUMMER TIME, 10.00.

WILLIAMSTOWN, in the thick of contention throughout, came around the leader entering the stretch and finished gamely to win going away. HI GOLD, always prominent, faltered and just lasted long enough to withstand SUMMER TIME'S bid. The latter, forced wide rounding the turn, closed a big gap through the stretch.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, GOOD.

YANTIS, under restraint early, moved to the leaders rapidly when placed to pressure and drew out in the final furlong. MERRILY SAN, pocketed until midway around the lower turn, saved ground and lasted to be second. FLYING BREEZE, rushed to the front, weakened after going 6 furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:02½. Off 5:02½. Winner, Mrs. A. —At The Post

Dear Al:

Jockey Walter Lee Taylor is going to swing back into action today. I met his agent on Flagler Street last night, and he assured me that Taylor is in the best of shape and ready to go right into the 1941 saddle battles. Taylor's bid for the 1940 honors was clipped when he fell due to a broken stirrup. However, I saw Taylor tossed head first in the mud at Charles Town and that failed to unnerve him, so I guess that tumble at Tropical will mean nothing in his young life. I admire the boy. Why I haven't even held a horse since Clodion bruised my finger at Benning last winter. So much for Taylor. While the racing scene shifts from Tropical to Hialeah. The boys in the office will get a kick out of that. We race writers have been trying to get another word for "shift" for years. But, anyway, the horses will be in action at the other end of town starting today. I haven't had a chance to get out to the track, but the boys tell me the plant never looked better. No freezing weather and no recent hurricans to spoil the beauty of the place. In fact, I never even look at the infield lake, the flamingos, the giant palms and the other parts of the million-dollar face-lifting brothers Widener and Bradley gave the place unless I'm winner. Then, it certainly is a wonderful scene. In fact, Marlboro looks as good to me when I'm 20 bucks ahead down there. Well, Flagler Street wasn't exactly Louisville the night before the Kentucky Derby, but there was a feeling of racing in the air. The regulars were out in front of their hotels (how they keep on making the grade I don't know) discussing the entries. Past performance sheets were selling like hot cakes at Miami Avenue and First Street. I gave the entries a good going over right here on the scene. I wish I could see you all on the rail.

BILL.

First race—This is a grab affair if there ever was one. A limit field of untried juveniles march postward in the first baby race of the year. Your guess is as good as mine, and I'm going to take Treemontier, a youngster with a kind way of working. Yokel has been caught by the clockers in good time and is dangerous. Curious Roman for the show end.

Second race—The Circle M. Ranch appears best suited in this field with its pair of Blue Twink and War Bugle. Blue Twink turned in a brisk trial and appears ready for the question. Sailor King worked well for this and is a threat. Remote Control to take care of the others.

Third race—Blue King may be the right one in this rather open affair. Breaks off the rail and will have Alfred Robertson to do the booting. Marfeu is fit now and will be ready to cause the contention. Votum was third early in the Tropical meeting and deserves attention off that race.

Fourth race—Float Away has plenty of speed and is suited by this long sprint route. Needs only the right handling. O Play is a bit ambitiously placed, but I'm going to give this one an excellent chance. Yes and No for the minor award.

Fifth race—Get Off won his debut at Tropical in good style and appears ready to shift his speed to this track. Looks like the best bet of the day. Cherry Jam should improve off that last and looms as a serious contender. Ringie may take care of the others.

Sixth race—Joe Schenck is a solid fellow and he is reported trained to perfection. He will be running when some of these are stopping, and I'm going to be there for the pay-off. Worked 5 furlongs in 1:00 3-5 for this. Doubt Not is burdened with high weight, but has the speed to be a dangerous factor in the Inaugural Hadnicap. Liberty Fight for the show end.

Seventh race—Rolls Easy, beaten a head in that final appearance at Tropical, may come on to take a race of this kind. The field is ordinary. Steam Roller closed ground last out and is a threat. Erin's Sun is a possibility at a good price.

Eighth race—Radio gets my call in the day's finals. Busy Men did everything asked at one other track and is the one to beat. Miss B. B. for the show.

Best bet—Get Off.

Dozen Coaches Interviewed for Marquette Job

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, Jan. 7.—The Marquette University Board of Athletics continued its search today for a successor to John L. (Paddy) Driscoll whose contract as head football coach was terminated at the end of last season.

About a dozen applicants have been interviewed by the board and it is estimated that nearly as many more will appear. Selection is expected in about a week.

Among those interviewed were Francis Schmidt, recently released by Ohio State; Jimmy Kitts, of Rice; Bunny Oakes of Colorado; Line Coach Tom Gorman of Creighton; Bill Edwards of Western Reserve, and Aldo (Buff) Donelli of Duquesne.

Others mentioned as being considered were Joe Boland, Notre Dame; Dukes Duford, St. Louis; Art Guepe, Virginia; Clarence Munn, Michigan, and Mike Casteel, Arizona.

Hialeah Park Opens 46-Day Meeting Today

$5,000 Inaugural Handicap Is Feature; 15,000 Expected

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 7.—Sumptuous Hialeah Park, a show place in this semitropic playground, opens its gates tomorrow on a 46-day winter race meeting destined for new records.

With the $5,000 added Inaugural Handicap as the opening feature, the racing scene shifts some 15 miles northeastward from Tropical Park, which wound up a highly successful 16-day session today.

Tropical showed more than a $250,000 increase in its wagering, a harbinger of even greater things at Hialeah.

There, in a luxuriant setting of crimson hibiscus, with stately flamingos preening themselves in a palm-dotted infield lake, will be run 13 stake races topped by the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup on closing day, March 1.

A crowd of 15,000 or more, freely sprinkled with socialites and playboys in summer finery, is expected for the opening program.

The 6-furlong Inaugural drew a fast field of 20 including the Emar Stock Farm's Many Stings, winner of the Widner and the $10,000 added McLennan Memorial Handicap here last year.

Top weight of 126 pounds was assigned to Dobut Not, a 5-year-old gelding owned by Mrs. Tilyou Christopher of Miami. W. F. Mannagh's Liberty Flight drew 124 pounds, Joe W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett 123 and Many Stings 119.

The horses will run on a cushiony racing strip reconstructed last summer because the ground had packed to almost concrete hardness.

Among the 1,200 thoroughbreds quartered at the track are three outstanding performers—Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, last year's champion 3-year-old and top money winner at all ages; Warren Wright's Whirlaway, the leading juvenile money-earner, and Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put, king of the distance runners.

Charlie O'Leary, 68, Former Tiger Infielder, Dies

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Charles T. O'Leary, 68, infielder on Detroit's championship baseball teams of 1907-08 and later coach under Miller Huggins and Rogers Hornsby, died here yesterday of peritonitis.

O'Leary broke into the big leagues in 1900 as a shortstop with the White Sox, but later was sent to Des Moines, where he spent three years. Detroit bought him in 1904 and he remained with the Tigers until 1909.

Then he slipped back into the minors, where he spent several seasons, including a short time as manager of the Indianapolis club. Huggins hired him as a coach for the New York Yankees and he stayed there through the regime of Manager Bob Shawkey. Later he served in a similar capacity when Hornsby was manager of the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Browns.

Record Crowd To See Hoyas Meet Colonials

Ripley's first two choices, George Pajak and Ken Engles, while Reinhart has Jones and Joey Gallagher among his capable substitutes.

George Washington holds the edge in the modern series. Two years ago the Colonials upset Georgetown's co-Eastern Intercollegiate Conference champs while last year the teams split even.

Long Shots in Offing

Both clubs present somewhat the same style offense, but for the first time this season local fans probably will see a goodly share of long shots by each team. The Midwestern and Southern teams that have visited have specialized in working the ball in and few long shots, but in Comer and Kiernan, of G. W. and G. U., respectively, the clubs each have pot-shot artists.

Georgetown's band will provide music for the occasion, while if arrangements can be completed the G. W. swing unit will supplement the band portion of the card.

C. U., Maryland, A. U. Hit the Road

Three other local college clubs are active today, all away from home.

Catholic U. will be the underdog as it travels to Annapolis to help open the Navy season. Game time is 4:30 p. m.

Maryland will also play a part in a season's opener as Penn makes its debut in Philadelphia with the Terps providing the opposition.

augural match which was decided in the final bout on the card, the Red Birds won, 4½-3½.

The deciding fight was the outstanding college battle of the year in Washington and saw Turner, C. U.'s knockout artist, go up against tremendous odds for a stirring victory over Columbus' Cohen in a battle which saw both boys taking knockdown after knockdown.

This season marks LaFond's tenth as boxing coach at Brookland, and he's up against it finding replacements for his trio of knockout specialists—Turner, Bingo Stant, 165-pounder, and Joe Bunsa, 155-pounder.

Jules Stanges, who did part-time duty last year as a heavyweight, and Sophomore Bernie Cody are staging a battle for the unlimited spot, and in all likelihood they'll share it this year.

In addition to Stanges, only four veterans will return—Lenny Bartone, 120-pound class; Ted Mandris, 127 pounds; Huck Hughes, 145, and Gerry Strang, 165.

Newcomers around whom LaFond will have to build are Leo Gaffney, lightweight; Jim Haskins, 155-pounder; Leo Houck, lightheavyweight, and Cody, in the heavyweight division with Stanges.

LaFond has compiled an enviable record at C. U. in his nine years of coaching, winning 40 meets, losing 8 and tying 6, for an all-time average of .833.

The complete schedule is as follows: January 25, Lock Haven State Teachers College, at Brookland; February 1, United States Coast Guard Academy, at Brookland; February 8, Maryland University, at College Park; February 15, Southwestern Louisiana Institute, at Brookland; February 22, Columbus University, at Brookland; March 7, Miami University, at Coral Gables, Fla.; March 10, Florida University, at Gainesville, Fla.

Pirate Scout Recovering

Baltimore, Jan. 7 (AP).—Carlton Molesworth, scout for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was reported "doing very well" at Johns Hopkins Hospital today. Molesworth entered the hospital last Wednesday, and underwent an operation yesterday.

Bill Ackerman Outdoors . . .

Michael Lerner, heading the sixth expedition of the American Museum of Natural History that shoved off Tuesday for Tulara, Peru, is always on the lookout for some new fishing activity. Last year, while off the Peruvian and Ecuadorian coasts, he found it was possible to hook and fish with rod and reel the giant sqid found in those waters and that it was as exciting a sport as any angler could ask for.

ACKERMAN

Hardly any angler in this section is unfamiliar with the small squid, native to the Atlantic Coast, but these South American varieties reach a weight of more than a hundred pounds. Their time of greatest activity is at night, when they come to the surface in great numbers. Their presence is probably the reason for the broadbill swordfish and marlin frequenting these waters.

Preparations have been made to gather and ship back to New York in specially constructed tanks specimens of these large squid for further scientific study.

Two bucks a pound for fish is something to talk about, even though it has been estimated the freshwater angler pays twice that amount for all he catches. Yet that is just what Capt. Bud Nichterlein, at Miami Beach, received for the first Allison tuna caught this year.

It weighed 22 pounds and copped the boatman's pool. During Christmas week the first fish of this species is nearly always caught in the Miami area. It is seldom, however, they are so small. Usually they weigh several times that much.

Hollywood, Fla., is blossoming out with a fishing tournament this year, with monthly awards and everything. The prize list is actually half again as much as the greater Miami tournaments started with six years ago.

A second look at most anything is very advisable, particularly if it has anything to do with fishes or fishing. If a patrol plane off the Florida coast had not circled so that the pilot might take a second gander at what appeared to be submarines running just under the surface in formation, we might well have had screaming headlines to the effect that marauder boats were off our coast.

That second close look proved that the boats were nothing more than large finback whales—the slender streamlined member of the family that often grows to near a hundred feet in length.

Of considerable interest to anglers who prefer beach and pier fishing is the opening to anglers of the Miami Beach Million Dollar Pier. There will not be even the small charge made by the Sunny Isles Pier.

The new fishing deck opens at 8 a. m., closes from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m. for cleaning and opens again until 11 p. m. Rest rooms, cleaning tables—everything for the angler is available. We believe it will be a popular spot this winter.

And, it is surprisinf, the size and spieces of marine fishes that are caught off fishing piers. The record for Sunny Isles last winter was two tarpon, each weighing 110 pounds. Sailfish have been hooked, but never landed.

Lou Plummer, Boesch Signed

Paul Boesch, the California Adonis, and "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, the Baltimore villian, were signed yesterday for separate 30-minute scraps on the card featuring Joe Cox and Ernie Dusek.

Boesch, who recently lost a close match to Jim Londos before a record 1940 crowd, has been matched with Jean DeValteau, Canadian. Plummer, anxious for a shot at either Cox or Dusek, will be pitted against Abe Yourist, the husky New York Jewish grappler.

The semiwindup finds Ivan Managoff swapping groans with Chris Zaharias, the little Greek Demon. A newcomer, Jim (Goon) Henry, 6-foot-4 headliner from Texas, will take on Milo (Strong Man) Steinborn.

Reserve Index Of Industrial Output Spurts

December Rate Sets All-Time Top Of 136 Per Cent

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that industrial production had reached an all-time high during December, 1940—equal to 136 per cent of the 1935-1939 average on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Such a level would compare with the previous high of 133 per cent during November, and 129 in October, and would make the 1940 average as a whole 122. By comparison, the board's index showed averages of 108 in 1939, 113 in 1937 and 110 in 1929.

Actual volume of output which usually declines in November and December, the board said in a statement, showed little change during those months of 1940 and was about 7 per cent greater than in the peak reached at the end of 1939.

The board suggested that the industrial production index "should not be taken as a single adequate measure of the economic well being of the Nation," adding:

"Especially over long periods considerable allowance needs to be made, not only for changes in the nature and quality of industrial products, but also for many other developments, including changes in other types of production, in foreign trade, in the size and composition of the population, and in the division of income."

Durable manufactures apparently rose about 5 points to 160 per cent of the 1935-1939 average and nondurable manufacture rose 2 points to 122, while minerals were unchanged at 118, the board said.

For the year as a whole, it said, with 1939 were in metals, machinery and transportation equipment industries, with production larger than for any previous year in most groups. It said that the principal exceptions were lumber, leather and alcoholic beverages.

Buyers Crowd FurnitureMart; Sales Heavier

6,649 Registered For Opening Day In Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 7. — The buyers bought, the sellers grinned happily and enthusiasm pervaded Chicago's double-barreled furniture market today.

Record numbers of buyers checked in the first day, yesterday, and began making their purchases immediately and expansively, officials reported at both the National Home Furnishings Market and the International Home Furnishings Market.

Predictions came from many official sources that this would be the biggest market since before the depression.

Charles Hissel, executive secretary of the Chicago Drapery Manufacturers Association, said, for example, that "this is the biggest show I've seen in 19 years; buyer registration on the curtain and drapery floors is 40 per cent above any other market."

There were 2,349 first-day buyers registered at the Merchandise Mart and 4,300 at the American Furniture Mart, both records. It was estimated some 24,000 would attend both shows during their two weeks' run. A total of 120,000 items were displayed on 3,500,000 square feet of floor space at the two markets.

Merchandise smart officials said there was a general trend toward better quality merchandise. There were larger individual orders, too.

Sears' Sales Hop 16.3% in Month

Chicago, Jan. 7 (AP).—Sears Roebuck & Co. reported today that December sales totaled $95,874,765, compared with $82,427,139 in December, 1939. This was an increase of $13,447,626, or 16.3 per cent.

Sales for the 11 months, February 1, 1940, through December 31, 1940, aggregated $699,336,949, compared with $617,239,861 for the similar period in the previous year, an increase of $82,097,088 or 13.3 per cent.

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 7.—The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported today for 1940 net earnings of $9,555,000 compared with $4,831,000 in 1939.

The earnings included profit of $3,408,000 from sale of U. S. Government securities compared with a profit of $1,262,000 from that source the previous year.

The earnings covered more than three times the dividends paid, which amounted to $3,065,000, about the same as was paid in 1939.

Pullman Company

The Pullman Co. reported a net loss after taxes and air conditioning revenue deferment, of $156,588 from transportation operations for November, 1940, compared to a net loss of $332,015 for the same month a year ago. Net revenue, after taxes and air conditioning revenue ferment, for the 11 months ended November 30, 1940, was $1,943,057, compared with $1,921,641 for the corresponding previous 11 months.

Bell System Adds 949,900 Phones in Year

The net gain in December was 111,100, compared with 80,800 in the like month 1939.

It was estimated that the number of telephones in use in the United States which can be interconnected, including those of the Bell system and several thousand independent telephone companies, was about 21,830,000 at the end of 1940.

Traders Loaf, Stock Prices Hold Steady Pending Presidential Budget Message

By Frederick Gardner
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 7.—After three moderately rising sessions, leading stocks were sidetracked in today's market. Narrow irregularity persisted from the start except for a few strong spots among specialties and senior issues and trends were indefinite at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 44.4.

Dealings were relatively slow, transfers totalling 525,540 shares compared with 720,800 yesterday.

Bullish sentiment still was present in Wall Street but this was diluted to considerable extent by further apprehension over the possibility of this country actively joining the European war and the revival of worries regarding the mounting tax bill which will confront business and industry as well as the wage-earning public.

Some customers lightened accounts pending delivery of the Presidential budget message to Congress tomorrow. This was expected to summarize the costs of home defense and the arming of democracies now battling dictator nations.

Talk of more large blocks of British-owned American scurities being taken over by private syndicates was not as encouraging as it might have been because it was realized these stocks and bonds still would be overhanging the market.

Some hope was seen in reports a Government corporation might be formed to acquire foreign holdings awaiting liquidation and thus relieve pressure on markets generally.

Further thoughts of Government price fixing were aroused by the warning of Defense Commissioner Henderson that if iron and steel scrap dealers did not voluntarily cut tonnage quotations drastic administrative steps would be taken to bring about such reductions.

Isolated share climbers included preferreds of Foster Wheeler and Franklin Simon. The former was up 5 points and the latter 3, both at new 1940-41 peaks.

Modest improvement was retained by Bohn Aluminum, Paramount Pictures, corn products, Consolidated Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, Studebaker, Western Union, American Can, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, Johns-Manville and U. S. Rubber preferred.

On the offside were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, Glenn Martin, Dow Chemical, J. C. Penney, Savage Arms, Westinghouse, Texas Corp., Great Northern, Kennecott and American Telephone.

International Telephone bonds again pushed upward in reflection of the sale of the company's Rumanian properties. Other loans were fairly steady.

Commodities were uneven. Wheat at Chicago was off ⅜ ⅞ of a cent a bushel and corn down ⅛ to ⅝. Cotton was up 25 to 50 cents a bale.

Gainers in the Curb included Creole Petroleum, Master Electric, and Cities Service. On the losing end were Humble Oil, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero and Phoenix Securities. Volume here was around 107,000 shares versus 128,000 Monday.

Auto Industry Boosts Output For 1st Quarter

Makers Now Aim At Production of 1,250,000 Units

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Jan. 7.—The motorcar industry, back in full time production after two weeks of holiday-curtailed operations, has boosted its tentative production on schedules for the year's first quarter, despite a heavy field stock accumulated by the 1,500,000 unit output of the final quarter of 1940.

Manufacturers who had expected a tapering off immediately following this heavy output now are aiming at an aggregate volume for the January-February-March period of 1,250,000. They point out that the schedules are "tentative" because they do not know when the National Defense requirements will force a curtailment of normal plant activity.

Cotton Futures

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Cotton futures reached new highs for the season today in lively trade. Final prices were up 5 to 10 points.

Worth Street cloth dealers said business might have approached 10,000,000 yards. Print clothes were most in demand, but several popular broadcloth numbers came in for attention.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 7 (AP).—Wheat futures suffered the first major price reverses of the year today, losses running as much as a cent a bushel at times, and closing figures for all deliveries were virtually at the session's lowest levels.

Soybeans also suffered setbacks of 4 cents following a steady advance of 16 cents during the past three weeks. Commission house selling brought about the reaction and execution of stop loss orders developed a severe break in a market characterized by some traders as overbought. The close was 3½ cents lower. Virtually all other commodities closed at or near the lowest levels of the day, largely in sympathy with wheat and soybeans.

Wheat finished the day ⅜ to ⅞ cent lower than the previous closing levels; May, 87½; July, 82⅜@82¼; corn was ⅛ to ⅝ off; May, 62⅞@62¾; July, 62¾; oats, ⅛ to ¼ lower; rye, ⅜ down; soybeans, 3½ off, and lard 10 to 15 cents lower.

Boston Wool

Boston, Jan. 7 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Territory wools of the fine and half-blood grades were receiving a broader interest today. A few bids were made, but they were lower than owners were willing to consider. The market on graded territory wools in Boston was quoted nominally on a scoured basis at around $1.02 to $1.05 for French combing fine, 97 cents to $1 for French combing half-blood, 85 to 88 cents for combing three-eighths blood and 80 to 83 cents for combing quarter-blood.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—There was persistent inquiry for staple broadcloth constructions and 80 square print cloth in the textile market today. Substantial yardage was sold today, with prices tending upward. Moderate business was transacted in woolen piece goods and an active demand was reported for rayons for nearby delivery. Silk piece goods was at a standstill.

London Stocks

London, Jan. 7 (AP).—Lack of adequate telephone facilities hampered trade in the securities market today, but prices on the whole showed fresh firmness.

The "City" rated President Roosevelt's message to Congress a favorable influence. Chief exception to the forward trend was the British Government bond list. Currently quoted at around the top levels for the last year or more, profit-taking cut quotations as much as ½ point.

Oils advanced on news of the British military successes in Africa. Non-producers attracted support among steady kaffirs.

Burroughs Rolls High Game of 133

No. 3 Team Entry Wins Honors in Post Meet; Two Tie With 354

Henry Burroughs, No. 3, rolled a 133 high game in The Washington Post meet at Convention Hall, while Whitey Fletcher, No. 5, and Paul Clifford, No. 6, divided the set honors with 354 each. Team No. 11 knocked over 535 pins to take the game, while No. 9 won set after a 1,537 pinfall. No. 1 took the odd game from No. 12 and went into first spot by one contest.

TAKOMA RECREATION

The Electrical League at Takoma Recreation was paced by Bush, Fluorescent Planned Lighting, and Davis, Cameo Appliance, who rolled 149 for game and 403 for set respectively. Davis' highs helped his Cameo boys to two season records for teams; 622 for game and 1,796 for set. The Cameo quintet upped the former by two pins and the latter by a single stick. They also took three games from Bray & Scarff to remain two games in the lead. Noland, Western Electric and Redman & Brown are tied for the runner-up.

ICE PALACE

Mae Diehl, Woodpeckers, had the high game in the Ice Palace ladies' meet, while Mrs. Harvey Cooper, Cardinals, and Margaret Hogan, Mrs. Diehl's teammate, divided the top set honors with 320 each. The Eagles won team high counts with 494-1,437, winning all three from the Wasps, while the Woodpeckers treated the Yellow Jackets in the same manner.

PENN RECREATION

Jack Fowler, Mortgage Corporation, was the standout in the Farm Credit play last night at Penn Recreation, his 143 game and 376 set being top counts. The Purchase team won all three games from opponents and high team totals as well, getting 577 for game and 1,683 for set.

NEW RECREATION

The two Elks leagues rolled last night at New Recreation with Miss Sproufer, Jay Birds, leading the ladies with her top counts of 116-311 which helped her team to highs of 442 and 1,288. In the men's division, Mazars, Stewards, had high game of 150 as King, Antlers, won the set with 356. The Esquires were the best team for game, knocking over 583 pins but the Antlers took the set with 1,641.

The Railroad Retirement Board ladies were led by Helen Aiken, Red Arrows, and Bernadette Ryan, Texans, who rolled 137 for game and 315 for set, respectively. Miss Aiken's top counts were the reasons why her team took highs with 514-1,385, the former mark a season record.

SILVER SPRING

Brunette Mildred Peacock, Sandford's, Inc., was the leading lady in the Maryland-D. C. Ladies' meet at Silver Spring, knocking the pins for a 142 high game and 355 top set which sparked her girls to team highs of 547 and 1,602. Both Sandford's, Inc., and Shaffer Flowers won all three from opponents. Ruth Rothgeb still has high average of 112.

ARCADIA

The Lutheran Church men's loop at Arcadia was paced by Harry Hertz, Keller Memorial, and Al Zanner, St. Paul No. 1, with the former rolling high game of 149 and dividing set honors with the latter with 376 each. The Luther Place lads were best as a team, rolling 615 and 1,694 to top the others.

Belloise T. K. O.'s Kaplan in Second

New York, Jan. 7 (AP).—Steve Belloise, of New York, made a spectacular conquest of Irwin (Kay) Kaplan, of Los Angeles, tonight at the Bronx Coliseum as he started out again on the long trail toward the top of the middleweights.

He battered Kaplan so viciously in the first round that the Californian was unable to answer the bell for the second round of the scheduled 10-rounder. Kaplan was down for a count of nine midway in the round and was on the canvas again when the bell ended the first heat.

Johnnies Bow To G. W. High Again, 27-22

Clift Paces Duplicate Victory With 14 Points; Spiess Stars

Alexandria, Jan. 7.—George Washington High School cagers turned in a repeat performance of their earlier victory over St. John's High, of Washington, here tonight, chalking up another 27-22 victory over the Johnnies in their 1941 home debut before a slim throng of 350 fans. The Johnnies put up a much stiffer battle than was the case in their preholiday meeting, and the Presidents were forced to squelch a desperate fourth-quarter rally by the visitors in order to pull through with a 5-point margin.

Led by Buddy Spiess, the Johnnies pulled to within one point of their rivals midway of the last period, but Leon Chisholm and Amos Clift collaborated in a scoring spree that sent the eventual winners safely out in front as the contest neared a close.

St. Johns held the lead at only one stage of the contest, taking a 3-2 advantage early in the first quarter on Spiess' foul shot, but Clift knotted the count with a charity toss and then dumped in a field goal that gave his team a lead it never relinquished.

Clift was the sparkplug in the G. W. victory, topping its attack with 14 points, and Spiess paced the losers with nine.

In a preliminary tussle, the George Washington junior varsity quint turned back the St. John's Jayvees, 25-13. Higgins led the little Presidents with eight points, while Healy and Harlow tallied five apiece to pace the losers.

Fenske and Mehl, To Meet at Boston

By the Associated Press

Boston, Jan. 7.—Chuck Fenske, the sensation of the 1940 indoor track season, and Walter Mehl, his University of Wisconsin contemporary and barnstorming roommate, will match strides on boards for the first time Saturday night in the Veterans of Foreign Wars' mile feature at the Boston Garden.

The receipt of those two Wisconsin stars' entries filled three of the five starting places Manager John Lane has reserved. The veteran, Gene Venzke, last year's winner, was the first to enter and Lane has hopes that John Munski, of Missouri, who defeated Fenske and Mehl in last week's 4:15.2 Sugar Bowl mile, will be another starter.

Wild Bill McDowell, 150, of Dallas, Tex., had his nonchalance considerably shaken in the night's second eight-rounder and the best he could do with Richmond's determined veteran campaigner, Joey Spangler, 148, was to earn a draw, thus setting the stage for a return bout and more sheckels for each battler.

Wild Willie started out in his usual style of clowning and taking life easy in the ring, but Spangler's bull rushes and his looping right hand soon brought Willie down to business. In the third round he floored Joey for no count when Joey ran into a straight left and again in the fifth when he shot a right into Joey's jaw.

Spangler, however, pushed the fight all the way and several times had McDowell in trouble with punishing rights to the midsection and jaw. Wild Willie finished the bout wearing a small cut under his lift eye.

Billy Banks, Washington's colored featherweight, at 128, had a tough time of it for four rounds with Ricardo Celementi, 122-pound Filipino, but finally found the range and technically knocked Ricardo out in 2 minutes 17 seconds of the fifth round of their scheduled 8 rounder.

In the curtain raiser, Ray Landis, Furr's lightweight protege, punched out a four-round decision over Richmond's Elwood Harris.

Pat Comiskey-Lou Nova Fight Friday Night In Madison Square Garden Is Drama Packed

10-Round Battle Decides Which Moves Ahead or Backs Up

By Whitney Martin

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Jan. 7.—On the surface it's just another 10-round fight, just another headliner on the time-clock schedule of boxing shows Mike Jacobs has lined up to keep the sport and Mike Jacobs around here this winter.

Beneath the surface the Pat Comiskey-Lou Nova bout at the Garden next Friday night drips drama and pathos and all the other elements which are blended when two young men with a common goal meet to decide which will move ahead and which will back up for a fresh start.

The careers of the two young men have much in common. Both are fine physical specimens, who at one time in their respective careers were rated promising aspirants for Joe Louis' title. Each, when apparently on the right track with a green light, ran into a setback which knocked the foundation from his air castle.

The major difference was that Nova was farther along the road when he was wrecked by Tony Galento. Comiskey's reputation had been built on victories over second-raters, and on his first trip on the main line he ran into Max Baer, which was a slight error. Something like stepping into an elevator which isn't there.

Lou in Seclusion

Anyway, they both were removed from the spotlight quite abruptly. Nova remained in seclusion the longer, spending 15 months recovering from a blood infection which he blamed for his inept showing against the round little man.

Both have taken the same method of mending their frayed careers. Comiskey dropped back into the company to which he was accustomed and proceeded to pick up the needed experience only that kind of competition can bring. Nova, after regaining his strength, went up against some trial horse and won handily in a bout which left rather disturbing thought waves.

Now they are both ready to resume their climbs, and at each other's expense. A Nova defeat might remove him permanently from the select circle of title possibilities. His manager, Ray Carlen, has remarked that if his Louie can't beat Comiskey Lou had better hang up his gloves and learn a good trade.

Pat Still an Infant

Comiskey still is an infant, fistically speaking. He might survive another crushing defeat, but it would be certain to put him back to scratch and might curb his enthusiasm to some degree.

Despite the fact that many bouts which have loomed as naturals have turned out to be resounding duds, the Friday bout should fall into the natural category, inasmuch as both fighters realize their immediate future depends on their showing. If the bout is a dud they're both out of the picture.

Comiskey has a terrific right-hand punch, a stabbing but not lethal left. Nova probably can't punch so hard with his right, but his left is more potent. He's more on the punishing, wear-'em-down order.

Experience favors Nova, and we look for that edge to bring him victory, if he has learned to keep his feet in alignment. Louie always looked like his feet were arguing over which direction they should go.

At any rate, he gets our vote to win a bout which should end in at least a technical knockout one way or the other, and if our usual luck holds out it will probably be the other.

O'Conor Offers Record Budget To Legislature

Proposes Reductions In Real Estate And Income Taxes

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 7.—Gov. O'Conor submitted to the Legislature tonight a history-making $106,664,021 biennial budget and proposed simultaneously that sharp reductions be effected in both income and real estate taxes.

In a double-barreled message to the General Assembly, which reconvened here after a four-day recess, the Governor disclosed his fiscal program for 1942 and 1943 contemplated total tax reductions of $5,436,100 despite a $6,241,000 increase in expenditures, compared with the current 1940-41 budget.

The program could be accomplished, he said, through use of approximately $4,237,000 from the State's general fund surplus. At the end of 1943, administration fiscal experts anticipate a surplus of more than $3,000,000 despite the sums used to meet current expenses.

At the end of the next two years, rounding out his term, O'Conor told the assemblymen, he anticipated that Maryland's bonded indebtedness would have been reduced $14,292,000—or about 30 per cent—in the four years.

He proposed that income taxes be reduced up to 20 per cent, in line with recommendations of his special tax revision commission, and that property taxes be reduced from the present rate of 23.35 cents a $100 to 22 cents in 1942 and finally 21 cents in 1943.

"This is made possible in spite of the fact that it is necessary to issue, during the next two years, bonds amounting to $4,172,000 in order to provide necessary construction at the various State institutions and departments," he said.

"The reduction in the real estate tax and in the income tax over the three-year period (1941-42-43) will, to that extent, relieve the taxpayers of the State and thereby ease the burdens of other taxes."

The Governor declared that heavy national defense costs would be felt by Maryland taxpayers during the next biennium and that reductions he proposed in State levies would lessen the anticipated heavier burden of Federal taxes.

U. S. Has Army Of 600,000 Now, Marshall Says

An army worthy of America is on the way, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, told the Nation last night. In a radio interview, he said that more than 600,000 men were in active training.

A little more than a year ago, Gen. Marshall declared, the Army had less than a thousand men in Puerto Rico, only a few hundred in Alaska and no field army at home—"only scattered regiments of the Regular Army, incomplete in numbers, in training, and in many vital items of equipment."

During the last year, he said reinforcements have gone to Hawaii; the troop strength in Panama has more than doubled, Puerto Rico now has a garrison "not of 1,000 but of 12,000, and the lonely group in Alaska has swelled to 3,000."

Saying the Alaska program is a year ahead of schedule, he added: "Throughout the Caribbean region, airfields are being improved and extended. Gasoline and servicing facilities are being installed to provide for any sudden movement of our planes in that area. Next week troops will sail from New York for Newfoundland to garrison our new airbase there."

Southeast Church Council Opens School of Religion

A plea for laymen to accept a larger responsibility in Christian tasks was voiced last night by the Rev. George H. Bennett, as the Southeast Interchurch Council launched its second annual school of religion.

Leading a course on "How to Administer the Program of the Local Church," Mr. Bennett said laymen could find larger avenues of service through evangelism, educational work, social service, stewardship, better church facilities and better church leadership training. He is pastor of Wilson Memorial Methodist Church and Interchurch Council president.

"Misconceptions of God" are very confusing to people today, the Rev. Edward Gabler, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, told his class on "Personal Religious Living." Those misconceptions, he said are that God is a great magician, an indulgent guardian, a stern lawgiver and an impersonal force.

Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association and paleontologist at the Smithsonian Institution, conducted a class in "Ways of Teaching. Other classes were under the leadership of the Rev. Daniel W. Justice, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, and Miss Catherine Lantz, of Foundry Methodist Church.

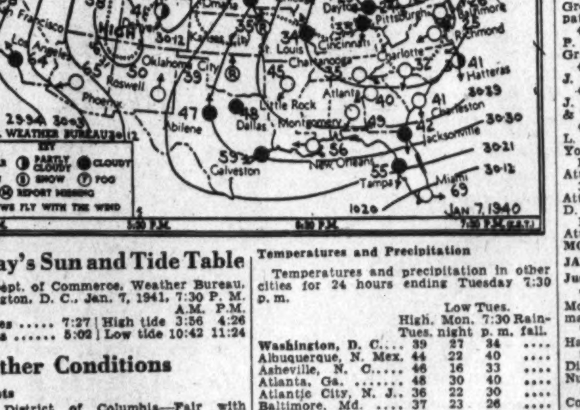

Austrian Saved From Deportation Faces New Trial

New Orleans, Jan. 7 (AP).—Austrian-born Joseph George Strecker, who was saved from deportation as a Communist by the United States Supreme Court in 1939, was arrested today in Hot Springs, Ark.

Acting under the 1940 Alien Act, the United States Immigration Service took the 52-year-old Strecker into custody and placed him on a train for New Orleans, where he will face new deportation proceedings.

"He will be given an administrative hearing before immigration officials here," said Eugene Kessler, director of immigration and naturalization district headquarters, "on charges that as an alien he is a member of the Communist Party, which advocates overthrow of our existing form of government by force and violence, and therefore subject to deportation.

Mrs. Stevens' Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Welfare Leader, 70, Leaves a Brother And Her Husband

Funeral services for Mrs. Cabot Stevens, 70, for years one of Washington's most outstanding civic, welfare and social leaders, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. in Hines' funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. She died Monday in Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Stevens

After the World War, Mrs. Stevens directed the work of the Near East Relief in the District for four years. She once served as president of the Women's Guild of Garfield Hospital.

She also was prominent in the affairs of the George Washington University Hospital, the Y. W. C. A. girls' camp movement, the D. A. R. and the Political Study Club.

A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs. Stevens was educated at the Packer Institute there and founded one of the first day nurseries in New York in Brooklyn's Greenpoint section. She married Mr. Stevens, former Housing Corporation official, when he was connected with the Brooklyn Edison Co. in 1907.

In Washington, they lived for many years at 1516 Webster Street Northwest.

Besides her husband, she leaves a brother, William H. Conklin, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and several nieces and nephews. Burial will be in Brooklyn Friday.

Sen. Tobey Asks Investigation Of Radio and FCC

A broad investigation of the radio industry and the Federal Communications Commission was asked yesterday by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, in a Senate resolution.

Senator Tobey, who turned a hearing on the renomination of Thad H. Brown to the FCC into a partial inquiry into the FCC last summer, proposed that the investigation be conducted by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee or a sub-committee.

Two other bills affecting radio meanwhile were reintroduced in the House.

Representative Peterson (Democrat), of Florida, proposed an amendment of the Communications Act to prevent monopolies or excessive duplication of network programs in any area. The measure would practically bar chain programs from all stations of more than 50 kilowatts power except by special permission.

An amendment to the Communications Act designed to "preserve and protect liberty of expression in radio communication" was introduced by Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Ditter's bill would restrict governmental use of radio frequencies, extend minimum license periods to three years and give licensees greater protection from arbitrary decisions by the FCC.

The Post Radio Time Table

2:30 p. m., WMAL—James' S. Kemper, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, asks the Chicago Association of Commerce "What Is Ahead for America in 1941?"

4:15, WOL—"They're Off" goes the cry at Hialeah and can't you see the flamingoes parading on the infield, can't you feel that sunny, blue air, can't you sense the fortunes that hange in the balance? How long, O Cataline?

7:05, WINX—For the tyro typist, there's no more welcome test than this completely business-like feature, What's Your Speed?

7:30, WRC—Who created the political symbol of the GOP elephant? Thomas Nast. And who the Tammany tiger, the Democratic donkey? Tom Nast, again, me buck, and he comes to life in the person of William Johnstone on Cavalcade of America.

8, WRC—Here's a clew to what may happen in the dim distant future, and justa hint to Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the physician who brought the five Dionnes into the world. He's speaking to the Quiz Kids and why not hope that the day will come when the Dionnes will form a quiz unit?

9, WRC—Garson Kanin, youthful and brilliantly successful film director, helps Eddie Cantor plan the film career hoped for by one Mrs. Flounder.

9:15, WMAL—Mayor LaGuardia and a group of aviation officials attend the opening of the new $5,000,000 airline terminal on New York's Forty-second Street, just where that famous old restaurant used to be.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"I realize you were out of touch with the outside world while you were in Washington, dear, so you probably didn't hear that I was elected secretary of the Parent-Teacher Association!"

Listen!
with Glynn

When Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle asked a contestant on his "Quixie-Doodle" program the other night "How many parallel lines one inch apart can you draw on a blank sheet of paper nine inches long?" he really started something.

The contestant gave up and the Colonel supplied the answer—that one line was all that could be drawn, because after that the second paper wouldn't be blank, would it?

But listeners weren't that easily satisfied and the Colonel has been digging himself out of protesting mail ever since. Most of it argues, maybe with a lot of justice, that it's impossible to draw only one parallel line—that, by definition, you have to have two lines in order to make them parallel.

But, does that logic stop the Colonel? It does not. Where fools merely rush in, Col. Stoopnagle positively catapults.

"Take parallel bars, for instance," argues the Colonel in his usual devastating fashion. "Rip one off and take it out and use it for firewood. Then an hour later you forget you've done it and go back to the gymnasium and say, 'Oh, look!' Only one parallel bar left." Which proves to the Colonel that if there can be one parallel bar, there can also be one parallel line. What can grammarians or mathematicians say to logic like that?!

Someone pointed out to the Colonel that the line could be parallel to the edge of the paper—but that was much too simple for him.

Contract Bridge

Frederick E. Vaille, playing with Morris Schonberg at a duplicate game at the George Washington Hotel, manufactured a top score for the pair by making the underlead to obtain a second ruff and defeat a doubled four-spade contract one trick. Before the underlead could even be conceived, it required a fine opening lead by the partner. Without this skillful cooperation in defense, East would have made an extra trick and his contract as did most of the other East and West pairs.

Schonberg made the especially fine opening of a diamond, basing it upon the fact that the suit had been supported. He held four cards in the suit and the jump overcall by his partner indicated length in hearts, and hence almost certainly a singleton or a void somewhere.

His fondest hopes were realized when Vaille ruffed the opening lead. Now the problem of finding some way to put his partner in so that he might get another ruff was squarely up to him, and with a little study he found the correct answer. He laid down the deuce of heatrs; fortunately found Smith with the ten, and another ruff followed. Later, of course, Schonberg won a trump trick to set the contract one, with two diamond ruffs, a heart and a spade.

D. C. Episcopal Auxiliary Elect Mrs. Heiberg

Member of St. John's Is Named President By Diocesan Women

Mrs. Elvin R. Heiberg, of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, was chosen president of the Diocesan Women's Auxiliary at its annual meeting yesterday at St. Stephen's and the Incarnation Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest. She succeeds Mrs. Guy A. Reber.

Others elected at the meeting, at which the principal speakers were the Right Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, Bishop of Southern Ohio, and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, included the following.

Mrs. Robert M. Eaves, St. Thomas,' vice president for the District of Columbia; Mrs. Marshall Lehman, Grace Church, Woodside, vice president for Montgomery County; Mrs. Waldo Burnside, Pinkney Memorial Church, Hyattsville, vice president for Prince Georges County; Miss Eliza M. Darneille, Sa. John's, Georgetown, recording secretary, and Mrs. George A. Emmons, St. Alban's, treasurer.

Bishop Hobson, in his address, told the women from 60 parishes in Maryland and Washington that the present world crisis offers tremendous opportunities for Christion service.

Bishop Freeman, urging deeper Christian consecration and loyalty, called for support of the Episcopal Church-wide program of raising funds for the relief of British missions which have suffered through the war. The allotment for churches of the Washington Diocese is $7,500.

The auxiliary, at business sessions in the afternoon, adopted a budget of $3,635 for 1941. That will cover pledges to the general church fund, special pledges, operating expenses and other items. The amount they contribute toward the British missions' relief will be separate.

Ministers' Union Opposes Racing

The proposal of Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, to allow horse racing in the District is opposed in a resolution adopted unanimously by the Washington Ministerial Union.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, who with Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, union president, signed the resolution, said last night:

"The civic affairs committee of the Federation and the Ministerial Union have opposed this move every time it has come up. Since Senator Reynolds has announced his intentions in advance, we shall announce our reaction in advance."

Support Mission, Dr. Pruden Urges

Dr. Edward H. Pruden, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, yesterday called for support of the coming National Christian Mission. He spoke over Station WOL.

Speaking during the daily devotional period of the federation, Dr. Pruden read statements from Dr. Jesse M. Bader, citing the results the mission has achieved in other cities in reclaiming church members.

Dr. Guy H. Black will speak today at 2 p. m. at the Federation of Churches Building.

J. J. Murphy, Consul General, Dies at Post in Hamburg

The death of James Joseph Murphy, jr., 53, United States Consul General at Hamburg, Germany, for the last five months and previously chief of the State Department's Consular Commercial Office here for 12 years, was announced yesterday by the State Department.

MR. MURPHY

The announcement said Mr. Murphy died at his post Monday night of complications from a brief illness with meningitis.

The veteran diplomat, a native of Philadelphia, entered the consular service in 1916 after obtaining a law degree from the University of Pennsylvania and practicing law for five years. He was assigned to Genoa that year and later served at Lucerne and Santo Domingo.

Assigned to the State Department May 23, 1928, he was put in charge of the political section of the Consular Commercial Office the following year and was made chief of the office March 24, 1931.

In 1939 he was appointed a class 3 Foreign Service officer, a consul general and a secretary in the diplomatic service. He was assigned to Hamburg as consul general August 2, 1940.

Mr. Murphy represented the State Department at the sixth general congress of the International Chamber of Commerce here in 1931.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Josephine Armstrong Murphy, of 1405 Girard Stret Northwest, and his mother, Mrs. James J. Murphy, of Philadelphia.

Warplanes to Blast 400-Foot Model of City At Air Show

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 7.—The Navy will depart from custom to show its dread dive-bombers in action at Miami's big air show this weekend.

A model city, built to resemble the Miami skyline, will be blown to bits in full view of thousands in the grandstand by nine bombers. The 400-foot long, 25-foot wide canvas and wood model will be rebuilt twice so that the bombing may be carried out on all three days of the thirteenth annual all-American air maneuvers, beginning Friday.

More than 1,000 planes will be brought to Miami for the maneuvers—a mixture of races, contests, exhibitions and acrobatic carnivals. A new feature this year is an aviation exhibit for display of latest air developments.

Richest prize of the maneuvers will go to the winner of the MacFadden trophy race from New York to Miami.

Parity Goal Not Attained, Wickard Says

Secretary Discusses New Proposals With House Committee

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wickard was reported yesterday to have told the House Appropriations Committee that the present farm program could not be expected to produce an income sufficient to bring agriculture into parity with industry.

(The Administration's goal of parity has been aimed at raising the farmer's income to a point where the purchasing power represented in a unit of farm produce would be as great as it was between 1909 and 1914, inclusive.)

Committee members said the Secretary had discussed several new proposals with them, including the income certificate plan, which is similar to the old processing tax, and outright price-fixing. He did not recommend any single substitute for the present soil conservation program.

President Roosevelt, informed legislators said, has decided to include for the first time in his budget recommendations an item of $212,000,000 for farm parity payments. This, they said, would be done in an effort to increase farm income and bring it more into line with rising industrial prices.

But, informed sources said, he will ask for an outright appropriation of only $50,000,000, with the other $162,000,000 to be a contractural authorization. The entire sum, however, would be available for parity payments only at the President's discretion.
